

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. ## P R E F A C E.

IN presenting the present volume to our Subscribers, we have the pleasing satisfaction of finding our cares rewarded by the approbation of the public.

We have had many years' experience in similar undertakings for various other counties, and we have spared neither labour nor expense to secure accuracy in the contents of the present work.

Agents have visited every town, parish, village, and hamlet, in Berkshire and Oxfordshire, and the information by them collected has been compiled with due attention.

To our Subscribers we return our very best thanks, not only for their kind and liberal patronage, but also for their uniform civility to our agents during the progress of the work.

EDWARD CASSEY AND CO.

BERKSHIRE.

---

BERKSHIRE derives its name from a wood, called Barroc, which wood is mentioned among the property of the nuns of Ambresbury, in a charter of King John ; and it is probable that it was somewhere on or near the downs between Wantage and Lambourn, as the other estates mentioned in the same charter are situated in that neighbourhood. Berkshire is a southern inland county, on the south bank of the navigable Thames, which forms its northern boundary mark, and in the valley of which it lies, approaching within twenty miles of London, and situate about midway between the mouth of the Thames at the North Sea and the Bristol Channel. The county is of very irregular shape, with its greatest length of 43 miles from east to west, and with its greatest breadth of 30 miles from north to south at the western end. The Thames divides it on the north from Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire, on the south-east it is bounded by Surrey, on the south by Hampshire, and on the west by Wiltshire. The area is 752 square miles, or 481,280 acres ; and the population in 1831 was 146,234 ; in 1841, 161,759 ; in 1851, 170,065 ; and in 1861, 176,256. The southern part of the county rises to the chalk range, but in the west the oolite begins. The great chalk range runs through the middle of the west to the south of Wallingford, and joins the Chiltern Hills and Marlborough Downs. The Berkshire downs rise at White Horse Hill to 893 feet high. The soil varies from chalk to rich marls, part of the shire being in sheep downs, but the greater part is rich ground on the rivers. There is much woodland, in which grow hazel, oak, ash, beach, and alder. The main river is the Thames, on the north which bears large craft throughout its length to London and the sea, and by canal opens the way to Wiltshire, Bristol, Gloucestershire, Oxford, Birmingham, the Midland Counties, and the North. From the winding of the Thames it has a waterway between Lechlade and Windsor of 110 miles, and passes Oxford, Abingdon, Wallingford, Henley, Marlow, Maidenhead, and Windsor. Among its fish are trout, barbel, pike, eels, carp, tench, chub, roach, dace, crayfish, &c. Between the chalk downs in the west and the Thames runs its feeder, a small river 20 miles long, called the Ock, falling into the Thames at Abingdon. The Kennet is the chief river of South Berks : it rises in Wiltshire, passes by Hungerford, Avington, Kintbury, (Kennetbury), Newbury, where the Lambourn falls in ; it afterwards receives the Emborne or Amburn, and falls into the Thames at Reading. The Kennet is navigable for about 20 miles, from Newbury to Reading; it has some fine trout and other fish. The Loddon rises in Hampshire, and runs through East Berks into the Thames below Reading. Besides the navigation of the Thames and the Kennet, the county is crossed by two canals, the Wilts and Berks in the north, proceeding from Abingdon by Wantage into Wilts, where it joins the Kennet and Avon Canal at Semington; the Kennet and Avon Canal runs through South Berks from Newbury, by Hungerford, into Wilts, and thence by Devizes to Bath, and so by the Avon to Bristol. Berkshire is now well supplied with railway communication. The chief railway is the Great Western, the main line of which enters this county at Maidenhead, and proceeds by Twyford to Reading, which is a principal station, thence by Pangbourne, Stevenston, and so near Wantage and Faringdon to Swindon; it has branch lines open from Didcot by Abingdon to Oxford; from Maidenhead to High Wycombe, through Cookham; from Twyford to Henley; from Slough to Windsor; from Reading to Basingstoke, on the South Western, and from Reading to Hungerford and Devizes, by the Berks and Hants Extension. The Reading, Guildford, and Reigate line, connecting the towns from which it is named, crosses the South Western at Guildford, and joins the South Eastern and Brighton lines near Reigate, thus uniting the town of Reading with the whole of the southern system of railways. The South Western line starts from the same station in Reading as the South Eastern, and passes by Wokingham and Staines, through Richmond, to London. The lines from Oxford to the north also place Reading in direct communication with the northern parts of the kingdom. Berkshire is a healthy county, with a good soil, though the hills run into chalk. The vale of the Thames has very rich ground, particularly meadow, and so have those of the White Horse and the Kennet. Much corn is produced, as also dairy produce and sheep. The orchards and woods are productive. The manufactures are not of importance—some silk, mats, sacking, and sailcloth; though Reading, Newbury, and Abingdon used to be great clothing towns. This trade is reviving at Abingdon. The produce of Berkshire is lime, coarse stone for building, brick-earth, corn, beans, apples, cherries, onions, asparagus, timber, hoops, broomsticks, osiers, cart-horses, calves, butter, pigs, sheep, wool, besides trout and other fish. The shire is divided into twenty hundreds (at Domesday Survey twenty-two). They are Barnesh, in the east; Bray, in the east; Compton, in the midland; Charlton, in the south; Cookham, in the south-east; Faircross, in the midland (formerly Thatcham); Farringdon, in the north-west; Ganfield, in the north-west; Horner (formerly Hornimere) in the north; Lambourn, in the west; Kentbury Eagle, in the south-west midland (formerly Kennetbury and Egley); Moreton (formerly Blewbury), in the north-east; Ock, in the north-east; Reading, in the north-east; Ripplesmere, in the east; Shrivenham, in the north-west; Sunning, in the east; Theale, in the north-east; Wantage, in the midland; Wargrave, in the east. The number of parishes is between 140 and 150, some being partly out of the shire. Berkshire is in the Oxford circuit, and sends three members to Parliament. Abingdon is the nomination town for members of Parliament. The shire towns are Reading for the spring assizes, and Abingdon for the summer. The other market towns are Faringdon, Hungerford, East Ilsley, Lambourn, Maidenhead, Newbury, Reading, Wallingford, Wantage, Windsor, and Wokingham. Reading and Windsor are boroughs, returning two members each; Abingdon and Wallingford are boroughs, returning one member each. The chief towns are Reading and Windsor, which are considerable places, with good public buildings. The other towns are places of a fair size and population. From a Parliamentary return showing the total population, the acreage of land under crops, bare fallow and grass in Great Britain, together with the total number of cattle and sheep in each county, etc., in the year 1866, it appears that in England and Wales, out of a total of  $37\frac{1}{2}$  millions of acres,  $24\frac{1}{2}$  millions are under crops of all kinds; of which 7,920,000 are under cereals, 2,890,000 under green crop, and the rest grass or bare fallow land and permanent meadow. In Scotland, out of a total acreage of 19,639,000 there were 4,158,360 under crops; of which 1,366,540 are under corn, 663,000 under green crops, and the rest bare fallow, under grasses, or in permanent pasture. We take the following extracts relating to Berkshire and adjoining counties.—In the year just ended there were in the county of Berks, which has a total area of 451,910 statute acres, a total acreage under all kinds of crops, bare fallow and grass of 345,206 acres; under corn crops (viz., wheat, barley, oats, rye, beans, and peas) 146,844 acres; under green crops (viz., potatoes, turnips, and swedes, mangold, carrots, cabbage, kohl rabi, rape, vetches, lucerne, and any other crop except clover and grass,) 56,595 acres; under clover and artificial and other grasses under rotation, 37,420 acres; permanent pasture, meadow, or other grass not broken up in rotation (exclusive of hill pastures), 96,264 acres; showing a percentage of corn crops to total acreage under all kinds of crops, bare fallow and grass 42.2. The return also gives the total number of estimated ordinary stock of cattle in the county of Berks as 30,653 showing a proportionate number to every 100 acres under crops, bare fallow and grass, 8.9; and the total number of sheep as returned upon the 5th of March, 1866, as 327,316, giving a proportionate number to every 100 acres under crops, etc., of 94.8. There were also in Berks in 1866 under cultivation, 61,103 acres of wheat; 32,911 of barley; 25,259 of oats; 802 of rye; 14,114 of beans; 5,655 of peas; making a total under corn crops of 146,844 acres. There were also under cultivations 1,020 acres of potatoes; 38,310 of turnips and swedes; 4,265 of mangold; 149 of carrots; 2,392 of cabbage, kohl rabi, and rape; 10,468 of vetches, lucerne, and any other green crops except clover and grass; giving a total under green crops of 56,595. There were also 36 acres of hops; 8,047 of bare fallow or uncropped arable land; 37,420 of clover and artificial grasses; and 96,264 of permanent pasture; thus showing a total of acreage under all kinds of crops bare fallow and grass, in the county of Berks of 345,206 acres. In Oxfordshire, there were 156,338 acres under corn crops, 57,133 acres under green crops, 9 acres on which hops were cultivated, 6,123 acres of bare fallow, or uncropped arable land; of clover, &c., 43,041 acres; and 122,734 acres in pasture and meadow land; making a total of acreage under all kinds of crops, bare fallow and grass, in Oxfordshire, of 385,378; the total area of the county in statute acres is 472,717. In Hampshire, corn crops are cultivated on 260 791 acres, green crops 130,928 acres, hops 2,119 acres; 23,727 acres of the land are fallow, or uncropped; arable, clover, &c., 99,904 acres, and permanent pasture 122,533 acres; making a total of 640,002 acres under all kinds of crops, &c., in Hampshire.

PARLIAMENTARY RETURNS OF THE COUNTY AND BOROUGH OF BERKS.

Pursuant to a motion made by Mr. Hayter in the House of Commons in June, 1867, a return has been issued, showing "the several counties and divisions of counties in England and Wales, and the parliamentary cities and boroughs included in each, and as regards each county or division, and each city or borough therein, the population in 1851 and 1861, and increase or decrease, the gross estimated rental in 1856 and 1865, and increase or decrease, and the number of Members." It appears from this return that the population of the total of the counties (inclusive of the represented boroughs) in England and Wales in 1851 was 17,927,609, in 1861 it was 20,066,224, increase 2,138,615. It further appears that the gross estimated rental in 1856 was £86,073,676, and that in 1865 it was £110,079,308, increase £24,005,632. The total of the number of Members returned for these counties and boroughs was 496. The following is the return for the county and boroughs of Berks:—

Berks .....	125,443	128,590	£764,058	£919,600	3
Abingdon .....	5,954	5,680	14,119	17,028	1
Reading .....	21,456	25,045	84,424	112,704	2
Wallingford .....	8,064	7,794	48,562	54,065	1
Windsor .....	9,596	9,520	35,651	41,708	2
Total of Boroughs ...	45,070	48,039	182,756	228,505	6
Tot. of County (inclusive of represented Boroughs)	170,513	176,629	946,814	1,148,105	9

This total is exclusive of the parish of Bisham, situated in Berks, and comprised in the borough of Great Marlow, Bucks (population, 1861, 665; gross estimated rental, £5,034), and parts of North Hinksey and St. Aldate, in the City of Oxford; population, 722; and inclusive of the parishes of Crowmarsh Gifford, Newnham Murren, and Benson (population, 1768, and gross rental, £11,585), in the borough of Wallingford, but situated in the county of Oxford.

NATURAL HISTORY.

FOSSILS.

This County does not produce any valuable minerals, nor any great variety of extraneous fossils. There is a stratum of sand about two feet thick in a field called Catsgrove, near Reading, in which are large quantities of large oyster shells, lying immediately beneath a stratum of fuller's earth. Woodward observes that the same stratum of sand, with oyster shells, is to be found at various depths from 15 to 25 feet, for two miles on every side of Reading. The same author also mentions echini of several kinds, and a shark's tooth, as found at Catsgrove. Fossil shells of various kinds, and other marine productions are to be seen in great abundance, bedded in the stratum of limestone, which at some distance follows the course of the chalk hills, particularly in the neighbourhood of Faringdon. Woodward mentions anomia, shark's teeth, and part of fishes' found at Faringdon; astroitæ, &c., found at Abingdon. Echini, and other extraneous fossils have also been found near Wokingham. Woodward mentions the thigh bone of an ox dug up in a gravel pit in Windsor park; and moss-earth, and branches of birch trees in the marshes of Windsor Forest. Peat is found in the rase of the river Kennet, for several miles above and below the town of Newbury. The stratum of peat lies at various depths below the surface of the ground, and varies in thickness from one to 8 or 9 feet. Gravel is usually found underneath it. Horns, heads, and bones of various animals have been found in the peat.

There are remarkable stones of a fine siliceous grit, called sarsden stones, or the grey weathers, which are scattered over the Berkshire and Wiltshire downs; they appear to have been removed by some violent concussion of the earth, as they evidently lie in strata to which they do not naturally belong.

RARE PLANTS.

This county does not produce many rare plants. The last edition of Camden gives a short list, but none of them are very rare: among these which occur the least frequently are the salix rubra, myrica gale, and the monotropa hypopythys. Dr Abbot communicated to the editor of the English Botany, the asarum europæum found by himself in the beech-woods between Henley and Maidenhead. The iberis amara is to be found growing abundantly as a weed in the corn fields near Wallingford. The antirrhinum monspessulanum grows on the chalky banks of Henley hill. The lycopodium selago, and the lycopodium inundatum in a bog on Ufton common, and the astragalus glycyphyllos, near Twyford turnpike. The gallanthus nivalis grows in a wild state in Ufton woods, and the euphorbia lathyris is naturalized on several stony banks in the same neighbourhood.

MINERAL SPRINGS.

The only mineral springs of any note in this county are those at Cumner and Sunninghill: the first, a mild carthartic; the other a very weak chalybeate. That at Cumner was formerly of some repute, but has been long disused. There is a strong chalybeate spring called Gorrickswell, in the parish of Wokingham; and some springs near Windsor, of the nature of Epsom waters.

ANCIENT INHABITANTS AND GOVERNMENT.

Camden mentions Berkshire as the seat of the Attrebatii or Attrebates. It is universally allowed that the greater part of the county was anciently inhabited by that people, who are supposed to have been a colony of the Attrebates, in Gaul; but it is the opinion of most antiquaries that the south-eastern, where is now the hundred of Bray, was inhabited by a people called the Bibroci, and a small portion of it, bordering on Hampshire, by the Segontiaci. During the early part of the Roman government, Berkshire formed a part of Britannia Superior; but afterwards, when the kingdom was subdivided, it was included in the district of Britannia Prima. During the Saxon Heptarchy, this county belonged to the kingdom of the West Saxons; and after the whole of Britain became united into one monarchy, it was comprised within the district called West-Saxon-Læge.

HISTORICAL EVENTS.

The earliest mention of any historical fact connected with this county is in the reign of Offa, King of the Mercians, which commenced in the year 758. Offa, having conquered Kinewulf, King of the West Saxons, seized on all the country from Wallingford to Ashbury, which lay between the Ickeneld Street and the Thames.

In the year 871 the Danes, having made an irruption into Wessex, were defeated at Englefield in this county by Earl Athelwolf. After this battle they retreated to Reading, where they entrenched themselves; and, in a sally from that place, made a successful attack on the army of King Ethelred: this skirmish proved fatal to the brave Athelwolf. A few days afterwards was fought the famous battle of Ashdown, in which Ethelred, assisted by Alfred, his brother and illustrious successor, defeated the Danes, killed their king Bacseg, and drove them back to Reading.

Antiquaries have differed much in opinion concerning the site of this battle. Bishop Gibson, in his edition of the Saxon Chronicle, says that some have supposed the Æscedune of that Chronicle to have been Ashenden, in Buckinghamshire; an opinion which certainly has nothing to support it but similarity of name. The learned prelate himself supposed it to have been at Aston, a village in Berkshire, about five miles from Wallingford.

Mr. Wise, supposing the large entrenchment on the downs above Uffington, and another at some distance below, towards the west, to be the editor locus and inferior locus of Asser, who has described this battle more minutely than any other historian, is of opinion that the site of this action was on the downs near Ashbury, where Earl Craven has a seat, called Ashdown Park; and that the figure of the white horse, on the hill near Uffington, was a memorial of the victory.

Camden, and most succeeding antiquaries, have supposed Eddington, near Westbury, in Wiltshire, to have been the Ethandune of the Saxon Chronicle, where Alfred gained a decisive victory over the Danes, in the year 878.

Dr. Beke, the learned Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford, was of opinion that this battle was fought at Eddington, near Hungerford. Alfred's intention appears to have been to surprise the Danes with a force suddenly and unexpectedly collected. Accordingly, the people of Hampshire, Somersetshire, and Wiltshire, having resorted to his standard at Echyrhrestane (afterwards called Brichtrichestone, and now Brixton, in Wiltshire), he set forward the next morning at daybreak—it being the middle of May,—and passed the following night at Eglea, or Iglea, which place he, with great probability, conjectures to have given the name to the hundred of Eglei, situated north of Eddington, and that the next morning he attacked the Danish army by the road from Shefford.

In 1006 the Danes laid waste this country with fire and sword: they burnt Reading, Wallingford, Cholsey, and a great many villages, having marched by way of Æscedune to Cwicchelmslawe. They returned by another route, and obtained a victory over the Saxons near the river Kennet.

The chronicle of Robert Gloucester, speaking of the ravages of the Danes, says:—

“ Meest wo hii dude in Boressyre and up Assesdune,
And so about Quychelmesley, and so in many tounne.”

In 1011, Berkshire was under the dominion of King Ethelred. Swain, King of Denmark, appears to have been at Wallingford in 1012.

During the wars between King Stephen and the friends of the Empress Maud, the castles of Faringdon and Newbury were taken by the royal party. Wallingford was one of the strongest garrisons of the empress, and the place of her retreat when she fled from her enemies at Oxford. It was often besieged by Stephen, who built a fort on the opposite side of the river, to attack it with more effect; but it was defended till the termination of the war by its brave governor, Brien Fitz-Count. The peace which ensued was made beneath its walls: the neighbouring castle of Brightwell, and that of Reading, were, by the treaty then made, given up to Henry, Duke of Normandy.

During Richard's absence in Palestine, his brother John came over from Normandy into England, and seized the castles of Wallingford and Windsor. Windsor was soon re-taken by the king's friends; and afterwards, both castles, pursuant to the articles of a truce, were put into the hands of the Queen Dowager.

In 1213, two amicable meetings were held in this county between King John and his barons: the one at Wallingford, in November; and the other in December, at Reading.

In 1216, Wallingford was fortified by the king, and Windsor was besieged by the barons.

In 1263, Windsor Castle was taken by Simon de Montfort.

In 1389 a temporary reconciliation was effected between King Richard II. and the discontented nobles at Reading, through the mediation of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster.

During the disastrous wars in the seventeenth century, this county was frequently the scene of action between the contending parties. King Charles settled a strong garrison at Wallingford, which continued there as long as the royal party were capable of making any stand, and was not taken till the close of the war, being one of the last garrisons that surrendered.

Windsor was garrisoned by the parliament in October, 1642, and continued in their possession the whole of the war. Prince Rupert once made an unsuccessful attack upon it. The unfortunate monarch spent his last Christmas there as a prisoner. Reading was at first garrisoned by the parliament; but its governor, Harry Marten, quitted it on the approach of the king's army in October, 1642. The king had the headquarters of his horse at Abingdon; and, possessed of Reading as well as Wallingford, commanded the whole of this county, excepting the neighbourhood of Windsor.

In 1643 Reading was taken by the Parliament after a siege of ten days. In September 1643 was fought the first battle of Newbury, in which the Earls of Sunderland and Carnarvon, and accomplished Lord Falkland, lost their lives. Both parties claimed the victory. The Earl of Essex marched after the action towards Reading, where he halted a few days, he then drew off all his forces from that town, which was made a garrison for the king, under the command of Sir Jacob Astley. When King Charles returned to Oxford, after the battle of Newbury, he left a garrison at Donnington Castle, which was bravely defended by its governor, Colonel Boys, during several sieges, and notwithstanding the castle was nearly demolished, and he had at one time to resist the attack of the whole of Essex's army, he maintained his post to the last.

In the spring of 1644, the Parliament became the masters of the whole of Berkshire, excepting the garrison at Wallingford. The King's army having been quartered a month at Newbury, marched to Reading, and after a few days halt dismantled the fortifications, upon which that town was immediately taken possession of by the Parliament. The royal army after quitting Reading held a rendezvous on the Downs, near Compton, and were quartered for some days in Wantage and the neighbouring villages. After this the infantry were ordered to Abingdon, for the purpose of defending that town, but the general quitted it without attempting any resistance on the approach of the Earl of Essex with his army. Abingdon now became a garrison for the Parliament under Col. Browne, and proved a troublesome neighbour to Oxford. Some attempts were made by the royalists to regain it but without success. In October 1644, a second battle was fought near Newbury. The Earl of Essex in his route to Newbury where the king was quartered, marched from Basing through Aldermason, Padworth and Bucklebury. This second battle of Newbury, like the first, was not so decisive but that both parties claimed the victory.

In 1645 Sir Stephen Hawkins made an unsuccessful attempt on the Parliamentary garrison at Abingdon, and Cromwell with the same ill success attacked the king's garrison at Farringdon. The only action which happened in Berkshire in 1646, and the last in that county during the war, was an unsuccessful attack by Prince Rupert, in March.

In the summer of that year Wallingford and Faringdon were surrendered to the Parliament. A slight skirmish at Reading, in December 1688, was the only action, excepting a more trifling affair at Twyford, which took place previous to the revolution which seated the Prince of Orange on the throne of these realms,

MONASTERIES, COLLEGES, AND HOSPITALS.

The Benedictine monks had two great abbeys in this county, Abingdon and Reading, the abbots of which were mitred; a priory at Sandford, near Newbury; and cells at Hurley and Wallingford. The Benedictine nuns had a priory at Bromhale, in Windsor Forest. The Austin canons had priories at Bisham, and at Poley in Chaddlesworth. The Cistercians had a cell at Faringdon. The Knights Hospitallers had preceptories at Bishop and Brimpton. At Seven-ton was an alien priory, subject to the abbey of Bec, in Normandy. Ancient records and historians speak of monasteries at Bradfield, Cholsey, Reading, and Helenstow, in Abingdon, which were destroyed before the Conquest. At Shottesbrook and Wallingford were colleges, both suppressed at the dissolution. The Royal Chapel of St. George at Windsor still remains collegiate. At Abingdon are two ancient hospitals; one of them was refounded in 1533, and the name altered from St. Helen's to Christ Church. There are ancient hospitals at Donnington, Newbury, and Lambourn. Two hospitals at Reading and one at Wallingford were destroyed and suppressed previous to the Reformation. There were hospitals also at Hungerford and Fyfield, which have been long since destroyed.

ROMAN REMAINS.

Traces of Roman buildings have been found in the parish of White Waltham, in Weycockfield, in the parish of Lawrence Waltham, and at a place called Wickham Bushes, near Cæsar's Camp, on Bagshot Heath. Roman bricks, &c., are also said to have been found at Old Windsor. Great quantities of Roman pottery were discovered in 1783, at a farm called the Roundabout, near Bagshot Park, and also at Wickham Bushes, before-mentioned. A large urn, probably Roman, was found in Speen Moor, about one and a half mile west from Newbury, under a tumulus of earth, eight feet high. Roman coins and urns have been found at Lawrence Waltham, St. Leonard's Hill, near Windsor, at Wallingford, at Bagshot Heath, and at Wantage. Stukeley mentions a Roman altar, dedicated to Jupiter, dug up in 1730, at Frilsham, near Speen. It has been said that there are two Roman milestones between Streatley and Aldworth.

ROMAN ROADS AND STATIONS.

Berkshire is traversed by ancient roads, or rather pieces of ancient roads, in many different directions. The most marked Roman road that goes through any part of this county is the great road from Glevum (Gloucester) to London. From Baydon it enters Berkshire, leaving Lambourn and the Sheffords on its left, and Innholmes and Newtown on its right, crosses the turnpike road from Oxford to Hungerford, between the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth milestones, and continues straight till it arrives at Wickham, from which place it goes over Wickham Heath, and falls into the modern high road from Bath to London, near the fifty-eighth milestone, in less than a mile after which it must have reached the station at Speen. The Roman road from Silchester to London passed in all probability through the south-eastern borders of this county, by Park Lane, Stanford, and Finchampstead. The Ikening or Ikeneld Street enters Berkshire by a ford over the Thames at Streatley. Another very old, and perhaps a Roman road, enters the county from Wiltshire, under the name of Portway. It passes near Uffington, Wantage, and Hurdred. Traces of a road are also visible between Wantage and Thatcham, under the name of the Old street. There are two banks and ditches running north and south over Greenham Heath, which some have supposed was part of a Roman road towards Streatley or Wallingford.

CAMPS AND EARTHWORKS.

This county having frequently been the scene of military operations in remote times, exhibits the remains of many ancient camps. It is not an easy matter to determine by what people they have all been formed; it is probable, however, that those of an irregular shape upon the Downs, as Letcombe and Uffington castles, both in very commanding situations, were originally British, and afterwards used by the Romans. The former, which is almost circular, has a double vallum, and encloses an area of nearly 26 acres. The entrenchments and ditches of this camp contain  $8\frac{1}{2}$  acres. Uffington castle, a large camp on White Horse hill, nearly resembles that already described. It is about 700 feet in diameter, from east to west, and 500 from north to south, and is surrounded by a high vallum and a slighter one on the outside. About half a mile north-west of Uffington castle, above the village of Compton Beauchamp, is another camp called Hardwell castle, in form approaching to a square. It is surrounded by a double vallum, except where the ground is so steep as not to require it; the dimensions are about 140 paces by 180. It is probable, from its form, that this camp was the work of the Romans. Roman coins have been found in the neighbourhood.

The vallum which appears to have surrounded the town of Wallingford was unquestionably a Roman work. This vallum is single, and appears to have had a wet ditch, which rendered it very secure.

Near Little Coxwell are the remains of a camp, which appears to have been of a square form. On an elevated spot in Bagshot Heath, near East Hampstead, is a strong camp of an irregular form, following the shape of the hill, commonly called Cæsar's camp, and supposed to be a Roman work. It is about 560 paces in length and 280 in width about the centre of it.

Cherbury Camp, about a mile from Pusey, is oval. Its diameter in the widest part is 310 paces; in the narrowest, 211. It is surrounded by a triple vallum.

On the west side of Ashdown park is a circular camp about 140 paces in diameter, with a single vallum, commonly called Alfred's castle.

Two miles from Faringdon, at a place called Badbury Hill, there is a camp nearly circular, with a strong vallum, probably a Danish work.

On Sinodun Hill, in the parish of Wittenham, near the Roman station of Dorchester, there is a large camp of an irregular form, the vallum of which is very strong, and follows the shape of the hill. Leland says Roman coins have been often found in this place. About half a mile from Little Coxwell, there is a space of 14 acres, called Cole's Pits, in which are 273 pits, for the most part circular, excavated in the sand, the depths of which in general vary from 7 to 22 feet; the diameter is 40 feet. It is supposed they were the habitations or hiding-places of the ancient Britons.

A short distance west of Uffington castle, near the ridgeway leading over the Downs, there is a considerable tumulus, commonly called Wayland Smith, over which are scattered several of the large stones called Sarsden stones, found in that neighbourhood. Three of the largest have a fourth laid on them in the manner of the British cromlechs. It is most probable that this tumulus is British.

Near Uffington castle is also the rude figure of a horse, which gives name to the hill; it is formed by cutting away the turf, and appears to be of great antiquity, and more likely to have been the work of the Britons than, as it has been usually supposed, a memorial for Alfred's victory over the Danes. The figure of a horse, a good deal resembling that on the hill, frequently occurs on the British coins. Just under the White Horse Hill there is a round hill called Dragon Hill, which is supposed to be the tumulus of some British chief. Many tumuli are dispersed on the Berkshire downs, particularly in the way from Uffington to Lambourn, where a group of them are called the Seven Barrows.

MISCELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES.

In digging a grave at Kentbury, in 1762, a large quantity of Saxon coins were found of Edred and Edmund; and on re-building the bridge over the Kennet at Newbury, in 1770, some ancient knives, spoons, English coins, &c. Various antiquities were discovered in the year 1705, at St. Leonard's Hill, near Windsor, consisting of several spear-heads, pieces of a trumpet, a spur, and a bronze lamp. The latter was supposed to be Roman. In digging a grave in the churchyard of St. Mary's, Reading, in 1835, a mass of ancient silver coins were found.

The following is a list of the hundreds in the county, with the parishes contained in each :—

Hundred of Beynhurst—Bisham, Bray, Hurley, Remenham, Shottesbrook, and White Waltham.

Hundred of Charlton—Barkham, Broad Hinton, Earley, Finchamstead, Hartley Dummer, Shinfield, Swallowfield (part of), and Whistley-in-Hurst.

Hundred of Compton—Aldworth, Catmore, Chilton, Compton or Compton Parva, East Ilsley or Market Ilsley, Farnborough, or Farnborough, and West Ilsley.

Hundred of Cookham—Binfield, Cookham, and Sunninghill.

ABINGDON

Is 56 miles west-north-west from London by road and 59 by the Great Western Railway, 25 north-west from Reading, and 6 from Oxford. It is in the hundred of Hormer, union and rural deanery of its own name, arch-deaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford. The town is lighted with gas, and the streets well paved. The town was incorporated in the reign of Queen Mary, A.D. 1557. The corporate body now consists of the mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors.

A Free Grammar school was founded in 1563 by John Royase, citizen and mercer of London, for educating 63 children, natives of Abingdon: it is entitled to five scholarships at Pembroke College, Oxford, and has received further donations, especially from Thomas Teesdale, Esq.: a considerable portion of the school premises has been rebuilt by the corporation, and a handsome dining hall erected by the head master, the Rev. William Allder Strange, D.D.; this school has for many years been in great repute, and many eminent men have here received the rudiments of learning. Here is also a National and British school for children of both sexes. In 1676 Robert Mayott bequeathed property to the corporation for educating poor children in this borough.

There is a Literary and Scientific Institution, and a Philanthropic Institution, held at the King's Head Inn, for the relief of the deserving poor of Abingdon. The monument, erected to the memory of Prince Albert at the County town of Abingdon, in the spacious recreation ground, known as the Albert Park, was inaugurated in June, 1845, by the Earl of Abingdon, Lord Steward of the borough, and Lord Lieutenant of Berks. The design of this monument reflects much credit on the ability of the architect, Mr. Gibbs, of Oxford. It stands upon a commanding site, at the upper side of Albert Park, and can be seen for many miles round. The height is 48 feet; and the width 14 feet at the base, which is quadrangular. The materials are in general, Box stone and red Mansfield stone, the statue and medallions being of Portland stone. The name "Albert" is cut in ornamental letters on the side facing Abingdon, and the monogram "V. R." on the angles. The central shaft is richly ornamented with national emblems, the Arms of Abingdon, and other devices. Above the carved capitals of the columns are four large lions holding the arms of the Queen and the late Prince, quartered in gold and colours. Between these are panels filled with shields bearing the arms of England, those of the borough of Abingdon, those of Lord Abingdon, and others, all of heraldic colours. This portion of the memorial is rich in detail, and very effective. Above the lions is the pedestal on which the statue of his late Royal Highness stands; it is 7 feet 6 inches high. Richard Badwick, Esq., was chairman of the memorial committee.

In the neighbourhood of the town are some very nice nurseries containing a great variety of plants. They are the property of Mr. Alfred Pritchard. A considerable trade was formerly carried on in the manufacture and trade in sailcloth and sackings, but, owing to the competition of the establishments in the North of England and Scotland, this source of employment has materially diminished: carpets are also made, and malting is carried on here. Leland refers to a considerable manufactory of clothing as carried on at Abingdon, and says expressly that the town "standeth by clothing," but this had declined before the time of Queen Mary. The trade in clothing has of late much improved.

There is a pitched market held here every Monday, which is very well attended. There are fairs held on the first Monday in Lent, May 6, June 20th; Lamb fairs, August 5th, September 19th, December 11th; Wool fair, first Monday in July; hiring fair, Monday before old Michaelmas Day; all for cattle except the last which is for hiring servants and pleasure; they are held in the principal streets of the town.

Culham Bridge bears marks of the attack made by General Gage, when the town was held for the Parliament by Colonel Brown.

There are remains of the Abbey, once a magnificent pile: it was restored after the Danish wars, A.D. 955, by Ethelwald, its abbot, afterwards Bishop of Winchester; the monks were of the order of St. Benedict: this was one of the mitred abbeys, and the landed property belonging to the abbot and convent at the Norman Survey was no less than 30 manors in the county of Berks, besides others which they held as lords of the see: the west gate-house, with some remnants of the old buildings, occupied as a brewery by the trustees of the late Miss Spenlove, are all that remain of this once magnificent pile.

Abingdon is divided into two parishes, those of St. Nicholas and St. Helen: CHOLSALL is a hamlet and township about one mile and three-quarters from Abingdon: NORTH COURT is another township and hamlet about one mile from the market place.

St Helen's church is a large Gothic structure, with a handsome spire, nave, chancel, and four side aisles; it is situated near the river; in the interior is a handsome monument to the memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Hawkins and her family, who were benefactors to this town, besides a number of other memorials. Here is also the monument of John Roysse, founder of the Grammar school, consisting of a large stone slab, brought according to his directions, from his garden in London, and from it, as a table, bread is weekly distributed to the poor. The living is a vicarage, value £225, with the sinecure rectory of St. Nicholas, value £27, in the patronage of the Crown.

The church of St. Nicholas is a very ancient structure, partly Norman and partly Gothic: it is said to have been built by Abbot Nicholas, near the outside of the west gate of the Abbey, some time between the years 1289 and 1307: the circular door at the west end, with zigzag ornaments, appears to be of a much earlier date: in the interior is a handsome monument to the memory of John Blacknall, Esq., who was a great benefactor to the town. The duty of the church is in a great measure provided for by a Sunday lectureship, in the gift of Trinity College, Oxford; St. Michael's Church, recently erected in the recreation grounds, is a pretty building.

The Catholic church, which is dedicated to Saint Edmund, is a very handsome building which was commenced in 1857, and finished in 1865, stands a little to the north of Abingdon, at the point, where the roads to Oxford and Radley Park diverge. It is on the Estates of Sir. G. Bowyer, by whose munificence it has been built. The plan is a departure from the customary nave and aisles, having a nave with a south aisle terminating with the Lady Chapel, and on the north side a shorter and double aisle. The interior of the church is lofty and well lighted. A flight of steps raises the chancel considerably above the nave, and gives great and fitting dignity to the sanctuary. The style of the nave and aisles is simple geometrical Gothic, that of the chancel and Lady chapel is elaborate and highly decorated. The choir is on the north side of the chancel. The columns of the nave are cylindrical, in Portland stone. There are some fine stained glass windows in this church. That over the high altar is rich in colouring and very effective. The centre compartment, which is by Hardman, represents Sir. G. Bowyer, in the dress of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, making an offering of the church to the Blessed Virgin and St. Edmund, Archbishop of Canterbury and a native of Abingdon. The four other compartments are by Clayton and Bell, and contain figures of several saints of the order of St. John of Jerusalem. Adjoining the church and connected with it by a handsome cloister, sixty feet long, is the Presbytery, or residence for the priest. It is in the decorated style of the 14th century, and with the church, forms a handsome group of ecclesiastical buildings, which are justly regarded as a great ornament to the town.

The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels here; the Wesleyan chapel is in Ock street.

The town of Abingdon is at the conflux of the Ock and the Thames, and consists of several large streets, diverging from the market-place. The Market House is a fine spacious and handsome building, erected in 1678, with a commodious County Hall, which has lately undergone thorough repair.

The County Gaol is a plain stone building, in Bridge street, erected in 1811, at an expense of £26,000; it includes a chapel and court-house, at which the summer assizes and January and July county sessions are held. The assizes are held alternately at Reading and Abingdon, and the prisoners for trial are conveyed from the one place to the other. The petty sessions for the division are held at Abingdon.

Here are many excellent charities. Sir John Mason, a native of this place, obtained the lands with which it is endowed, and therewith founded the present charity called Christ's Hospital, on the 19th of May, 1553, for the maintenance of fourteen poor men and women, but from the great increase in the revenue of that charity the governors built and endowed eighteen additional houses; each alms person receives 8s. per week, and two nurses 10s. 6d. each, weekly; the hospital consists of a long range of apartments, with cloisters in front, and a turret and dome in the centre, with a handsome hall, containing portraits of the founder and other benefactors to the hospital.

The hospital of St. John the Baptist, without the Abbey gate, against St. Nicholas church, is said by Leland to have been founded by one of the abbots; it is under the government of the corporation, and maintains six poor people: the hospital was rebuilt by the corporation in 1801, Bernard Bedwell, of London, being a liberal contributor; and in 1826 E. Beasley added £600 to its endowments: the inmates receive about 5s. per week.

A third hospital was erected here in 1707 by Charles Twitty, and further endowed with £600 in 1825 by E. Beasley and by J. Bedwell and Samuel Cripps, for the maintenance of three men and three women.

In 1823 F. Klein bequeathed £1,000 for the poor of Abingdon.

Besides the above charities there is a range of almshouses in Ock street, built by the late B. Tomkins, Esq., for Dissenters. Geoffrey Barbour, Sir Peter Besils, and John Houchin were great contributors to building the Abingdon and Culham bridges. John Blacknall, Esq., and Mrs. Elizabeth Hawkins were great benefactors to this parish.

A county court is held here for the district of Abingdon, which comprises the following places:—Appleton, Appleford, Boar's Hill, Besselsleigh, Bayworth, Burcot, Brookhampton, Culham, Cothill, Cholswell, Chiselhampton, Clifton, Drayton (Berks), Drayton (Oxon), Draycott Moor, Eaton, Fyfield, Fyfield Wick, Frilford, Foxcomb Hill, Garford, Kingston Bagpuize, Kennington, Lyford, Littlemoor, Marsh Baldon, Milton, Marsham, Newbridge (Kingston), Nuneham Courtney, Netherton, Radley, Shippon, Sunningwell, Sutton Wick, Steventon, Sutton Courtney, Southmoor, Stadhampton, Sandford Dry (Berks), Sandford Wet (Oxon), Tubney, Toot Baldon, and Wootton.

The Abingdon Union house is a large building, in the form of the letter Y; it cost £8,500. The union comprises the following places:—Appleford, Appleton and Eaton, Bagley Wood, Baldon Marsh (Oxford), Baldon Toot (Oxford), Besselsleigh, Binsey (Oxford), Burcott (Oxford), Chandling's farm, Chiselhampton (Oxford), Cholsall, Clifton Hampden (Oxford), Culham (Berks and Oxford), Cumnor, Draycot Moor, Drayton, Drayton (Oxford), Fulford, Fyfield, Garford, Kennington, Kingston Bagpuize, Littlemore (Oxford), Lyford, Marcham, Milton, Northcourt, North Hinksey, Nuneham Courtney (Oxford), Radley, St. Helen (Abingdon), St. Nicholas (Abingdon), Sandford (Oxford), Seacourt, Shippon, South Hinksey, Stadhampton (Oxford), Steventon, Sunningwell, Sutton Courtney, Sutton Wick, Thrupp and Wick, Tubney, Wootton, and Wytham.

The population of the parishes of St. Helen and St. Nicholas in 1861 was—St. Helen, 5,958; St. Nicholas, 742; the two parishes comprise 3,361 acres.

ALDERMASTON

Is a pleasant village, parish and railway station, 46 miles by rail and 49 by road from London, 10 from Reading, and 9 from Newbury, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford. About  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the village is Aldermaston Wharf, on the river Kennett, where a considerable business is done in timber, &c., also an extensive brewery and malting establishment, the property of W. J. Strange, Esq. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, and stands in the park of D. H. D. Burr, Esq. : it consists of nave, chancel, and a tower, surmounted with a steeple, containing a clock : the pulpit is of finely carved oak, and the east window is of stained glass : in the chapel is a handsome marble tomb with recumbent figures of George Foster and his lady ; there are also monuments in memory of Ralph Congreve, Esq., and others. The living is an unendowed vicarage, in the patronage of Daniel Higford Daval Burr, Esq. Aldermaston Court is a modern mansion in the Tudor-Elizabethan style of architecture, is delightfully situated on an eminence ; the clock tower may be seen at many miles' distance. It is the seat of Daniel Higford Daval Burr, Esq., J.P., who is lord of the manor and owner of the greater portion of the soil. Aldermaston Park is five miles in circumference ; it contains a lake which covers fourteen acres, and other ponds. There are some fine old oaks in the park. The ornamental grounds are very neatly laid out, and kept in nice order under the superintendence of Mr. Elsley, the gardener. Here is a parochial school, supported by subscription. Fairs are held on May 6th and July 7th, for horses and cattle ; October 13th, for horses and pedlery. Near the village is a station on the Hungerford and Devizes branch of the Great Western Railway.

The population in 1861 was 585 ; the acreage is 3,669.

Letters arrive from Reading at 6.40 a.m. ; dispatched at 6 p.m.

ALDWORTH

Is a small village and parish, 12 miles west from Reading, and 47 from London, in the hundred of Compton, union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Peter is an ancient fabric, of Mixed Gothic architecture, with tower, nave, south aisle, and chancel: the interior contains several monuments, on which lie the effigies of the family of De La Beche, which is supposed to have come over to England with William the Norman, and some of whom have been buried in this church; these figures, nine in number, were very much mutilated in Oliver Cromwell's time: the foundation of a castle was laid by this family in the neighbourhood, upon the site of which now stands a farmhouse: in the churchyard is a very ancient yew tree, which measures nine and a half yards round the trunk, and is supposed to be older than the church. The living is a vicarage, annual value £450, with residence, in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel. J. B. Monck, Esq., is lord of the manor of Aldworth, and chief landowner.

The population in 1861 was 275; the area in acres is under 2,000. The soil is chalk and clay, and the crops are wheat, barley, and roots.

APPLEFORD

Is a village and chapelry belonging to Sutton Courtney, but independent of it as relates to its parochial affairs; it is 3 miles south-east from Abingdon, and 55 from London, in the hundred of Ock, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford. The chapel is a plain little old building. The living is a chapelry, annexed to Sutton Courtney vicarage, joint annual value £148, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. Here is a free school endowed by Mr. Edmund Bradstock, who gave a messuage and 36 acres of land in perpetuity for its support; 20 poor boys are taught, 13 out of Sutton and 7 out of Appleford. There is a charity of £11 a year for the poor. Charles Eyston, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

The population in 1861 was 288; the parish contains 843 acres; the soil is green sand and gravel.

APPLETON with EATON.

APPLETON is a parish, in the hundred of Ock, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford, situated about  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-west from Abingdon, and 7 south-west from Oxford, bounded by the Thames on the west. The church of St. Lawrence is a plain structure, with nave, chancel, and square embattled tower containing ten very fine musical bells, which are deservedly much admired. There is an excellent band of change ringers. In the interior are several memorials to the families of the present and former lords of the manor. The living is a rectory, annual value £307, with residence, in the patronage of the President and Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford. The Manor House is supposed to have been built in the reign of Henry II.; it was formerly surrounded by a moat, part of which has lately been filled up. The manor of Appleton was anciently in the possession of the families of Fitz Warine, Caston, Petyt, and Fettyplace; it was purchased of the Hanleys by the ancestors of the late Robert James Southby, Esq. Here is a dissenting chapel and a free school for eight boys, which was endowed in 1604 by Sir R. Fettyplace. There are other charities connected with the parish, producing about £50 per annum.

The population in 1861 was 549; the parish, including the township of EATON, comprises 1977 acres.

ARBORFIELD

Is a small village and parish, 5 miles from Reading, and 3 from Oakingham, in the hundred of Sonning, union of Wokingham, and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Bartholomew is a handsome building, in the Early English style. The chancel windows are of stained glass: there are two memorial windows to members of the Tewgood family: the church was built at a cost of upwards of £4,000, to which Sir William Brown, Bart., of Liverpool, was the principal contributor. The living is a rectory, annual value £388, with residence, in the gift of Lord Braybrooke. Arborfield Hall, the seat of Captain Thomas Hargreaves, J.P., is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Loddon, with park and grounds. There is a mixed National school.

The population in 1861 was 286; the acreage is 1,400. Sir Charles Russell, Bart., is lord of the manor. A portion of the names returned under Arborfield are out of the parish, but the ecclesiastical district of St. Catherine's, Bearwood, is placed here for postal convenience.

ASHBURY, WITH KINGSTONE WINSLOW, IDSTONE, AND ODDSTONE.

THIS parish is in the union of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, and diocese of Oxford, distant 3 miles south-by-east from Shrivenham railway station on the Great Western line,  $8\frac{1}{2}$  from Faringdon, 21 from Newbury, and 74 from London; it is the extreme parish on the north-west of Berkshire, with the hamlet of Kingstone Winslow and the tithings of Oddstone and Idstone annexed, which unitedly extend over an area of 5,300 acres chiefly on the chalk formation. The manor of Ashbury was given by King Edred to the monastery of Glastonbury: after the Dissolution it was granted by Henry VIII. to the family of Essex, of whom it was purchased in 1625, by William Craven afterwards Lord Craven. The church of St. Mary is a fine old cruciform structure, having a broad pinnacled tower at the west end containing a peal of 6 bells: the tower and part of the church is Anglo-Norman, the remainder of a much more modern character; a round-headed arched door-way, now walled up, presents an elaborate study of the Norman style; the interior has undergone considerable alteration and repair; the rectory has been resigned to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the chancel, under their direction, has been substantially repaired and handsomely restored: a few well selected passages from Scripture adorn its walls, an inscription on brass, bearing date 1440, is in memory of the Rev. William Skelton, formerly rector of this parish, and there is another to John de Walden, Esq. The register dates from the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The living is a vicarage, annual value £375, with residence, in the gift of the Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held by the Rev. Henry Miller, M.A., of Magdalen College, Oxford. A National and Sunday school is liberally supported by Lord Craven, the proprietor of the parish, as well as by the subscriptions of the parishioners. It is perhaps worthy of remark that with the Rev. Thomas Stock, curate of this parish, originated in 1777 the Sunday school system of instruction, he having commenced it by collecting together the children of the poor in the chancel: in 1778 he went from Ashbury to Gloucester, where he became acquainted with Mr.

Raikes, who in consequence rendered the most important aid in promoting and establishing these charitable institutions, and which may be regarded as having prepared the way for the National system of education. There is a small Primitive Methodist chapel in the village. In the parish, adjoining Ashdown Park, is a valley containing a large number of huge stones, called "Sarsden Stones;" but, although evidently not in their natural situation, no satisfactory account can be given of them. A spot, now marked by a clump of trees or circular plantation, contains what is considered to be a Druidical remain, called "Wayland Smith," situated about a mile eastward of the village. Several large Sarsden stones, within the memory of man, formed a circle, but some of them were unceremoniously broken up for the repair of the roads; in what was the centre are now to be seen three of the largest, with a fourth laid on the top, after the manner of the British cromlechs. A singular tradition of an invisible blacksmith who shod any horse left within the inclosure, provided a piece of money was left, has been perpetuated by Sir Walter Scott, in his novel of "Kenilworth," and has invested the spot with considerable interest, and renders it a favourite resort of the antiquary and the tourist. On the downs in this parish, there is reason to believe, was fought the great battle between the Saxons and the Danes called the battle of Ashdown, in which the latter were totally defeated, and the important result was that Christianity triumphed over Paganism. Ashdown Park, the seat of the Earl of Craven, is an old stone building, situated in a well wooded park,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles south. The population in 1861 was 742.

KINGSTONE WINSLOW is a small hamlet half a mile north-east. Here is a neat and commodious Baptist Chapel, which was erected by subscription in 1865. The population in 1861 was 146; the acreage is included with Ashbury.

ODSTONE is a tything one mile east, with a population in 1861 of 32.

IDSTONE is also a tything, three-quarters of a mile south-west. The population in 1861 was 142.

ASTON TIRROLD

Is a village and parish, 5 miles south-west from Wallingford, 3 from the Wallingford road station and 48 from London, in the hundred of Moreton, union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael has lately been restored and enlarged by the addition of a north aisle. The living is a rectory, annual value £250, with residence, in the gift of the President and Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held by the Rev. John Leigh Hoskyns, M.A., of Magdalen College, Oxford, and rural dean, instituted 1845. Here is a boys' and girls' school belonging to the Established Church, and a girls' school connected with the Independents, who have a chapel here. The charities amount to about £8 annually, given in money and bread to the poor. Thomas Wellingham Fuller, Esq., (who is lord of the manor), John Fuller, Esq., and Mrs. John Slade are chief landowners.

The population in 1861 was 395; the parish contains 1,674 acres. The soil varies; the crops are chiefly wheat and barley; the soil immediately round the village is celebrated for its apples and cherries.

AVINGTON

Is a parish in the hundred of Kintbury, union of Hungerford, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the river Kennet, about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles east-by north from Hungerford. The manor, in the time of Edward the Confessor, belonged to a family named Gunner; immediately after the Conquest to Richard Puingeant, the supposed founder of the church, then to the Longespees, Earls of Salisbury, who appear to have held it from the reign of Henry II.; at a later period it was in the families of Coventry and Choke; Richard Choke married the heiress of the Coventrys of Avington; his grandson Francis was knighted in 1643: latterly it was in the possession of the Jones family, of Ramsbury Manor; in succession from whom it now belongs to Sir Robert Burdett, Bart. The church of St. Mary was restored chiefly through the exertions of the previous incumbent, the Rev. Robert A. Gordon. It dates from the eleventh century, and is a curious specimen of the Norman style of architecture, with chancel, nave and belfry: the chancel is separated from the nave by an arch of uncommon breadth, richly ornamented with zigzag moulding and grotesque heads, springing from two pilasters, which lean outwards with the walls themselves, owing to the lateral pressure of the arch and the absence of any buttress, either external or internal: to the last named cause may likewise be assigned the incomplete state of the originally projected stone vaulting of the chancel roof, the ribbed groins of which are ornamented with beak-heads and flowers: the south door of the nave is a good example of a shafted Norman arch, with head and dog-tooth ornaments: the font is an ancient circular one, adorned with cable moulding and thirteen rudely sculptured figures in ecclesiastical vestments: the only monuments and escutcheons of importance are those of the Berkshire family of James, at this time represented by Sir Walter James, Bart., of Langley Hall, in this county; the neighbouring estate of Denford having been the residence of this family down to the commencement of the present century from the time of the first Tudor sovereign, during whose reign its previous possessor, Lord Lovell, was attainted of high treason. The benefice is a rectory, annual value £300, with residence, in the patronage of Sir Robert Burdett, Bart. The parish comprises about 1,150 acres, in two farms, the property of Sir Robert Burdett, Bart., who is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 104.

BARKHAM

Is a parish and small village, consisting chiefly of farm-houses, 2 miles south-west from Wokingham, in the hundred of Charlton, union of Wokingham, and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. James was rebuilt in 1862, in the Early English style; it is of flint, with Bath stone dressings.

The living is a rectory, annual value £350, with residence, in the gift of, and held by, the Rev. Arthur Roberts, M.A. There is a small parochial school. The Manor House is a neat mansion, with pleasant grounds and shrubberies, the residence of Mrs. Clive. Leveson Gower, Esq., lord of the manor; John Walters, Esq., and Mrs. Clive, are the chief landowners.

The population in 1861 was 280; the area is 1,050 acres.

BASILDON

Is a village and parish, 8 miles north-west from Reading, and  $42\frac{1}{2}$  from London, in the hundred of Moreton, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford. It is pleasantly situated on the river Thames, which is here crossed by a bridge of four arches, on the line of the Great Western Railway, the erection of which cost £25,000. In excavating for the railway, a beautiful tessellated Roman pavement was discovered a few inches below the surface; and on an elevated spot, not far from the Thames, coins of Vespasian, in good preservation, domestic utensils, and several human skeletons, with a Roman sword lying near them, were found.

The church of St. Bartholomew is an ancient structure, supposed to have been built in the reign of Edward II.: it has a square tower, 4 bells, and a Gothic porch overgrown with ivy; the interior contains some very handsome monuments to the memory of Sir Francis Sykes, Bart., and family, formerly resident here: the eastern window is of stained glass. The living is a vicarage, in the presentation of the Rev. William Sykes, annual value £200, with residence.

Here is a chapel for Dissenters, also a school, which was endowed by Mr. William Allen with £4 and a cottage, for the education of ten poor children. Near the village is Basildon House, formerly the seat of Sir Francis Sykes, Bart., but now the property and in the occupation of Charles Morrison, Esq.: the mansion is modern built, with wings, and portico with Corinthian pillars; the park is very extensive, and the whole is enclosed within a brick wall.

The population in 1861 was 712: acreage 3,083. Charles Morrison, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is chalk and loam.

BAULKING

(ANCIENTLY BETHELKING) is a scattered village and small parish, formerly a hamlet in Uffington parish, in the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks, diocese of Oxford, union of Faringdon, and hundred of Shrivenham, distant 7 miles from Wantage, 12 from Abingdon, and 18 from Oxford; the Moor Mill Junction, a branch of the Great Western Railway to Faringdon, is about half a mile west of the village. The church of St. Nicholas is a small structure, partly Gothic, with a turret at the west. The living is a vicarage, united with Woolstone, joint annual value £70, with residence, in the gift of Charles Eyre, Esq. The river Ock divides this parish from Shellingford.

The population in 1861 was 181; the area is over 1,442 acres, about one quarter of which is arable, and the remainder pasture. The landowners are Mr. John Reade, Mr. Thomas James, Mr. Francis Fortescue, and Earl Craven, who are also lords of the manor.

BEARWOOD

Is an ecclesiastical district, consisting of the townships or liberties of Newland, part of Winnersh, and Sindlesham, forming part of the parish of Hurst, 34 miles from London, 2 from the Wokingham railway station, and 6 from Reading, in Wokingham union, Berks archdeaconry, Oxford bishopric, and archbishopric of Canterbury. The church of St. Catharine is a handsome stone building in the Gothic style of architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, and tower, built and endowed about the year 1845, at the expense of John Walter, Esq., M.P., and his father. The church stands on rising ground at the top of the village of Sindlesham, and the extensive view which the churchyard commands is one of the prettiest in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £100, with residence and six acres of land, in the patronage of John Walter, Esq. There is a school-house at Sindlesham, built and entirely supported by Mr. Walter. There is likewise a small Baptist chapel. Bearwood, the seat of John Walter, Esq., was formerly an outlying part of Windsor Forest, and still retains much of its primitive wildness of character: its name is supposed to be derived from the Saxon word bere, signifying beech, which is still the predominant tree in the wood; hollies and junipers flourish here in great perfection, and the gardens abound with rhododendrons and other American plants; most varieties of the fir tribe, including a large number of the Cedrus Deodara, are to be found here; but the chief attraction of the place is the magnificent lake, which covers a space of 44 acres, and contains several islands; this fine sheet of water yields to none in the county but Virginia Water in point of size, and perhaps not even to that in beauty. Below the lake-head are the kitchen garden, which has lately been removed to that locality, the dairy farm, and other premises. The waste water of the lake is applied to turning a large water wheel, which drives a saw mill and other machinery. By the will of the late W. Harman, Esq., the interest of £500 is annually distributed in coal amongst the poor of the liberty of Winnersh. The soil is gravel and clay, and the subsoil is London clay. John Walter, Esq., Robert Palmer, Esq., and John Simonds, Esq., are chief landowners.

The population in 1861 was about 750.

Some of the names belonging to this district have been, for postal purposes, returned with Arborfield.

BEECH HILL

Is a parish and small village, pleasantly situated on rising ground, 44 miles from London, 6 from Reading, and  $2\frac{1}{2}$  from Mortimer railway station. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1867, and consecrated in the month of August in the same year. It is a handsome building of brick and flint stone, with Bath stone facings. The interior is very pretty. It was erected by Mrs. Forbes, at a cost of upwards of £2,000. The living is a rectory, value about £200 per annum, in the patronage of the aforesaid Mrs. Forbes. Dr. Hobhouse, late Bishop of Nelson, New Zealand, is rector. Here is a school for boys and girls.

The parish is in the hundred of Reading, union of Basingstoke, and diocese of Winchester, and comprises an area of 879 acres, the property of Henry L. Hunter, Esq., and the Duke of Wellington, who are also lords of the manor. This new parish was, until very recently, a tithing in the parish of Strathfieldsaye. Here are the remains of an ancient priory, now used as a farmhouse.

BEENHAM-VALLENCE

Is a parish, 45 miles by rail and 47 by road west from London, a mile and a half north from Aldermaston railway station, 8 west-south-west from Reading, and 8 east from Newbury, in the hundred of Reading, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary is an ancient fabric of old English architecture, and formerly belonged to the monastery of Reading; it was struck by lightning and partly burnt in the year 1794; the interior contains a monument to the memory of Stackhouse, who wrote "The History of the Bible." It was restored in 1859. The living is a vicarage, annual value £250, with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Bushnell. Here is a National school, supported by subscription; also a chapel for the Primitive Methodists. Near the village is Beenham house, the property of Capt. Samuel A. Dickson, R.A., who is lord of the manor; it is now the residence of E. J. Hutchins, Esq. The Aldermaston station on the Hungerford branch of the Great Western Railway is at the south-west end of this parish.

The population in 1861 was about 505; the area is 1,728 acres.

BESSELSLEIGH

Is a parish, in the hundred of Hormer, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-west from Abingdon and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  south-west from Oxford.

The church is a small Gothic structure. In the interior is an ancient monument to the memory of Sir John Lenthall, Kut. The living is a rectory, annual value £280, with residence, in the gift of Kyffin John William Lenthall, Esq., and held by the Rev. Charles Dundas Everett, M.A. There are the remains of the old manor house standing near the church, formerly the residence of Speaker Lenthall in the Long Parliament. Oliver Cromwell is said to have been a frequent visitor here; he usually concealed himself in a room to which the only access was by a chair or basket let down and drawn up with ropes. The parish comprises 893 acres, chiefly sand and limestone, mostly the property of Kyffin John William Lenthall, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 92. The inhabitants of this parish are entitled to send their children to the school at Appleton, endowed by Sir R. Fettyplace.

BINFIELD

Is a scattered village and parish,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the Bracknell station,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  from Wokingham, and 31 from London, in the union of Easthampstead, hundred of Cookham, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of All Saints is a neat structure, in the Third Pointed style, and was probably built in the latter part of the reign of Edward III., with a large square tower. In the chancel is a fine brass of Water de Annefordhe, the second rector, of the date of 1335; a north aisle was added by subscription and the church reseated in 1848; in 1859 a north chancel aisle was also added by Mrs. Young; at the same time the chancel was restored at the expense of the late rector, the Rev. Jame.

Randall, and a vestry built, and other alterations made in the church, at the expense of C. Parker, Esq., and other parishoners. The east chancel window is of handsome stained glass; there are two other stained glass windows in the chancel, in memory of the family of the late rector; there is likewise a handsome memorial window in the east-end of the south aisle to Mrs. Parker, and in the west end to C. Parker, Esq.; the pulpit and reading desk are of oak, handsomely carved, of the date of 1628; attached to the pulpit is a very ancient hour-glass stand, of curiously wrought iron, with the arms of the Smiths' and Farriers' Companies of the city of London. The register dates from 1538. The living is a rectory, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, annual value £628, including 15 acres of glebe and residence.

A new church, dedicated to St. Mark, has been recently built at a cost of about £2,000; which sum was raised by subscription. It stands upon rising ground about 1½ miles from the old church, in the south end of the parish. There are several handsome residences in the neighbourhood: Binfield Park House, Pope's Wood, at one time the favourite retreat of the great poet; Binfield Manor House; Binfield Court; Forest Lodge; The Firs; The Grove. A portion of Billingbear Park, the property of Lord Braybrooke, is situated in this parish. There is a National school for boys and girls, supported partly by endowment and partly by subscription. Henry Skrines, Esq., is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 1,371; the parish contains 3,200 acres.

Letters are received from Bracknell at 7.10 a.m.; dispatched at 6 p.m.; Sundays, 1.10 p.m.

BISHAM

(FORMERLY BUSTLESHAM) is a small but beautifully situated village and parish on the bank of the river Thames, 13 miles from Reading, 7 from Henley, 5 from the Great Western Railway station at Taplow, and one mile from Marlow, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints, which is of great antiquity, is built in the Norman style; it was thoroughly restored in 1856: it contains some ancient monuments, among which are three to Sir Thomas, Sir Philip and Lady Hoby. The living is a vicarage, annual value £156, with residence, in the gift of George Henry Vansittart, Esq.; the Rev. Thomas Edward Powell, M.A., of Oriel College, Oxford, is the vicar. Here is a portion of Bisham Abbey, where the Princess Elizabeth, afterwards Queen of England, was confined during the reign of Queen Mary. There is a well still called the Princess Elizabeth's. St. James's church was erected in 1850, at STUBBINGS, in this parish; an ecclesiastical district is attached to it. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £108, with residence, in the gift of Henry Skrine, Esq., and held by the Rev. Wadham Huntley Skrine, M.A., of Wadham College, Oxford.

The population in 1861 was 665; the area is 2,520 acres.

Letters arrive from Marlow and are delivered at 7 a.m. & 12.30 p.m.; dispatched to Marlow at 10.40 a.m. and 7.20 p.m. Midday dispatched by Maidenhead at 2.40 p.m.

BLEWBURY

Is a village and an extensive parish, covering an area of 4,115 acres : it is 6 miles south-west from Wallingford, and 4 south from the Didcot station, partly in the hundred of Moreton, but chiefly in that of Reading, union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael was originally dependent on Reading Abbey ; the original style of architecture is Norman, but additions have been made in other styles. The living is a vicarage, value commuted at £144 per annum, in the patronage of the Bishop of Oxford. The Charity school was erected in the year 1709, by the trustees of William Malthus, Esq., for the education of 30 boys and 30 girls ; the funds of the institution provide premiums to apprentice the boys out to different mechanical trades at the age of 14 years. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. John Phillips, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. There are several charities, one of £6 and another of £3 in perpetuity, to be expended in bread for the poor.

The population in 1861 was 639 ; the parish is intersected by a Roman road and a British road, termed Ickleton and Grimsditch. The soil is chalk, clay, and gravel.

BOURTON

Is a tything and pretty village, in the parish and hundred of Shrivenham, and union of Faringdon, half a mile west from Shrivenham railway station on the Great Western line, 6½ miles from Swindon, and 7 south-west-by south from Faringdon. The Great Western Railway passes close by.

The church of St. James was built by subscription, by far the largest benefactor being Thomas Tucker, Esq., who gave £500, parsonage garden, site of church, &c.; it is a neat stone building in the Pointed style, and has nave, chancel, and bell turret. The school for 40 and 60 boys is a very neat Gothic stone building, erected in 1842; it was built at the expense of, and is entirely supported by Messrs. Baker and Tucker, silk manufacturers; they have likewise built and support six almshouses, which, with the schools, are a great ornament to the township. The almshouses are of stone, in the Ornamental Pointed style. A very old cross stands in the centre of the village. The Wilts and Berks Canal passes through. Here is a Baptist chapel. Great quantities of fossils of various kinds are frequently dug up in this village.

The population in 1861 was 328.

BOXFORD-cum-WESTBROOK

Is a parish and village, on the road to Lambourn, 4 miles north-west from Newbury, in the hundred of Faircross, union of Newbury, and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John is an ancient edifice; the nave and chancel are of the 14th century. The living is a rectory, rent charge commuted at £867, with 20 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of and held by, the Rev. George Wells, M.A. The benefactions to the poor are: The rector pays 13s. 4d. on every Easter day in the church; Mr. Gregory Tremonger gave £27 by will; Mrs. Wayte gave 6s. 8d., payable yearly; Mr. Richard Ware gave £30 by will; Mr. Willoughby gave an annuity of 20s. by will, dated 1610; John Sheperd gave £20, the interest to be paid to two poor widows. On the road at the northern end of the parish is the boundary stone of the parishes of Boxford, Welford, and Leckhampstead; this road is called Hangmanstone-lane from the following legend—A man having stolen a sheep was carrying it with its hind legs round his neck, and sat down to rest on the large boundary stone; the sheep struggled and drew him backwards, and he was found in the morning strangled by the hind legs of the sheep; this road is conjectured to have been the Roman road from Spinæ to Wanting.

Here is a small Parochial school; and a chapel for Wesleyans; also a chapel for Primitive Methodists on Wickham Heath. Earl Craven and Charles Eyre, Esq., are lords of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 636; the acreage is 2,769.

Letters arrive from Newbury at 8 a.m.; dispatched at 4.20 p.m. Newbury is the nearest money order office. There is a letter box at Wickham heath.

BRACKNELL

Is a populous village and consolidated chapelry, in the parishes of Warfield and Winkfield, in the union of Easthampstead, county court district of Windsor, Wargrave hundred, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the Forest-road from Reading to London, and forming part of the old Forest of Windsor, surrounded by a neighbourhood of considerable picturesque scenery, and comprising therein several mansions and parks of resident noblemen and gentlemen : it is an improving place, distant only 28 miles west from the metropolis, 12 from Reading, 8 from Maidenhead, and 4 from Wellington College. The church of the Holy Trinity was built in 1851, in the Early Pointed style, of flint, and has lately been greatly improved and increased. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. The Independent chapel was rebuilt about 1856. There is a literary institute, of which the Right Hon. Sir W. G. Hayter, Bart., is the president, and the Rev. E. H. Linzee, vice-president. Within the last two years a large tract of land has been purchased, and an extensive establishment has been formed under the auspices of Miss Sellon, and called the "Priory," for the reception of convalescents and incurables, and to which a burial ground has been added and consecrated for the use of that part of the Bracknell district. There are national schools under the management of the incumbent, and an Infant school, built and supported by Mr. Linzee.

The population of Bracknell in 1861 was 1,100. The Bracknell railway station is in the parish of Easthampstead.

BRADFIELD

Is a scattered village and parish, 8 miles west from Reading, and  $3\frac{1}{2}$  south-west from Pangbourne railway station, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford. It is situated in a valley, on a stream called the Kimber, which rises in this parish. The church of St. Andrew was enlarged and, with the exception of the tower and part of the north aisle, rebuilt, by the incumbent, and was reconsecrated in 1848. The windows are of stained glass. The living is a rectory, annual value £1,148 12s., with residence: the Rev. Thomas Stevens, M.A., is patron and incumbent.

Near the church stands the college of St. Andrew, founded by the present incumbent for the education of the sons of gentlemen; it was first opened in 1850, was endowed as a Foundation school in 1859 for 153 commoners and 16 Founder's boys, who receive education free, and it was incorporated by royal charter 1862; there is a yearly competitive election of two boys under the age of fourteen to the foundation of this school; by the statutes it is provided that "the Founder's boys shall be either fatherless or the sons of poor gentlemen or clergymen, and they shall be lodged, boarded, and instructed gratuitously, and upon terms of equality in all respects with the commoners." There is a chapel of ease situated at Buckhold; also a chapel of ease about a mile from the church, for the use of the inmates of the union workhouse: there is also a small chapel belonging to the Primitive Methodists. In the village are schools for boys and girls. Bradfield is the centre of a poor law union, consisting of 29 parishes:—Aldermaston, Ashampstead, Basildon, Beenham Vallence, Bradfield, Bucklebury, Burghfield, Englefield, Frilsham, Goring (Oxford), Grazeley or Graiseley, Mapledurham (Oxford), Mortimer (West End, Hants), Padworth, Pangbourne, Purley, Stanford Dingley, Stratfield Mortimer, Streatley, Sulham, Sulhampstead Abbots, Sulhampstead Bannister (Lower End), Sulhampstead Bannister (Upper End), Tidmarsh, Tilehurst Ufton or Ufton Nervet, Whitechurch (Berks and Oxford), Wokefield, Yattendon. The workhouse is about three-quarters of a mile from the village, and is built of red brick. The Charities consist of the interest of £3000 Three per Cents. left by J. Buller, of Privy Gardens; £100 Three per Cents.; seven acres of land, and some smaller amounts left by other persons for the benefit of the poor. The Rev. Thomas Stevens, M.A., is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 1,167; the area in acres is 4,020.

Letters arrive from Reading at 7.30 a.m. & 2.30 p.m.; dispatched at 9.5 a.m. & 5.45 p.m.

BRAY

Is a small but healthy village and parish, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, situated at the eastern extremity of this county, and divided from Buckinghamshire by the river Thames; it is 2 miles from the Great Western railway station at Taplow, 14 from Reading, 10 from Henley, and 27½ from Hyde Park corner, and comprises the divisions of Bray, Tutchen, East Oakley, and part of Maidenhead, and is supposed to be on the site of the Roman station Bibracte; it is now within the liberty of Windsor Forest, being part of the royal demesne.

The church of St. Michael was built in the reign of Edward I., in the latest style of lancet; various additions were made at different times in the fifteenth century, and the whole has been repaired and restored at great cost within the last five years, under the superintendence of Thomas Wyatt, Esq. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Bishop of Oxford, value £500 per annum, arising from an estate in land. Two chapels of ease have been built within the last few years, to each of which a school for the children of the poor has been annexed. There are, besides these, two National schools in connection with the Committee of Privy Council.

William Goddard, Esq., in the year 1627, founded and endowed a hospital, called Jesus' Hospital, and placed it under the government of the Worshipful the Fishmongers' Company of London, of which he was a member. The building, consists of a chapel and forty houses, forming a handsome and uniform square, with richly cultivated gardens in the centre and at the back of the buildings; six of the inmates must be free of the above company; a single man or woman is allowed 7s. a week, a man and his wife 12s., all the other occupants who are parishioners of Bray have, when single, 4s. 6d., when married, 6s. 6d. per week, besides other allowances; the Rev. George Proctor, D.D., of Worcester College, Oxford, is paymaster and chaplain.

A late Act of Parliament has vested in the magistrates the power to appoint chief and petty constables and tithingmen.

The population of the entire parish in 1861 was 4,801 ; the acreage is 8,900.

Letters arrive from Maidenhead at 7 a.m. ; dispatched at 7 p.m.

BRAY WICK is a hamlet in the parish of Bray, county court district of Windsor,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the Great Western railway station near Maidenhead,  $13\frac{1}{2}$  from Reading, and  $8\frac{1}{2}$  from Henley.

COX GREEN is a long irregular village, in the parish of Bray, situated on the south side of the Great Bath Road, and separated from Boyne Hill by the Great Western Railway.

Holyport is a village in the parish of Bray. There is a Wesleyan chapel. There is an endowment left by William Cherry, Esq., for the education of twenty boys, who are instructed at the National school.

Letters arrive from Maidenhead at 7-10 a.m. ; dispatched at 6-50 p.m.

TITTLE ROW is a small village adjoining Boyne Hill, in the parish of Bray, close to the Great Western Railway ; it terminates at Maidenhead Thicket, and is situated on the south side of the Great Bath road.

TUTCHEN END is a small village and chapelry in the parish of Bray, situated between Holyport and White Waltham, 12 miles from Reading, 10 from Windsor, 10 from Henley, and 4 from the Great Western Railway station at Taplow.

CHIEVELEY, with LECKHAMPSTEAD, OARE, and WINTERBOURNE

CHIEVELEY is a large parish and village, with the chapelries of Leckhampstead, Oare and Winterbourne, and the tithings of Courage and Snelsmore, in the hundred of Faircross, union of Newbury, and diocese of Oxford,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles north from Newbury,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  from Ilsley, and 22 from Oxford.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a plain building, partly in the Early English style of architecture, with some traces of Norman. The chancel is chiefly the property of John W. Pocock, Esq. The consolidated living is a vicarage, in the alternate gift of J. Dand, Esq., and Miss Wasey, of the annual value of £1460, with residence. There are chapels for Baptists, Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans; and several bequests and liberal endowments left for the poor. At North Heath there is a National school for boys and girls, built by the present incumbent.

The population in 1861 was 1,923; the acreage is 9,410. The principal owners of the soil are Lord Overstone, John W. Pocock, Esq., J. Matthews, Esq., Miss Wasey, Mrs. Corrie, Joseph Tom Breach, Esq., &c.

LECKHAMPSTEAD is a chapelry to Chieveley parish, 7 miles north from Newbury, and 3 north-west from Chieveley. A new church has lately been erected in the centre of the village, in the Pointed style of architecture, of brick and flint in alternate courses; the mullions of the windows are of Bath stone; it consists of nave, south aisle and chancel, and will accommodate 250 persons; the walls are unplastered; the brick-work, being of different colours—in diagrams, has a very pleasing effect; the east window is of stained glass, by Lavers and Barrand, of London—subject, The Ascension; there is a bell-turret with one bell: the east end of the nave and south porch are mainly composed of the oak of the ancient screen in the former church, which stood a mile from the village; the ancient font has been retained. There is a burial-ground attached to the church: the architect was Mr. Teulon, of London, and the cost of its erection was £1,745.

The population in 1861 was 385.

OARE, is a chapelry to Chieveley, 5 miles north from Newbury, and 5 from Ilsley. The chapel has been thoroughly restored and rescaled, and is in the Perpendicular style, and has a bell turret of stone. There is a small burial ground, long since disused, belonging to the Society of Friends. Acres and population included with Chieveley.

WINTERBOURNE is a chapelry in the parish of Chieveley, 4 miles north-west from Newbury. The church is seated on an eminence, and has recently been restored and reseated, and new north and south aisles have been added : it is in the Early English style. Here is a small endowed school. The population in 1861 was 377.

CURRIDGE is a hamlet. A school room, which is licensed for Divine service, has been erected here in the Pointed style of architecture, with a residence for the master and mistress, by Miss Wasey and her sister Mrs. Stacpoole, since deceased.

CHOLSEY

Is a village and parish of considerable dimensions,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Wallingford and 46 from London, in the hundred of Reading, union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford; it is separated from Oxfordshire by the river Thames.

The church of St. Mary was erected about the eleventh century, with an embattled tower containing six bells, and has been repaired within the last twenty years; in the body of the church there are several Latin inscriptions of a very ancient period; in the churchyard there is a venerable yew tree, supposed to be 900 years old, the trunk of which is about six yards in circumference. The living is a vicarage, value £370 per annum, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor. The Comtesse de Broc is impropiator of the great tithes. Charles Morrison, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The charities are £3 annually, given in money to the poor.

The population in 1861 was 1,127; the parish contains 4,387 acres. The rateable value of the entire parish amounts to £8,445 10s. The Great Western Railway intersects the parish, and the station is distant one mile.

Lollington Farm, the residence of Anthony Buckell, Esq., is said to be coeval with the church. A considerable portion of the moat which formerly surrounded the house still remains.

At Moultsford station, on the Great Western Railway, about three miles from Wallingford, is a fine and comfortable hotel, delightfully situated within ten minutes walk of the river Thames. It is much frequented by fishing parties, families, &c. Mr. Joseph Smart is proprietor.

Letters arrive through Wallingford at 7 a.m.; dispatched at 7.15 p.m.

CLEWER

Is a parish and village, one mile west from Windsor, 6 miles from Maidenhead, and 23 from London, in the hundred of Ripplesmere, union of Windsor, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the banks of the Thames.

The church of St. Andrew is built in the Early Norman style of architecture. It contains a tablet to Field-Marshal the Earl Harcourt. The living is a rectory, value £330 per annum, with 24 acres of glebe land and residence, in the gift of Eton College. There is a chapel of ease at Dedworth, and a National school, endowed with about £60 per annum. A Church Penitentiary, called the House of Mercy, in connection with the London Church Penitentiary Association, was founded in this parish in 1849, and was subsequently enlarged; about 75 penitents are continually maintained. The institution is endowed with an estate of 15 acres, but is dependent for its support on the contributions of the sisters and voluntary benefactions of friends; the management of the funds is under the control of a council, composed of clergymen and laymen. There is also an Orphanage and Industrial Training School, for forty children; also an Infirmary for ladies and for poor people; both these establishments are under the care of the sisters. The lordship of the manor is vested in the trustees of the late Arthur Vansittart, Esq., who, with the trustees of the Harcourt estate, Forest hill, and Daniel Gooch, Esq., are the chief landowners. There are charities of £21 per annum. Here is a Catholic church, with a school attached. The parish consists of a town district, forming part of the town of Windsor, and forming a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes only, and a country district.

The population of the entire parish is 5,418; the acreage is 1,666; the soil is clay and gravel.

Letters arrive from Windsor at 8.30 a.m. and 12.45 p.m.; dispatched at 10.5 a.m. and 5.50 p.m. The nearest money-order office is at Windsor.

COLD ASH

Is an ecclesiastical district parish, formed out of that of Thatcham, in 1865. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, is a building of brick and white stone, and contains sittings for about 220. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £100 per annum, in the gift of the vicar of Thatcham. The site for a school has been given by the Enclosure Commissionera. At Ashmore Green is a small Baptist chapel. (See Thatcham for Directory.)

COLESHILL

Is a parish, in the union of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivensham, and diocese of Oxford,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  miles west-south-west from Faringdon, and  $7\frac{1}{4}$  from London.

The church of All Saints is a fine old structure, with an embattled tower at the west; its interior is very elegant, and has been reseated with open seats by the vicar, with the exception of the Earl of Radnor's transept; the eastern window of the chancel, which represents the Nativity, was presented by the Earl of Radnor in 1787; here is a small but elegant monument, by Rysbrach. The living is a vicarage, annual value £350, with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Radnor.

Coleshill House, the seat of the Earl of Radnor, is a beautiful mansion, designed and built by Inigo Jones about the year 1660, and considered a perfect specimen of the style of that great architect; its situation is on an eminence, commanding views of a fertile undulating country, through which the Cole meanders, and forms the western boundary of the county. Several cottages, built of stone, and of ornamental design, with gardens sloping and neatly laid out, are sprinkled over the village. The Pinsent Charity, for apprenticing poor children of Coleshill and Great Coxwell, whose parents never received parochial relief, by a decree of the Court of Chancery, gives a premium of about £25 with each boy or girl. Here are two schools; the boys' school is supported by the Earl of Radnor, the girls' school by the vicar.

The population in 1861 was 464; the acreage is 2,301; the soil is clay and loamy, the property of the Earl of Radnor.

POST OFFICE.—William Marchant, postmaster. Letters arrive from Highworth at 7.50 a.m., dispatched same time; and from Faringdon at 3.10 p.m., dispatched same time.

COMPTON

(Or COMPTON PARVA) is a pretty village and parish, 9 miles north-west from Newbury, 2 east from East Ilsley, and 56 from London, in the hundred of Compton, union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary is an ancient specimen of Norman architecture, situated about a quarter of a mile from the village. The living is a vicarage, annual value £270, with residence, in the gift of Colonel Loyd-Lindsay. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. Colonel Loyd-Lindsay is lord of the manor of East Compton, and Capt. McRea and Capt. Borland are lords of the manor of West Compton. On the north side of the village is a vale called the Slad, where great quantities of Roman coins have been found. On the south side of the village is the site of an encampment or castle, called Perborough Castle.

The population in 1861 was 590; the acreage is 3,795; the soil is chalk and flint.

COMPTON BEAUCHAMP

Is a village and parish, in the union of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, and diocese of Oxford, distant 4 miles east from Shrivenham station on the Great Western Railway, 6½ south-west from Faringdon, and 7½ west from Wantage; it is pleasantly situated near the base of a hill, and commands a fine view of the adjoining vale.

The church of St. Swithin is an old Norman cruciform structure. The living is a rectory, annual value £350, with residence, in the gift of Earl Craven. The parish school is supported by voluntary contributions. Earl Craven is lord of the manor and owner of the soil. Compton House, the seat of James Bacon, Esq., Q.C., is an ancient stone building, surrounded by a moat.

The population in 1861 was 128; the acreage is 1,453.

COOKHAM

Is a pleasant village and parish, in the hundred and union of its own name, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the west bank of the river Thames, on the opposite side of which are the highly picturesque and richly cultivated domains of Clifden, Hedsor, and Taplow. The portion of the river Thames, from Maidenhead up to Cookham Lock, is considered the most beautiful in the whole course from Oxford to London; it is 16 miles from Reading, 9 from Henley, 3 from the Great Western Railway station near Maidenhead, and 28 from London.

The church of the Holy Trinity is a very ancient Gothic structure, supposed to have been built 400 years ago. The living is a vicarage, annual value £480, with residence, in the gift of and held by the Rev. Mr. Rogers. There is a Wesleyan chapel; also almshouses for eight poor persons. A branch railway from Maidenhead to Wycombe has a station here. Here is an extensive boot and shoe manufactory, which, with a paper mill, gives employment to many of the inhabitants.

The union of Cookham comprises the following places:—Bisham Bray, with Maidenhead, Cookham, Hurley, Shottesbrook, Waltham St. Lawrence, White Waltham.

The population in 1861, including part of the borough of Maidenhead and the district of Cookham Dean, was 4,468.

POST OFFICE.—Anna Young, postmistress. Letters arrive from Maidenhead at 7-30 a.m. and 2-30 p.m., and dispatched at 12-30 and 7-35 p.m.

Railway Station, Frederick E. Godwin, station master.

CARRIER TO LONDON.—Richard Isley, Monday and Friday, to King's Arms, Snow hill, returning Tuesday and Saturday.

NORTH TOWN is a small hamlet in the parish of Cookham, commanding a beautiful view of picturesque scenery.

RAY MILL is a small hamlet in the parish of Cookham, 14 miles from Reading, 10 from Henley, 6½ from Windsor, 1 from the Taplow and Maidenhead station of the Great Western Railway, and 23½ from London. Here is an extensive corn mill, worked by the river Thames at the Ray Mill Lock; also a brewery.

COOKHAM DEAN is an ecclesiastical district formed out of the parish of Cookham, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, a mile and a half from Cookham,  $8\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Henley, 14 from Reading,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  from the Great Western Railway station near Maidenhead, and 31 from London. Part of this district is situated on an eminence of at least 600 feet, nearly perpendicular; the other portion is in a dell, and is imperceptible to the tourist until he descends nearly to the bottom.

The church of St. John the Baptist is in the Early Decorated style of the thirteenth century; in 1845 it was consecrated, and is now distinct from the mother church for all ecclesiastical purposes; the hamlet of Pinkneys Green has been assigned to it. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £106, with residence, in the gift of the vicar of Cookham; the Rev. George Hewitt Hodson, A.M., is incumbent. There is a National school for both sexes, capable of containing from 90 to 100, also a chapel for Primitive Methodists and Independents.

The population in 1861 was 743.

PINKNEYS GREEN is an irregular but picturesque hamlet, in the parish of Cookham, 12 miles from Reading, 7 from Henley, 3 from Great Marlow, 4 from the Great Western Railway station near Maidenhead, and 29 from Hyde Park-corner.

POST PILLAR BOX.—Letters arrive through Maidenhead; delivered at 10.30 a.m., dispatched at 6 p.m.

GREAT COXWELL

Is a small village and parish, 2 miles south from Faringdon, 4 north-east from Highworth, 14 south-west from Abingdon, 10 from Swindon, and 72 from London, in the hundred and union of Faringdon, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Giles is an ancient structure, and is pleasantly situated on a commanding eminence, from which a fine view of the country is obtained. The living is a discharged vicarage, value £250; it is in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. Henry S. Templer, M.A., formerly of Exeter College, Oxford.

On the top of Badbury Hill, a short distance from the village, on the north side of the turnpike road, are the remains of a Roman camp, of a circular form, 200 yards in diameter, and surrounded with a ditch 10 yards wide. Contiguous to the village is a farm house, being the remains of a religious establishment built by the abbots of Beaulieu, New Forest, to whom King John granted the manor in 1205; the barn is 148 feet in length, and 40 feet in width; the building is cruciform; the roof, which is exceedingly sharp, and internally presenting, from its peculiar construction, a very singular perspective, is supported by two ranges of wooden pillars, resting on pedestals of stone. There is a charity, in which the parish of Coleshill participates, for apprenticing poor children. The Earl of Radnor is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 371; the area is 1,400 acres.

LITTLE COXWELL

Is a township and chapelry, in the parish, hundred, union, and county court district of Faringdon and diocese of Oxford, distant  $1\frac{1}{2}$  mile south from Faringdon,  $18\frac{1}{2}$  from Oxford, and 72 from London.

The chapel of St. Mary is in good repair, having a turret in the centre containing two bells. The living is annexed to the vicarage of Faringdon, joint annual value £265, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. Charles Simeon. Here is a school for boys and girls, supported by the Earl of Radnor and the inhabitants. The Coles pits, situated a short distance from the village, and extending over an area of 14 acres, are objects of considerable interest; they number in all 273, are circular, and vary in depth from 7 to 22 feet, they are supposed to have been the hiding places or habitations of the ancient Britons.

The population in 1861 was 302; the acreage is 842.

CUMNOR

Is a large parish, in the hundred of Horner, union of Abingdon and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles north-by-west from Abingdon, and bounded by the river Thames.

The church of St. Michael consists of a nave and north aisle, a chapel at the east end of the south side, and a chancel, with a plain but elegant square tower at the west end, containing six bells. Against the north wall of the chancel is the rich altar tomb of the notorious Anthony Forster. The living is a vicarage, annual value £400, in the patronage of the Earl of Abingdon. There is a handsome and modern schoolroom with house for the master, built by the late vicar, the Hon. and Rev. O. F. Spencer.

The admirers of Sir Walter Scott's "Kenilworth" will remember Cumnor as the place of seclusion and death of the unfortunate Amy Robsart, Countess of Leicester. The manor at a very early period belonged to the abbots and convent of Abingdon, by whom it was used as a lazaretto. The Rev. Dr. Buckler left an annuity of £4 annual value, to be expended in the purchase of Bibles and Prayer books for the poor; the Rev. John Slatter, £1 10s. annually, for the purchase of blankets for the poor; Mr. William Sellwood, £4 11s. annually, to be enjoyed by the parishes of Appleton and Besselsleigh and Cumnor alternately, and to be laid out in the purchase of foul-weather jackets; Mr. G. Noble left two £5 notes to be lent out to poor persons, one at a time, and to be repaid at the rate of ten groats per quarter; Mr. Carey Godfrey, the interest of £100 to be laid out in rewards for the Sunday school; Mr. R. Hall, the interest of £100, to be divided annually amongst four industrious persons not receiving parish relief; Mrs. M. Peacock, the interest of £500, £3 of the interest towards the school, and £12 to be divided annually amongst three poor widows who are not on the parish; Mr. W. Slatter, the interest of £100, to be divided between the school of this parish and the Blue Coat school at Oxford.

The population in 1861 was 1,021; the parish comprises about 6,800 acres, chiefly clay, sand, and limestone. The Earl of Abingdon is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil.

CHAWLEY and DENCOURT are small hamlets to the north.

SWINFORD, HENWOOD, FITCHAMPSTEAD and ROCKLEY are also hamlets.

DENCHWORTH

Is a parish, in the union of Wantage, partly in the hundred of Ock, and partly in that of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford, about 2½ miles north-west from Wantage.

The church of St. James, which has been recently repaired, is an ancient Gothic edifice, with nave, chancel, north and south transepts, and square embattled tower containing five bells; in the south transept are some memorials to the Geering family, and some good brasses in the chancel to the Hyde family. The earliest date in the existing remains of the old registers, which are much mutilated, is 1538. The living is a vicarage, annual value £150, with residence, in the gift of the Provost and Fellows of Worcester College, Oxford. The Baptists have a place of worship here. This parish is close to the Great Western Railway.

The population in 1861 was 257; the area is about 1,050 acres of stiff clay.

Here is a school for boys and girls.

FARINGDON

Is a market town, parish, and polling place for the county, 14 miles from Abingdon, 70 from London, 25 from Newbury, 17 from Oxford, and 35 from Reading, in the union of Faringdon, partly in the hundred of Faringdon and partly in that of Shrivenham, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford.

A market is held here every Tuesday, and the great cattle market on the first Tuesday in every month, which is well attended with cattle of every kind : there is an annual horse fair on the 13th of February, and statute fairs on the Tuesday before and Tuesday after Old Michaelmas Day. The petty sessions are held weekly at the Police Station, and the county courts are held in the same building. It likewise has an ecclesiastical court, of which the present vicar is the official, having the power to grant probates of wills and administrations, and also marriage licenses.

The church of All Saints is an ancient edifice of stone : the nave is Norman, and the chancel Early English ; in the centre is a low broad tower containing a peal of six bells, on which formerly stood a lofty spire, which was demolished by the Parliamentary forces during the war : the interior has recently been thoroughly restored, and now seated with open oak seats : it contains several ancient monuments of the Purefoys, of Wadley, and their ancestors the Untons ; that of Sir Henry Unton represents the figures of himself and lady, with their arms emblazoned on brass ; the tomb of Sir Marmaduke Rawdon, governor of Faringdon, who successfully defended this place against the Parliamentary forces, is in the nave ; it also contains several handsome painted windows. The register dates from 1558. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £14 ls. 3d. ; its present income is £275 ; the neighbouring chapelry of Little Coxwell is attached to the living, both being in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. Charles Simeon ; the Rev. Henry Barne, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford, is the incumbent, and the Rev. Richard Dawson, is the curate.

There are chapels for the Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and society of Friends. Here are National and British schools, and a charity female school, the latter chiefly supported by subscription. The town is of considerable antiquity, and was part of the ancient demesne of the Crown : its situation being in a hollow, it is well sheltered ; its appearance is neat and clean, and it is well lighted with gas, and contains several comfortable inns, and many handsome and well filled shops. There is a brewery, maltings, &c. ; the trade is chiefly local.

There are two weekly newspapers published, the "Faringdon Advertiser" and the "Faringdon Free Press."

The Town Hall, an old building, is situated in the centre of the town, from which diverge the few streets which comprise the town. A new Corn Exchange was built in 1863, and rooms for the savings bank attached, reading rooms, &c. ; it is a very handsome Gothic stone building, situated in the Corn Market.

Faringdon Hill, the site of an ancient encampment, is of considerable altitude, crowned with a plantation of lofty firs : a circular and transverse walk round and through the plantation is a favourite promenade, commanding beautiful and extensive views of the surrounding country, and from which, on a clear day, thirty parish churches may be seen.

Radcot Bridge, over the Isis, once the scene of a battle between Robert de Vere, favourite of Richard II., and the discontented barons, is about two miles distant. Daniel Bennett, Esq., is lord of the manor,

The union of Faringdon comprises the following places :—Ashbury, Balking, Beckett, Bourton, Buckland, Buscot, Charney, Coleshill (Berks and Wilts), Compton Beauchamp, Eaton Hastings, Fernham, Grafton (Oxford), Great Coxwell, Great Faringdon, Hatford, Hinton, Waldrist, Idstone, Kelmscot (Oxford), Kingston Lisle, with Fawler, Kingstone Winslow, Langford (Oxford), Lechlade (Gloucestershire), Little Coxwell, Little Faringdon (Oxford), Longcot, Longworth, Odstone, Pusey, Radcot (Oxford), Shellingford, Shrivenham, Stanford-in-the-Vale, Uffington, Watchfield, Woolstone; and the county court district the following :—Ashbury, Balking, Beckett, Bourton, Buckland, Buckland Marsh, Buscot, Buscot Wick, Carswell, Carswell Marsh, Charney, Clansfield, Coleshill, Compton Beauchamp, Great Coxwell, Little Coxwell, Donnington, Duxford, Eaton Hastings, Great Faringdon, Little Faringdon, Fawler, Fernham, Grafton, Hatford, Hinton, Idstone, Kelmscot, Knighton, Kingston Lisle, Kingston Winslow, Langford, Lechlade, Littleworth, Longcot, Odstone, Pusey, Radcot, Shellingford, Shrivenham, Stanford, Thrupp, Uffington, Wadley, Watchfield, Woolstone.

The population in 1861 was 3,702 ; the acreage is 6,910 ; the soil is clay and rich loam.

POST OFFICE, MONEY-ORDER OFFICE AND POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK.—John Pike, postmaster. Letters from London delivered at 7 a.m. and 2 p.m. from 15th February to 15th November, and at 7.30 a.m. from 15th November to 15th February ; and 2 p.m. second delivery ; box closes at 8.55 p.m.

FARNBOROUGH

Is a small village and parish, 9 miles north from Newbury, and 6 south-east from Wantage, in the hundred of Compton, union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated on the Downs.

The church of All Saints is an ancient fabric of Norman architecture, and has a fine stone tower. The interior contains a handsome font, and several monuments to the memory of the family of Price, formerly residents here. The living is a rectory, annual value £291, with residence, in the gift of Ralph C. Price, Esq. Here is a free school for boys and girls, supported by Mrs. Wroughton, of Woolley Park, and the Rev. Edmund Price. Philip Wroughton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 232; the area is 1,844 acres.

NORTH and SOUTH FAWLEY, with Whatcombe

Is a parish, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford, situated about 5½ miles south from Wantage.

The church of St. Mary is a very handsome building, which was consecrated on the 12th of April, 1866. The living is a donative, annual value £100, with residence, in the gift of Philip Wroughton, Esq. A new parsonage and schools were erected by the late Philip Wroughton, Esq., of Woolley Park.

The manor of North Fawley, with the church and tithes, and tithes of South Fawley, belonged to the nuns of Ambresbury. Some time after the Reformation, the manors of North and South Fawley became the property of Sir Francis Moore, who had a seat at South Fawley. Philip Wroughton, Esq., is now lord of the manor and owner of the soil. Near Whatcombe House was formerly a Catholic chapel.

The parish comprises 2,870 acres of heavy clay; the population in 1861 was 243.

HAGBOURNE EAST and WEST

ARE two liberties forming one parish, 6 miles from Wallingford, and 53 from London, in the hundred of Moreton, union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford. East Hagbourne is situated on a stream, called, in Saxon times, "Hacca's-Brook," from a person of that name; there is a charter of King Alfred which mentions both Haccan-Burn and Hacca-Broc: it will be seen in Kemble's "Codex Diplomaticus Ævi Saxonici": it rises from a spring, called Shovel Spring.

The church of St. Andrew is principally a Gothic structure, with a portion of the Florid, and an intermixture of the Perpendicular; it has a large square stone tower containing eight excellent bells. The north aisle was built by John Yorke, Esq., who died in the year 1413: in the Lady Chapel, north aisle, is a splendid monument, erected to the memory of John Phillips, Esq. The church has recently been repaired and well restored at the cost of about £1,200, including £210 laid out by the Earl of Craven in the repairs and restoration of the chancel. The living is a vicarage, the tithes of which have been commuted at £200, gross income about £250; patron the Rev. Richard Meredith, M.A., of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, who is also the incumbent. There is a fine old cross at the top of the village, near the church. There are schools for boys and girls. The manor has lately been purchased of the Earl of Craven by Lord Overstone. The total amount of charities, from several legacies, is about £70 annually.

The population in 1861 was 795; the acreage is 1,667. The soil is strong, black, and loamy.

WEST HAGBOURNE is a township and pleasant village, about  $\frac{1}{2}$  of a mile from East Hagbourne. The area of the township is 1,018 $\frac{1}{2}$  acres. John Aldsworth, Esq., Jacob Appleford, Esq., and a few others are the owners of the soil.

HAMPSTEAD-MARSHALL

Is a pleasant village and parish, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union of Newbury, and diocese of Oxford, 4 miles west-south-west from Newbury, 7 south-east from Hungerford, and 13 south from Whitchurch : it is intersected by the Avon and Kennet Canal and the river Kennet. The manor, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, belonged to the Parrys : Sir Thomas Parry, treasurer to the household of that queen, built a fine house here ; about 1620 this manor passed by purchase to the Cravens, and became one of the chief seats of that family ; in the year 1626 Sir William Craven, son of Sir W. Craven, lord mayor of London, was created Baron Craven, of Hampstead-Marshall, and in 1662 Earl, for services which he had rendered to his exiled master during the protectorate of Cromwell, and the losses which he had sustained by confiscation. The same year, the house built by Sir T. Parry having been pulled down, Sir Balthayer Gerbier began a stately pile of building after the model of the Castle of Heidelberg, which was finished in 1665 ; the house was almost wholly destroyed by fire in 1718. Sir B. Gerbier, the architect, died in the parish, and was buried in the church. The present mansion was erected by the late Earl of Craven, and has been from time to time enlarged : the deer park is extensive : it is the seat of the present Earl of Craven, but in the occupation of the Marquis of Donegal, K.P., G.C.H., P.C.

The church is a plain brick building of modern appearance. The living is a rectory, annual value £290, in the patronage of the Earl of Craven, who is also lord of the manor. There is a small chapel for the Independents.

The population in 1861 was 299 ; the parish contains 1,847 acres ; the gross value is £2,498 11s. 3d., and the rateable value, £2,204 5s. 1d.

EAST HENDRED

Is a parish in the hundred and union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Wantage.

The church of St. Augustine of Canterbury is a stone structure, enlarged and rebuilt in the year 1861: it contains a very ancient lectern of the 13th century, and several ancient brasses. The living is a rectory, annual value £600, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. By an entry in the churchwarden's book, dated 22nd April, 1682, it is stated that Catherine Spiser had delivered into the hands of one of the churchwardens for that year £6, to be received to the world's end, for preachment of a sermon; and she has given £6 to the poor of this parish to be given in bread by the churchwardens to the poor present, after the sermon is ended, upon Holy Thursday, to remain to the world's end. There are other charities amounting to nearly £100. There are Church schools, built in 1859; also a Catholic school. The village stands near the Vale of White Horse, and was once a populous and thriving market town, and one of the seats of the cloth manufacture. Several privileges were conferred upon it by a charter of Henry VI. The stewardship of the King's Manor in this parish is a nominal office, in the gift of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and is one of the places which may be accepted for the purpose of vacating a seat in the House of Commons. Here are the remains of an ancient chapel, supposed to have been built by the monks of Sheen. It is now converted into a granary. Here is also a very handsome Catholic church, which has been recently erected; it is dedicated to St. Mary, and well attended.

The population in 1861 was 889; the parish comprises about 3,400 acres of good soil.

WEST HENDRED

Is a parish, in the hundred and union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford, 3½ miles east from Wantage, and intersected by a stream which falls into the Thames near Monkey Island.

The church of Holy Trinity is a small structure. In the registers there are recorded several instances of collections made for the Christians in Poland and elsewhere, for the redemption of captives taken by the Turks, and for the sufferers by the fire in 1666. The living is a vicarage, annual value £751, with residence, in the gift of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel, which has an average attendance of 50 hearers. In 1853 a new building was erected for a mixed school, with residence for the master and mistress; it is a substantial structure.

The population in 1861 was 351; the parish comprises 1,973a. 2r. 9p. of good soil. The principal owners are the President and Fellows of Corpus Christi College, Oxford.

NORTH HINKSEY, with the Hamlet of BOTLEY.

NORTH HINKSEY is a parish, in the hundred of Hormer, union and diocese of Oxford, situated a mile west from Oxford, and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-north-west from Abingdon, on the western bank of the Thames.

The church of St. Lawrence has but one doorway, which is of the Early Norman character. In the interior is a memorial of Thomas Willis, (father of the celebrated Dr. Willis, and ancestor of Browne Willis), who died in the Royal cause at the siege of Oxford. An inscription on the monument of W. Finmore, Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, who died in 1646, begins thus: "Reader, look to thy feet; honest and loyal men are sleeping under them." The benefice is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Earl of Abingdon and the Rev. W. Harcourt alternately.

The parish comprises about 900 acres, chiefly clay, gravel, and loam. The population in 1861 was 438, including that of the hamlet of Botley. The Earl of Abingdon is lord of the manor.

SEACOURT is an extra parochial district, comprising one farm in the occupation of Mr. F. J. Brooks, and the property of Lincoln College, Oxford. It is one mile from Oxford.

Letters arrive through Oxford at 7.30 a.m.; dispatched at 10.45 p.m. The box closes at 9 p.m.

SOUTH AND NEW HINKSEY

Form a parish in the hundred of Hormer, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford, one mile south from Oxford, and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles north from Abingdon.

The church of St. Lawrence is a plain Gothic structure, with nave, chancel, and square tower. The benefice is a perpetual curacy, with that of Wootton annexed, joint annual value-£183, in the patronage of the Earl of Abingdon. The Earl of Abingdon is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil.

The population in 1861 was 636; the parish comprises about 550 acres of clay, gravel, and loamy soil.

New HINKSEY is a hamlet about three-quarters of a mile from the church.

HINTON WALDRISH

Is a village and parish, in the union of Faringdon, hundred of Ganfield, and diocese of Oxford. It was formerly a market town, and has the neighbouring hamlet of Duxford annexed to it. It is about 6 miles east from Faringdon, 9 from Abingdon, and 11 from Oxford.

The church of St. Margaret is a low cruciform structure, supposed to be 1,500 years old. It has been lately thoroughly restored and re-seated, and a very handsome stone pulpit erected. The living is a rectory, in the gift of John Loder Symonds, Esq., and is valued in the King's Books at £23 7s. 6d. ; its present income is nearly £500, with residence, held by the Rev. William Jephson, M.A. Hinton House, the seat of John Loder Symonds, Esq., who is lord of the manor. and to whom the entire land of the parish belongs, adjoins the church, and is of considerable antiquity. Its situation is very elevated, commanding a rich agricultural landscape, including a distant view of the hills of White Horse. The house was formerly surrounded by a moat, which has been partially filled up, and converted into a bowling green.

The population in 1861 was 329 ; the acreage is 1,847.

HUNGERFORD

Is an ancient market town 23 miles west-by-south from Reading, and 64 from London (by rail 61), 27 from Sarum, 26 from Oxford, and 24 from Devizes, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford. Hungerford is situated on the western border of the county of Berks, and a part of the town is in the county of Wilts.

The government is vested in a constable, who is elected annually, and burgesses, who have borne the office of constable. The manor of Hungerford, with the appurtenances of common and fishery, is held under the Crown, and is supposed to have been granted by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and is vested in certain of the inhabitants of the town who are called feoffees; these feoffees, as lords of the manor, hold a very ancient court at Hocktide; the court is summoned by blowing a horn, supposed to have been given by John of Gaunt. Some curious old charters are preserved in the town chest. The constable of Hungerford for the time being is coroner by charter for the liberty of Hungerford. The scenery around is very picturesque, and the town exceedingly healthy. The hunting in the neighbourhood is good and well supported; the Craven hounds meet very near the town, the kennels being about 3 miles distant, at Newtown Lodge, the residence of James T. Coxe, Esq., who has been the master since 1861. The rivers Kennet, Avon, and Dun, which pass through the town, are celebrated for the fineness of their trout; the fishery extends for some miles, and is strictly preserved by the town authorities, who grant tickets to visitors at reasonable charges. The town has had very important rights conferred upon it at various periods, of which may be mentioned some very valuable down and marsh land, on which the commoners of Hungerford have a right of depasturing cattle. The land around is famous for the growth of barley, and the water meadows are highly productive and valuable.

A Savings' Bank has been established some years; the trustees meet every Wednesday at twelve.

The Union House, built some few years ago, stands on an elevated and healthy site. The board sits every Wednesday during the winter months, and once a fortnight in the summer. The union comprises the following parishes:—Aldbourn (Wilts), Avington, Baydon (Wilts), Blagrove, Buttermere (Wilts), Charnham Street (Wilts), Chilton Foliat (Wilts and Berks), Combe (Hants), East Garston, East Shefford, Eastbury and Bockhampton, Eddington, Hidden and Newtown, Froxfield (Wilts), Great Bedwyn (Wilts), Hadley, Ham (Wilts), Hippenscombe (Wilts), Hungerford (Berks and Wilts), Inkpen, Kintbury Lambourn, Little Bedwyn (Wilts), Ramsbury (Wilts), Sandon Fee, Shalbourn (Berks and Wilts), Tidcombe (Wilts), West Shefford and West Woodhay.

The church of St. Lawrence, which is a modern erection, stands on the site of the old one; it is a neat and commodious building, with square tower containing six bells. It contains several memorials, and affixed to the wall is a small tablet of yellow marble, formerly a portion of the tomb of Sir Robert de Hungerford, who died in the reign of King Edward III., and was buried in a chapel on the south side of the church, having his effigy, crossed-legged, carved in stone; this effigy now lies, much mutilated, in the churchyard. The parish register dates from the year 1559.

The living is a vicarage, annual value £522, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, and held by the Rev. William Cookson, M.A. The curates are the Rev. Robert Chilton, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, and the Rev. William Joseph Baron, M.A., of Queen's College, Oxford.

The charities are :—John Hamblin left £4 to the master of the Free school for teaching four boys, and £4 to buy clothes the week before Easter, and the interest of £100, 10s. to the minister to preach a sermon to the poor on the 9th of January, 6s. to the singers, 4s. to the clerk, and the remainder to buy bread; Mrs. Curtis, by will, dated 1662, settled land in trust; E. Lawrence, by will, 1698, gave £5 out of copyhold property to apprentice a boy; Sir E. Hungerford, 1692, gave an annuity of £10 for apprenticing two boys or girls; Mr. J. Lucas, 1698, gave £10 to the poor of Hungerford for clothing; Sir Vincent Smith, by deed, 1626, gave 40s. for two boys to be apprenticed; Mr. Hobbs, 1625, by deed, gave 52s. for bread for the poor; Mrs. E. Cummins, by will, 1743, gave the interest of £699 14s. 6d. Old South Sea Annuities, for the education of boys and to buy bread; Mr. M. Whitelock gave the interest of £50 consols to keep their family monument in repair.

The Free Grammar school was founded in 1653 by Dr. Sheaf, and is supported by endowments from the founder and other individuals, for 9 boys educated on the foundation.

There is a Wesleyan and an Independent chapel, which are neat structures, besides two for Primitive Methodists.

The county court is held at the Town Hall.

The inhabitants of Hungerford are, by charter, exempt from toll in the different fairs and markets throughout the kingdom.

The petty sessions are held at the Town Hall every Wednesday at 2 o'clock. G. C. Cherry, Esq., of Denford House, presides as chairman.

A branch of the Great Western Railway has a station here.

The Hungerford corps of the Royal Berks Yeomanry Cavalry is the only one in the county.

Hungerford Park was formerly the residence of the Barons of Hungerford, who took their name and title from this place. The mansion occupies the site of the old house, which was built by Queen Elizabeth, and given to the Earl of Essex.

The parish is divided into four tythings. The total population in 1861 was 3,001; the area is 5,300 acres.

HURLEY

Is a very beautiful village and parish, situated in a valley, on the bank of the river Thames, surrounded by an amphitheatre of richly-cultivated woodland hills, and is remarkable for the salubrity of its air. It is in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, and diocese of Oxford, 4 miles from Henley, 3 from Marlow, 5 from Maidenhead,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  from Twyford, 12 from Reading, and 31 from London.

The church of St. Mary is of great antiquity, in the Norman style. It was consecrated in the year 1086 by Osmund the Good, Count of Seez, in Normandy, afterwards Earl of Dorset, Lord High Chancellor of England. It was restored in 1851 at a cost of £1,500; the original windows on the north side, which were formerly closed, were re-opened and those on the south side restored, one decorated window of remarkable beauty being allowed to remain and break the uniformity of design. A vestry-room was added to the east end of the church, separated from the chancel only by a fine Norman screen. There are about 130 additional sittings. The pulpit, reading-desk, and communion-table are in admirable taste. There are several monuments in the church and chancel, one of which is of great antiquity, to the memory of Lord Lovelace and family. The living is a vicarage, annual value £263, with residence, in the gift of and held by the Rev. Florence James Wethered, M.A., surrogate. The vicarage, a handsome edifice, was enlarged in 1850, and converted into a building of the Elizabethan style. Here was a cell of Benedictine monks, which was given to Westminster Abbey by Jeffrey de Magna Villa, or Mandeville, in the reign of William the Conqueror. The foundations of the original monastery still remain, forming a vault where, a few years ago three bodies were discovered in their Benedictine habits.

The population in 1861 was 1,184.

HURST

Is a parish about 7 miles long, and consists of the townships of TWYFORD, the liberties of BROAD HINTON, WHISTLEY-IN-HURST, WINNERSH, and NEWLAND. The latter liberty, with a great part of Winnersh, has been formed into the ecclesiastical district of St. Catherine's, Bearwood. It is 6 miles from Reading, 3 from the Great Western Railway station at Twyford  $7\frac{1}{2}$  from Henley, 10 from Maidenhead, and  $34\frac{1}{2}$  from London, in the union of Wokingham, hundred of Charlton, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Nicholas has an embattled tower with six bells, which was rebuilt in 1612. The pulpit is of carved oak, of the style of James I.'s reign. There is a splendid marble monument, of the seventeenth century, to the memory of Lady Margaret Saville, widow of Sir Henry Saville, founder of the Savillian Professorship of Oxford. It is composed of six marble figures in the attitude of prayer, under a marble canopy with drapery, supported on each side by an angel, the whole of exquisite workmanship. There are also others of some interest, including two brasses of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The living is a perpetual curacy, with Twyford annexed, annual value £173, recently augmented to £400, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. Archibald Allen Cameron, M.A., of Pembroke College, Oxford. There are almshouses for eight poor people, with a donation to them and their successors for ever of 6d. per day, besides a new garment every second year; also several other donations. Among the most prominent of the donors are Mr. Richard Bigg, Lady Dorothy Harrison, Lady Frances Winchcomb, and William Harman, Esq., who left £500, the interest of which is distributed in coals every Christmas. There is a National school principally supported by subscription. The Right Hon. Lord Braybrooke is lord of the manor.

The population of the whole parish in 1861 was 2,630; the acreage is 6,846.

BROAD HINTON is a liberty, formerly belonging to Wiltshire, with a population in 1861 of 531.

EAST ILSLEY

Is a small market town and parish, 9 miles from Newbury, 11 south-west from Abingdon, 9 from the Didcot and 7 from the Steventon stations of the Great Western Railway, and 56 west from London, in the hundred of Compton, union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford. It is surrounded by a ridge of downs, which extend for some miles, a part of which are cultivated, and the remainder are sheep-walks. Ilsley has long been noted for its sheep-markets and fairs. The markets commence on the Wednesday fortnight before Easter, and sometimes earlier, and continue every alternate Wednesday till July. The sheep and lamb fairs are held from Easter till November. The fairs are on Wednesday in Easter week for sheep; Wednesday in Whitsun week for sheep; the first Wednesday in July for wool; the 1st of August, for lambs; 26th August for sheep and lambs (this is the largest fair in the year, and as many as 50,000 sheep and lambs have been brought for sale on this day); Wednesday after the 19th September, for sheep and lambs; October 13th, for hiring servants and pleasure; Wednesday after October 17th, for sheep; and Wednesday after 12th November for sheep. Dealers and graziers come from all parts of the country to purchase stock at these fairs; to be sent into the grazing districts. Coursing meetings are held on the downs, which are well adapted for training horses, the turf being springy and light.

The church of St. Mary is a very ancient fabric, of the old Norman style of architecture. It was enlarged and repewed in 1845. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of Magdalen College, Oxford, value £722 per annum, with 64 acres of glebe and residence. There is a National school. Captain Woodley, R.N., is lord of the manor; and Col. Loyd-Lindsay is chief landowner.

The population in 1861 was 746; the area is 2,845 acres. The soil is chalk and gravel.

INKPEN

Is a parish, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union of Hungerford, and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles south-east-by-south from Hungerford.

The church is a small ancient structure of flint and stone. In the interior are memorials to the Butler family. The living is a rectory, annual value £520, in the patronage of John Butler, Esq., and held by the Rev. John Butler, M.A., of Trinity College, Oxford. Here is a National school for boys and girls, supported by the rector. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel, and the Wesleyans have a chapel and Sunday school. Mr. John Butler left by will £200 the interest to be divided amongst the aged poor at Christmas. In this parish rises the river Auborn, running in an eastward direction till it reaches Hide-end, in Bimpton parish, then, bending northward, runs in an oblique line between Brimpton and Wasing, and falls into the Kennet, a little below Wasing. Its course is about 17 miles, and forms the boundary between this county and Hampshire. Kirby House is the residence of John Butler, Esq.

The parish comprises 2,789 acres, chiefly the property of the Earl of Craven, who is lord of the manor. The rateable value is £3,116 14s. 11d. The population in 1861 was 748.

KINGSTON BAGPUZE

Is a village and parish in the hundred of Ock, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford, 6 miles west from Abingdon, and derives its name from the land having been bestowed by William the Norman on Sir Richard Bagpuze, one of his followers.

The church of St. John the Baptist is a small structure, rebuilt in 1799. The living is a rectory, annual value £298 with residence, in the patronage of the Master and Fellows of St. John's College, Oxford. Here is a day school, in which 20 boys selected from the parishes of Kingston Bagpuze, Longworth, Fyfield, and Garford, are educated from the proceeds of an endowment bequeathed in 1736 by John Flandy, Esq., and subsequently augmented by his son. There are other charities, amounting to about £10 10s. per annum. At New Bridge in this parish the Parliamentary army was repulsed by the King's, whilst attempting to cross, on the 27th of May, 1644. John Blandy Jenkins, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil.

The population in 1861 was 283. The parish comprises about 1,180 acres.

KINGSTON LISLE

Is a chapelry, with the hamlet of Fawler, in the parish of Sparsholt, union of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, and diocese of Oxford, 2½ miles from Uffington railway station on the Great Western line, 6 from Faringdon, and 5 from Wantage. The chapel is a small rough-cast Gothic structure. The living is attached to the vicarage of Sparsholt, and under the impropriation of Queen's College, Oxford, joint annual value £363, with residence, in the gift of Queen's College, Oxford. Near the village is a very singular stone, called the "Blowing Stone," being a large perforated Sarsden, brought from the adjoining hills; this being hastily blown through, emits a sound which can be heard at a distance of six miles. It is situated close to a tree in front of a respectable and comfortable inn, kept by Mr. Henry Willis. Edwin Martin-Atkins, J.P., who is lord of the manor, and the Earl of Craven are the principal landowners.

The population in 1861 was—Kingston Lisle, 236; Fawler, 134; the acreage is 2,060.

The hamlet of Fawler comprises two farmhouses and some cottages, situated about half a mile from the church.

Letters arrive from Wantage.

KINTBURY

Is a large parish and much improved and respectable village, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union of Hungerford, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the river Kennet, and intersected by the Kennet and Avon Canal, about 3 miles from Hungerford. The manor of Kintbury Amesbury belonged to the nuns of Amesbury, having been given to them at the first foundation of their monastery by Queen Elfrida; in 1542 it was granted to John Cheyne; not long afterwards it came to the Darrells, from whom it passed in marriage, in 1670, with the daughter and heiress of Sir John Darrell to Sir John Elwes, who sold it to P. Jemmet, Esq., alderman of London; his daughter brought it in marriage to Sir J. Raymond; it afterwards became the property of Charles Dundas, Esq.; one of the knights of the shire, who resided on this estate at Barton Court. Mrs. Dundas's grandfather, Thomas Whitley, Esq., of Aston Hall, Flintshire, married Anne, daughter of T. Loder, Esq., of Balsdon Park, in this parish, by his wife Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir J. Raymond, above mentioned. Mr. Dunlas was created, 1832, Baron Amesbury, of Kintbury Amesbury and Barton Court, in Berks, and of Aston Hall, county of Flint; his lordship died June 30th, 1832, aged 80. The manor of Kintbury Holt was given to the nuns of Eaton, in Warwickshire, by their founder, Robert Bossu, Earl of Leicester; it is now the property of the Earl of Craven. The manors of Denford were formerly the property of the Longespees, Earls of Salisbury; they are now the property of G. C. Cherry, Esq., J.P. A chapel was erected and endowed by the late G. H. Cherry, Esq., contiguous to Denford House, and a district assigned to it in 1832.

The church of St. Mary is an ancient and handsome Gothic structure. In the interior are several ancient monuments to the memory of the families of the present and former lords of the manor. The parish register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, annual value £800, with residence, in the gift of, and held by, the Rev. James Whitley Deans Dundas, M.A., of Magdalene College, Cambridge: the curate is the Rev. John Scale.

Christ Church, situated at Half-way, about a mile from the village, is a substantial and handsome brick edifice, which has been recently erected. It has an ecclesiastical district assigned to it, and was consecrated on the 28th of May, 1867.

Denford House is the seat of G. C. Cherry, Esq. Wormstall, the seat of Charles Vickers, Esq., is a very handsome and substantial building of Bath stone. The ornamental grounds are tastefully laid out, and the conservatory is very pretty. The stables also deserve particular notice. Inglewood House, the seat of Mrs. Dunn, is a fine mansion, surrounded by handsome ornamental grounds, which are kept in nice order under the superintendence of Mr. Todd, the head gardener. In 1866 Mrs. Dunn, in compliance with the wishes of her husband, the late General Dunn, erected, entirely at her own cost, baths, laundries, and cook-shops for the benefit of the inhabitants, who are supplied with cooked meat, &c., at a moderate charge. She also erected gasworks, and the first lights were lit October 25th, 1866.

Here are National schools for boys, girls, and infants; the average attendance is over 200. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Brick and whiting making is carried on in the parish. Here is a station on the Berks and Hants Extension Railway. Kintbury, anciently called Kennetbury, gives name to the hundred in which it is situated, and was formerly a market town, and had two fairs.

The population in 1861 was 1,802; the acreage is 7,645; the gross value is £12,153 2s. 3d., and the rateable value £10,289 19s. 2d. The chief proprietors of the soil are the Earl of Craven, G. C. Cherry, Esq., the Rev. J. W. Deane Dundas, Mrs. Dunn, and Charles Vickers, Esq.

LAMBORNE

Is a town and parish, in the hundred of Lamborne, union of Hungerford, and diocese of Oxford, 65 miles from London, and 8 from Hungerford. The parish comprises the market town of CHIPPING LAMBORNE, and the tythings of UPPER LAMBORNE, EASTBURY, BOCKHAMPTON, BLAGRAVE, and Hadley.

The church of St. Michael is an ancient cruciform structure, chiefly in the Norman, Early English, and Perpendicular styles of architecture. In the south transept or chapel is a marble monument, with a recumbent figure in armour, representing John D. Estbury; the stained glass windows are memorial windows, by Williment, inserted by H. Hippisley, Esq., of Lamborne Place; here are also some fine-ornamented brasses to the Estbury and Garrard families. The living is a vicarage, annual value £204, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. On the north side of the church are almshouses for ten poor men, founded by John, the son of Thomas Estbury, in 1502; the inmates were formerly required to repair every morning and evening to prayers around the above-mentioned tomb. Henry Hippisley, Esq., J.P., of Lamborne Place, and the Warden of New College, Oxford, are the supervisors, and have the management of this charity. National schools for boys and girls have been built by local contributions and grants from Government and different societies; there are now a master, mistress, and infant schoolmistress. Petty sessions are held at the police station on the last Friday in every month.

A neat church, parsonage house, and schoolroom have been erected at a distant part of the parish, called THE WOODLANDS, and endowed with upwards of £100 per annum, by the munificence of Misses Seymour: it is now a distinct ecclesiastical parish, the living being a perpetual curacy, in the gift of John Aldridge, Esq. Here are places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. There is also a Free school at Eastbury. A church, St. James's, has lately been erected by subscription in the hamlet of Eastbury. The Red Lion and the George are the principal inns.

The population in 1861 was 2,529; the area of the parish is 14,788 acres.

LETCOMBE REGIS with East and West Challow

LETCOMBE REGIS is a parish and village in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford, about a mile and a half from Wantage, on the Wilts and Berks Canal. The parish is intersected by a branch of the river Ock.

The church of St. Andrew is a Gothic structure, with nave, chancel, and square embattled tower containing six bells; the font and east window are fair specimens of the architecture of the date in which the church was built. The earliest date of register is 1607. The living is a vicarage, annual value £245, which is burdened with a debt of £600 for the vicarage house, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester, and held by the Rev. Edward Stanley James, M.A., of Merton College, Oxford. Thomas Parr, Esq., is lay rector. There are in this parish two objects of interest to antiquarians, one of these is the castle, an ancient Roman encampment, from which the beautiful hill behind the village has received the name of the Castle Hill; the other is the curious moat which surrounds the residence of Mr. John Rowles, a modern structure now occupying the site of what is supposed by some to have been a royal hunting box in the days of King John. A school, with teacher's dwelling, was erected by subscription in 1856. T. Parr, Esq., is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 431; the parish comprises about 3,720 acres. The rateable value in 1866 was £3,081.

MAIDENHEAD

MAIDENHEAD is a corporate borough and market town, possessing a distinct jurisdiction; it stands in the two parishes of Bray and Cookham, on the banks of the Thames, which is here crossed by a fine stone bridge, erected at a cost of £20,000; the town stands on the Old Bath Road, and is in the union of Cookham and diocese of Oxford, distant from London (by road) 26 miles, 13 from Reading, 9 from Henley, and 6 from Windsor. There are two stations here on the Great Western Railway, the Taplow and Maidenhead, 22½ miles from Paddington, and Boyne Hill and Maidenhead, on the Wycombe branch, 24½ miles from Paddington.

The chapel of St. Andrew and St. Mary Magdalene, is a modern building, originally a chantry, founded by Margaret of France, second consort of Edward I. The living is a perpetual curacy, and was formerly in the patronage of the corporation of Maidenhead, who sold it, under the Municipal Reform Act, to Ebenezer Fuller Maitland, Esq.; it is of the annual value of £163, with residence.

There is a National school, supported by voluntary subscriptions; also an Infant school, under the control of seven trustees.

An almshouse, for eight poor men and their wives, was founded and endowed by James Smythe, Esq., in 1639, with £40 per annum for coals. Sir Isaac and Lady Pocock left large sums of money for charitable purposes, viz., to supply a number of poor families with weekly portions of bread, besides 100 families with bread, meat and coals at Christmas; £100 every two years, to be divided in sums of £10 each to servants of good character who shall have lived in one family for seven years at one time. There is a stone lock on the river, about half a mile above the bridge, called the Ray Mill Lock. Wednesday is the market day.

There are three annual fairs—on the Wednesday in Whitsun week, the 29th of September, and the 30th of November, principally for horses, horned cattle, and pigs.

The surrounding neighbourhood is very picturesque; the views of the wooded slopes on the Buckinghamshire bank of the river are unequalled.

The population in 1861 was 3,895.

NEWBURY with SPEENHAMLAND

NEWBURY is in the hundred of Faircross, union of its name, and diocese of Oxford, on the river Kennet, and intersected by the Avon and Kennet Canal, over which is a neat stone bridge; it is 56 miles west from London and 17 from Reading. The town is of very ancient origin. Antonine makes mention of the old city of Spinæ, and Newbury, as its name infers, arose and had beginning out of the ruins of it: therefore, as Camden properly has it, "Newburie must acknowledge Speen as its mother." The town, on the accession of the Normans, fell to the Earl of Perche, whose successor, Thomas, was slain at the Battle of Lincoln. The Bishop of Chalons, the heir, sold it to William Marescall, Earl of Pembroke, which Earl had then possession of Hampstead Park, whose present proprietor is the Earl of Craven. Hampstead Marshall appertained to the Mareschals of England, and as such was held by the Earls of Pembroke. Queen Elizabeth gave it and Beenham Vallence "to John Baptista Castilion, a Piedmontese of her Privy Chamber, for faithful services in her dangers." By purchase Hampstead Marshall and Beenham Vallence became the property of Sir William Craven, Lord Mayor of London, the ancestor of the Craven family, in whose possession it remains. The Earls of Craven have generally been High Stewards of Newbury. Newbury is known in English history as the place in which two battles between King Charles I. and his Parliament took place; both these battles, according to Clarendon, were favourable to the Royal cause.

The town is rich in almshouses. The Hospital of St. Bartholomew is an ancient foundation, the charter of which is said to have been granted by King John. The charity has an income of £900 a year. It supports 24 almshouses, a Free school (Rev. W. Cole, M.A., head master), and a chapel, called the Litten, in which prayers are said four times a week for the benefit of the almspeople. At this chapel John Winchcombe, the famous clothier, and commonly known as Jack of Newbury, is stated to have been married. This Jack furnished 100 of his own men, clothed and paid them, for King Henry, and sent them to Flodden Field. Henry afterwards visited Jack at Newbury, and was by him entertained in great state. It is said that when the king visited Jack he attended divine service, when Jack covered the streets with cloth, upon which the king offered him knighthood, which, however, Jack declined, but requested his Majesty to grant him one request, viz., to disfranchise the borough, which the king granted. In addition to the above there are upwards of 60 almshouses, of various foundations, in different parts of the town. For the maintenance of these £3,500 is received yearly.

Newbury was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth and James I., and Charles II. granted it additional privileges. The town is now governed by the council, which consists of a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors. An Act of Parliament was obtained in the year 1825 for the improvement, lighting, paving, &c., of the borough.

The church of St. Nicholas is a spacious edifice, in the later style of Gothic architecture, and supposed to have been erected at the end of the reign of Henry VII.; the chancel has been thoroughly restored, both internally and on the outside, under the direction of H. Woodyer, Esq., of Graffham; the organ is by Bevington, and the glass of the east window by Hardman. The living is a rectory, annual value £380, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford.

St. John's Church, opened in July 1860, is a new brick building in the Decorated style, and has nave, chancel, north aisle, turret and two bells; the church is entirely free, and will accommodate 500 persons. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £170, in the gift of the bishop of the diocese.

St. Joseph's Catholic church, situated at Speenhamland, was erected in 1863. It is a neat building having sittings for about 200 persons. The Rev. F. E. Riley, is priest.

There are chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, Baptists, Presbyterians, and the Society of Friends.

A Corn Exchange, situated in the Market place, was opened on the 4th June, 1862; it is a commodious and handsome building which cost about £6,000. A wool market was commenced on the 30th June, 1862, at which there was deposited 2,300 tods of wool; this is to be an annual market in the same month.

The Literary and Scientific Institution contains a library of 800 volumes; a museum has been added, containing objects of general and local interest.

Fairs—Holy Thursday, July 5th, September 4th, November 8th; these are held, with the exception of September 4th, in the Market place; for stalls and for cheese in Northbrook street; the September fair is held in a small meadow on the south of the town, near which, in another field, the horse and cow fairs are held: besides these fairs there is a large hiring market, held on the first Thursday after Old Michaelmas day.

A branch of the Great Western Railway from Reading is now open.

The union of Newbury comprises the following places:—Boxford, Brimpton, Chieveley, Enborne, Greenham, Hampstead Marshall, Leckhampstead, Midgham, Newbury, Newton-near-Newbury (Hants), Sandlesford, Shaw-cum-Donnington, Speen, Thatcham, Wasing, Welford, Winterbourn, Woolhampton.

The population in 1861 was 6,161; the acreage is 1,722.

RADLEY

Is a parish, in the hundred of Hormer, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-east from Abingdon, and west of the Thames. It includes the liberty of Thruppwick, and part of the township of Kennington.

The church of St. James is a handsome, Gothic structure, with nave, chancel, south aisle, and square embattled tower; since 1857 the church has been restored by private subscriptions. The roofs were opened, and the whole church re-slatted; open seats have been substituted for the old ones, and the transept has been rebuilt. Against the south wall of the chancel is a handsome monument to the memory of Sir William Stonehouse, containing the effigies of Sir William and his lady. The register dates from 1599, and contains several entries of the burials of soldiers who served in the Cromwellian army. The living is a donative vicarage, in the gift of Sir George Bowyer, Bart., M.P.

The manor belonged to the abbot and convent of Abingdon, and after the dissolution was purchased by George Stonehouse, Esq., one of the clerks of the Board of Green Cloth in the reign of Elizabeth. The manor, in 1792, passed by will to Captain, afterwards Admiral, Bowyer; he was the eldest son of Sir William Bowyer, Bart., of Denham, Bucks. The village school has been altered and improved. Sir George Bowyer, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil which is a rich loam. The Hall, situated in a fine park, is a handsome square building.

The population in 1861, including St. Peter's College, was 484; the parish comprises upwards of 3,000 acres. Here is a National school.

THRUPP and WICK form a liberty, with a population in 1861 of 16;

KENNINGTON is a township, partly in this parish and partly in Sunningwell. The population of the portion in this parish is 61. Here is a chapel of ease and a school for boys and girls.

READING

Is a large and ancient market and assize town, parliamentary and municipal borough, having separate jurisdiction. It is the head of a poor law union, inland revenue collection, county court circuit, and a polling place for the county, situated on the banks of the river Kennet, near its junction with the Thames; three bridges cross the first river, and there is one over the latter; it is bounded on the north by Caversham, in Oxfordshire, on the south by Charlton, on the west by Theale, and on the east by Sonning, 8 miles south-west from Henley-on-Thames, 26 south-east from Abingdon, 68 east from Bath, 23 south-west from Maidenhead, 17 east from Newbury, 20 south-east from Wantage, 16 west from Windsor, 16 north from Basingstoke, 45 north from Southampton, 15 south-east from Wallingford, 28 south-east from Oxford, and 39 south-west from London; a first-class station on the Great Western Railway, a terminus of the South Eastern and also of the South Western Railways occupying a joint station, and the junction of the railways from Birmingham, Oxford, Devizes, Hungerford, and Basingstoke, with the Great Western line to London.

Reading lays claim to high antiquity, though its origin is uncertain; it was inhabited by the Saxons before the incursions of the Danes, and once possessed two castles, a magnificent abbey, and other monastic establishments of great extent and importance, the remains of which are even now very considerable. Reading is situated on two small eminences, whose declivities fall into a pleasant vale, highly improved by the branches of the Kennet, which flow through it and unite with the Thames at the extremity of the town; on the banks of the former river are some excellent wharfs; it is navigable to Newbury, Froxfield, &c. The Kennet and Avon Canal opens a communication with the Severn.

The Forbury, fronting the ancient gateway of the Abbey, is an open space and beautiful outwork on the north-east side of the town, laid out as a pleasure garden, with a fountain and ornamental works. A Russian gun, presented by the Government to the authorities of the town, occupies an elevated position in these public grounds; the view from here is extensive, commanding a beautiful prospect over a great part of Oxfordshire.

The houses in the town are mostly built of red brick. It possesses some excellent streets, which are well paved and of capital width; they are all lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are plentifully supplied with water.

There are nine churches, nine dissenting chapels, town hall, re-erected 1785, repaired and altered 1863; corn exchange and market house, built 1854; a borough and also a county police station, magistrates' offices, theatre, gasworks, waterworks, baths, athensæum, public hall, literary institution, savings' bank, county gaol, assize courts; Free Grammar school, founded 1486, endowed with two scholarships of £100 each, at St. John's College, Oxford; a Blue Coat school for boys, Green Coat school for girls, and schools on the British, National, Infant, Ragged, Sunday, and other systems; Kendrick's, Vachel's, Hall's, and other almshouses; Royal Berkshire hospital, opened 1839; public dispensary, and two workhouses for Reading union. There are three banks—Stephens, Blandy & Co., J. and C. Simonds & Co., and a branch of the London and County; and three newspapers, the "Reading Mercury," established 1722, "Berkshire Chronicle," and the "Berks Telegraph," all weekly publications.

Reading for the most part is dependent on the country around for its trade and prosperity, and being the centre of a large circle, and situated in the midst of an agricultural district, all the supplies of the neighbouring population are drawn from the traders and merchants of the town: but its chief trade and business in the shape of manufactures is to be found in its biscuit works, iron foundries, engine works, seed growing, malting and brewing; the sale of corn, flour, and cattle is carried on upon an extensive scale; there are boat building establishments, and pottery and brick works; and rope, mats, twine, sacks, brushes, broom handles, broom stocks and staves are made. The large biscuit manufactory of Messrs. Huntley and Palmer, in the King's road, is the most extensive establishment of the kind in the kingdom; here about 1000 hands meet with employment in making the "Reading Biscuits," and preparing and packing them for the home trade and for exportation.

The market days are Wednesday and Saturday for corn, Saturday for stock cattle, and Monday for fat cattle. Fairs are held on February 2, May 1 for cattle, July 25 for cattle, September 25 for cheese, cattle, &c. October 21 for hops. The races are held in August, in the King's meadow.

Reading borough returns two members to Parliament, and is divided into three wards—Abbey Ward, Castle Ward, and Church Ward. The corporation consists of a high steward, a mayor (returning officer), 6 aldermen, and 18 town councillors. The municipal and parliamentary boundaries are alike.

The population in 1851 was 21,456; in 1861 the population had increased to 25,045; inhabiting 4,859 houses.

The borough police force consists of a chief superintendent, 3 inspectors, 5 sergeants, and 23 constables. The Police Station is in London street, and petty sessions are held there on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, at 11 o'clock. The quarter sessions for the borough are held on a Thursday in the same week as the sessions for the county.

The spring assizes and courts of quarter sessions for the county are held here, the latter in the next week after the 11th October, 28th December, 31st March, and 24th June. Petty sessions for the county are held every Saturday.

The head-quarters of the county constabulary are at Reading, and the county police station is in the Forbury. The whole force of the county consists of 91 men, 8 superintendents, 2 inspectors, 12 sergeants, and a chief constable; total 114: Colonel Adam Blandy is the chief constable, and Wm. Grant is chief clerk and superintendent. The reserve force of the county is stationed here.

Reading union comprises the parishes of St. Giles, population 9,456, acres 2,538; St. Lawrence, population 4,736, acres 315; St. Mary, population 10,853, acres 1,846; also the tything of Southcot, in the parish of St. Mary, population 87; and the hamlet of Whitley, in the parish of St. Giles, population 744; total area of Reading union, 4,699 acres; total population of the same in 1861 was 25,876; in 1851 it was 22,175. There are two union houses, one in Coley street and the other in Friar street. The Board of Guardians meet every Thursday.

Reading is in the diocese of Oxford, and comprises the parishes of St. Giles, St. Lawrence, and St. Mary, with the tything of Southcot and hamlet of Whitley, and the following churches are included in the above ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

The church of St. Giles stands on the east side of Horn street. It suffered much from the artillery of the besiegers during the Civil War. The living is a vicarage, value £522 yearly, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford.

The church of St. Lawrence is an ancient structure of flint and stone, erected in 1434 on the site of an old church of the same name; it stands in the Market place, and has a large square tower 89 feet high containing 10 bells, the largest weighing 4,109 lbs.; there is a good clock; a handsome fountain has been erected close to the western doorway. The living is a vicarage, value £276, in the gift of St. John's College, Oxford.

St. Mary's church stands at the end of Minster street, on a spot once occupied by a nunnery; it was rebuilt from materials obtained from the ruins of Reading Abbey in 1551. The living is a vicarage, value £661 yearly, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford.

Trinity church, erected 1826, is on the north side of Oxford street: it is a plain quadrangular building of brick, with a stone front, in which are three lancet-headed windows. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £250, in the patronage of the Rev. G. Hulme.

St. John's church is a brick building, with a stone front, erected 1837: it stands on the north side of Watlington street. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £175, in the gift of the Rev. F. French.

St. Mary's episcopal chapel, erected in 1799 as a Dissenting chapel, was opened in 1836 in connexion with the Church of England: it stands on the north side of Castle street, and has a pediment portico supported by Corinthian columns. The income of the incumbent is about £500 yearly, in the gift of trustees.

All Saints' church, on the north side of the Bath road. The exterior is of blue Bristol stone and Bath stone dressings.

Grey Friars' church, at the corner of the Caversham road, has been constructed from the ancient church of the monastery of the Grey Friars. and north and south transepts added.

Christ church, a fine stone building, stands at the top of the Kendrick road, in the hamlet of Whitley. It has chancel, north aisle, north transept, and tower at the north, a painted window in the north aisle, given by the teachers and scholars of St. Giles' National school: there is a good organ. The living is a perpetual curacy.

Saint James's Catholic church, situated in the Forbury, is a pretty building of flint stone. The interior arrangements are very good; the windows are of stained glass, and the altar is very handsome. The Very Rev. John Ringrose, D.D., is priest,

There are three Independent, two Baptists, one Wesleyan, and one Primitive Methodist Chapel, a Methodist Free church, a Friends' meeting house, and a room where the Brethren meet.

Reading Cemetery occupies 10 acres of land, 6 of which are for the church, and the remainder for dissenters: it was opened in 1842, and is neatly laid out. There are two chapels, in which services are performed when burials take place.

The ancient history of Reading is involved in obscurity, and the origin of the town is not definitely known. By some it is supposed to have been founded by the Romans. It is written in the Domesday Book of William the Norman "Redinges;" according to the description given in that book it contained only about 28 houses. The abbey was founded by Henry I. in 1121, and ranked among the most wealthy in the kingdom, the abbots being mitred, and, among other privileges, had those of coining money and conferring the honour of knighthood. It was one of the favourite abodes of Henry, who died and was buried here in 1135, as were also his queen Adeliza and his eldest son William. Henry II. and Henry III. passed much of their time here. Edward IV. received his queen, Elizabeth Woodville, at the Abbey, as is testified by a beautiful illuminated missal in the British Museum. Parliaments were held here in 1466-67; the meetings were mostly convened in the great hall of the abbey. Queen Elizabeth visited Reading in 1568, 1572, 1575, 1592, 1602, and 1603; a seat was fitted up for her in St. Lawrence's church, and the body of the church strewn with flowers and rushes. Michaelmas Term was held here in 1625, on account of the plague raging in London; the law courts assembled in the great hall of the abbey, the town hall, and council chamber. In 1643 the town sustained a very severe siege by the Parliamentarians, under the command of the Earl of Essex; the town itself was strongly fortified. Essex having summoned the town to surrender, received an answer from Sir Arthur Aston that "he would starve or die in it." Operations were then commenced, and Essex having taken a fortification at Mapledurham and another on Caversham Hill, which gave him the command of the town, it was much battered by the shot; it, however, sustained the siege for a fortnight, and the governor, having sustained severe injury by the falling of a brick, was incapable of the command, which was given to Colonel Fielding. The garrison, however, having exhausted their ammunition, at length hung out a flag of truce, at which juncture Prince Rupert and the King, who had marched from Oxford to their relief, engaged the Parliamentarians on Caversham Bridge, where a severe struggle took place, but the Royalists were defeated, the king retired to Caversham House, and the town surrendered upon the terms of the garrison being permitted to march out with flying colours, arms, baggage, &c., to join the king's troops at Oxford. The Abbey suffered considerably from the cannon of the Parliamentarians, situated on Caversham Hill, and afterwards the Parliamentary army pursued the work of destruction. In 1185 Herodius, patriarch of Jerusalem, journeyed to Reading, to present to Henry II. the keys of the Holy Sepulchre and banner of the city, as an inducement for him to undertake an expedition to rescue Palestine from the Saracens. In 1212 the Pope's Legate held a council here, and Edward III. a grand tournament in 1346. The revenues of the abbey were at its dissolution about £675 per annum; the gateway, recently restored, and part of the great hall, are all that remain of that once magnificent establishment. Aucherius, the second abbot of Reading, in 1134 founded a hospital for lepers; and Hugh, the eighth abbot, founded another hospital for 26 brethren and the entertainment of pilgrims and travellers, for the support of which he appropriated the revenue of the benefice of the church of St. Lawrence. A convent of Franciscans and another of Grey Friars were founded at a later period.

Southcote Manor House, the property of John Henry Blgrave, Esq., and now the residence of Wastel Brisco, Esq., is situated about two miles from Reading. It is a very ancient building, surrounded by a moat. In the 13th century a family of the name of Belet held the manor of Southcote, from whom it passed to the Windsors, and from them to the Blagraves, in whose family it has been upwards of 250 years. The entrance to the house is by a brick bridge crossing the moat, where there was formerly a draw bridge. One of the four watch towers still remains. The house is now (1867) undergoing alterations and repairs, and contains a room which was formerly used as a private Catholic chapel.

Among the eminent natives of this town were William of Reading, Archbishop of Bordeaux, temp. Henry 3rd; Sir Thomas White, Lord Mayor of London, 1553; Archbishop Laud, born 1573; Mr. Justice Talfourd, who died at Stafford, 1854.

SANDHURST

Is a village and parish,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Wokingham, 29 from London,  $11\frac{1}{2}$  from Reading, and a mile and a quarter from the Wellington College station, in the hundred of Sonning, union of Easthamstead, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Michael is a handsome building in the Early English style of architecture. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £200, with residence and 23 acres of glebe land, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. Here are the remains of a Roman camp—two hills, supposed to be barrows. Sandhurst Military College is about two miles from the church, and is situated in beautiful park-like grounds; it consists of a centre, with Doric portico and two wings.

WELLINGTON COLLEGE was founded and erected by national subscription in honour of the Duke of Wellington. Her Majesty laid the foundation stone in June, 1856, and it was opened by her in January, 1859. It is adapted for the reception of 250 boys, 80 of whom, being the orphan sons of officers, are maintained and educated upon the foundation, and stand in all respects upon an equal footing with the other members of the school. The property of the College is vested in a board of governors, who make regulations in conformity with their charter, and elect foundationers; the governors appoint the master of the College, and by him the tutors and assistant masters are appointed. The education is classical and general, and conducted upon the same system as other public schools; but mathematics and modern languages are treated side by side with classical studies as essential parts of modern education. There are exhibitions to the Universities, and scholarships tenable at the school, open to all the scholars.

The building, which is in the style of Louis Quinze, consists of two quadrangles, surrounded by cloisters, and divided from each other by the great school, a spacious and lofty room. In the cloisters are placed upwards of fifty bronze busts of the generals, and private and political friends of the duke, and eight fine statues adorn the principal fronts: the eight smaller schools, the common rooms, and the offices, form the sides of the quadrangles, and over these are the rooms of the assistant masters and the dormitories of the boys. The south side of the building is occupied by the dining-hall, which corresponds in size to the great school; the head master's house forms the northern side of the College. Two lofty towers give access to the eight dormitories, and in their highest stories contain large water-tanks, and the furnaces and other apparatus connected with the ventilation and warming of the whole building; the dormitories are so arranged as to give each scholar a separate furnished room. The chapel stands at the south-east corner of the College, with which it is connected by a cloister; the style is the Gothic, with some characteristics of the Gothic of North Italy. The boys' library stands between the chapel and the College. The College grounds consist of an estate of 300 acres, 20 of which are sown and turfed, so as to form a playground of unusual size; the plantations are very extensive and flourishing: a double avenue of Wellingtonias, the gift of the Prince Consort, will be a noble feature of the place in future years. In the front of the College, at a little distance, are two small artificial lakes, for skating and bathing.

Broadmoor Criminal Lunatic Asylum, opened in 1863, is an extensive brick building, capable of affording accommodation to 500 inmates.

The population in 1861 was 1,271; the acreage is 4,100; the soil is miserably poor and light. About 2,000 acres of the parish yield only Scotch firs, some forest trees, and plenty of heath. A portion of the parish is arable and meadow land.

SHAW-cum-DONNINGTON

Is a parish and village situated on the northern bank of the River Lambourn, in the hundred of Faircross, union of Newbury, and diocese of Oxford, a mile and a half from Newbury.

The church of St. Mary, which was rebuilt in 1840, is of Norman architecture. The living is a rectory, annual value £623 7s., with 28 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Henry Richard Eyre, Esq. The Manor or Shaw House, the residence of Henry Richard Eyre, Esq., J.P., was built in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and was garrisoned for Charles at the time of the second battle of Newbury: cannon-balls have been occasionally found about the grounds, and marks are shown in an oak wainscot, through which, according to tradition, a musket-ball passed while the King was dressing at the window. A Parochial school was built in 1843. At Donnington there are twelve almshouses for the same number of poor men, with an allowance of ten shillings per week; the master has an apartment also on the premises.

Donnington Castle, which is beautifully situated on a hill surrounded by trees, was the residence of the poet Chaucer. The Castle is said to have been built by Sir Richard Abberbury, who had been guardian to King Richard II. in his minority. In 1643 it was garrisoned for the king, it being esteemed an important post, as commanding the road from Oxford to Newbury. W. H. H. Hartley, Esq., of Bucklebury, is lord of the manor of Donnington, and Henry Richard Eyre, Esq., of Shaw House, is lord of the manor of Shaw.

The population in 1861 was 680; the acreage is 1,989.

GREAT or WEST SHEFFORD

Is a parish, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union of Hungerford, and diocese of Oxford,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-north-east from Hungerford, 9 from Newbury, and 4 from Lambourn.

The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, with a round tower containing a peal of five bells; in the interior is an ancient Saxon font, with rich scrolls of foliage; there are several memorials in the church. The font was removed out of the church, and the clergyman dispossessed of his living during the great rebellion. The living is a rectory, in the gift of the Masters and Fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford, annual value £851, with residence. The Parochial school is supported by the Marquis of Downshire and the rector; the average number of children is 80. The charities are—Mrs. Mary Linton gave £20, the interest to be given to the poor at Easter; Mr. Gabriel Fulbrook and Mr. John Fulbrook gave £5 each, the interest to be given to the poor at Easter; Mrs. Forster gave £20, the interest to be given away at Christmas; Mr. Thomas Fulbrook left by will £100, the interest to be given annually; Mr. Anthony Barrett bequeathed £100, the interest to be given annually. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village, and one at Woodlands; there is also one for the Primitive Methodists.

The population in 1861 was 538; the acreage is 2,196. The Marquis of Downshire is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil. The rateable value is £3,051 10s. 1d.

SHIPPON

Is an ecclesiastical district and pleasant village, situated about one mile from Abingdon.

The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is a very handsome stone edifice, built from designs by George Gilbert Scott, Esq. It was consecrated on the 12th of December, 1855, and is capable of affording sitting accommodation to 180 persons. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £100 per annum, with good residence, which was erected in 1867, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. James Hodges, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge; the first incumbent appointed in 1865. Here is a Parochial school for boys and girls.

The area is 570 acres and 11 perches. The manorial rights belong to the Prince of Wales.

SHOTTESBROKE

Is a parish, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, situated south-south-west of the Great Bath road, and adjoining White Waltham, 10 miles from Reading, 8 from Henley, 8 from Windsor,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  from the Great Western Railway station near Maidenhead and 31 from London.

The church of St. John the Baptist is one of the most interesting ecclesiastical edifices in England; for symmetry and beauty it has few equals; the plan is harmonious, the architecture chaste and elegant; indeed, it is regarded as a perfect model, being remarkable for uniformity of design, even to the minor portions: the interior of this elegant structure was restored in 1852 by Mr. Wyatt, of Oxford, under the able superintendence of Mr. Stovet, architect; and the founder's tomb, in the south transept, a truly beautiful specimen of Early Gothic, has resumed its ancient form: and fragments of Norman mouldings and arches have been discovered, proving the existence of an anterior edifice. The living is a rectory, with the vicarage of White Waltham annexed, joint annual value £610, with residence, in the gift of Arthur Vansittart, Esq., and held by the Rev. William Wellington Yonge, of Exeter College, Oxford. In the vicinity exist the memorable remains of some time-honoured structures, and one mansion of some note; this simple edifice is so enclosed by foliage as to appear entirely secluded from the world, a place of rest, "where the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep;" in 1337 Sir Walter Tressell founded a small religious house, consisting of a college and chantry, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, for a warden and five priests; this college he endowed with the church of Shottesbroke, but, after sustaining much injury by fire, it was deserted by the entire establishment except John Bradford, the warden, who obtained licence in 1380 to impropriate it to the church of Battlesdon; the result was a considerable increase of revenue: the building is a cruciform structure, in the Decorated style, with nave, flanked by two uniform porches, a transept, chancel, and central tower; the spire is light and elegant, octangular, rising within the battlement of a tower of exceedingly graceful proportions; beside it is a venerable yew tree, planted 400 years ago, and measuring in girth 20 feet.

The population in 1861 was 148; the acreage is 1,316.

SHRIVENHAM

Is a pretty village and parish in the union of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, and diocese of Oxford,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles south-west from Faringdon,  $71\frac{1}{2}$  from London, and one mile north-east from the railway station on the Great Western line. The parish of Shrivenham consists of the townships of WATCHFIELD, BOURTON, and BECKETT. Watchfield and Bourton are distinct townships for all civil purposes, having each its own parish officers, overseers, surveyors, &c.

The church of St. Andrew is a handsome structure, probably built, with the exception of the central tower, in the time of James I. or Charles I. The living is a vicarage, annual value £550, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor. A new school-room, capable of containing 100 boys and girls, with master's residence, was opened in August, 1863, by the Bishop of Oxford. The funds were raised by private subscription, and the site granted by Viscount Barrington. There is a foundation of £4 for the boys' school. The Berks and Wilts Canal, as well as the Great Western Railway, pass in the immediate vicinity of the village. Beckett House, the seat of Viscount Barrington, is a beautiful mansion, in the Elizabethan style, built of stone, and delightfully situated in the fertile Valley of White Horse. The grounds extend over a considerable area; those in front of the house are exceedingly level. A chain of hills in the distance, running into Wiltshire, bounds the front view. The grounds behind are of a more picturesque character, containing a fine sheet of water, many stately trees, and several embowered avenues, tastefully adorned with flowers and evergreens. There is likewise a small stream running through the grounds. Viscount Barrington is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 (including Watchfield, Bourton, and Beckett) was 1,266; the acreage of the entire parish is 6,200. The soil is sandy and stone brash.

SONNING

Is a picturesque village, 3 miles north-east from Reading and 2 north-west from Twyford railway station. The parish is situated in the counties of Berks and Oxford, and consists of the liberties of SONNING TOWN and WOODLEY and SANDFORD, in the hundred of Sonning, and of the liberty of EARLEY, in the hundred of Charlton, all in the union of Wokingham, and county of Berks; and of the liberty of EYE and DUNSDON, in the hundred of Binfield and Longtree, union of Henley-on-Thames, and diocese of Oxford. The village is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames, over which is an ancient bridge.

The church of St. Andrew, built of flint and stone, of the fourteenth century, has a massive west tower. Within the sacarium, on the north side is an arch of great beauty, richly sculptured with figures in stone, representing on one side our Lord blessing the twelve Apostles, and on the other, kings and queens, with the Virgin and Child as the keystone: the chancel contains some ancient brasses in good preservation; the finest one of Laurence Fyton, bailiff of Sonning, date 1434. In the south chancel aisle are monuments to Sir Thomas Rich, Bart., the Barker family, Lady Litcott, &c., and in the church to Lord Stowell, Viscountess Sidmouth, E. Golding, Esq., &c. The church was restored in 1853. The galleries and pews have been removed, several of the arches rebuilt, the roof of the nave raised with a clerestory, most of the windows renewed, and the whole area fitted with oak sittings. Opposite the south door is a beautifully carved font of Caen stone, with a lofty and elaborately worked canopy of oak. In a niche over the door of the north porch is a figure of St. Andrew, the patron saint. The living is a vicarage, with residence, gross yearly value £514; patron, the Bishop of Oxford. In the village are schools for boys and girls. The boys' school, with master's residence, erected by R. Palmer, Esq., and his family, is a spacious and neat building. Near here is Holme Park, the seat of Robert Palmer, Esq., J.P. The house is pleasantly situated on an eminence, commanding a fine view of the valley of the Thames. The park and grounds are extensive. In the liberty of Woodley is a large boys' and girls' school, with residence.

In 1861 the population of Sonning was 465; of Woodley and Sandford, 917; of Eye and Dunsdon, 799; and of Earley, 566. The whole parish contains 10,000 acres.

The liberty of Eye and Dunsdon contains a chapel of ease, named All Saints, built and endowed by R. Palmer, Esq., in 1842. Near the chapel is a school for boys and girls.

SPARSHOLT

Is a parish and village in the hundred and union of Wantage, and diocese of Oxford, near the Great Western railway and Wilts and Berks canal, about 4 miles west from Wantage.

The church of the Holy Cross consists of a nave and chancel, with south transept, and a plain tower at the west end, surmounted by a wooden spire. The principal entrance is on the north side by a handsome doorway of Norman character, having a circular arch with ornaments in bold relief. In the chancel are several ancient monuments, richly decorated with trefoils, crockets, &c. The earliest date of register is 1539. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Kingston Lisle annexed, joint annual value £363, with residence, in the gift of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford. There is a National school for boys and girls. The charities are about £20 per annum.

WASTCOTT is a hamlet in this parish, about half a mile from the church.

It consists of a number of scattered cottages and a respectable farmhouse, the residence of William Frogley, jun., Esq.

SPEEN,

SUPPOSED by some writers to have been the Roman Spinæ, is a large parish and village, comprising BAGNOR, BENHAM, SPEENHAMLAND, STOCK CROSS, and WOOD SPEEN, in the union of Newbury, and diocese of Oxford, partly in the hundred of Faircross and partly in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, and about a mile and a half west-north-west from Newbury.

The mother church of St. Mary, situated in a valley, was rebuilt in 1860. The living is a vicarage, annual value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. In the year 1830, a handsome church was built at Speenhamland. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the vicar, annual value £150, with residence. Speen had formerly a market on Mondays, which was granted in 1218, to William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke. Speen was one of the principal scenes of action in the second battle of Newbury. Prince Maurice's foot soldiers and some cavalry were quartered there at the beginning of the engagement, in the course of which it was taken by the opposite party.

About the end of the year 1839, St. John's church was erected on an eminence at Stock Cross. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £95, with residence, in the gift of the vicar. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Stock Cross, at which place there are two parochial schools, supported by voluntary contributions, and by the parents of the children paying a small amount weekly. At Speenhamland there is an endowed Free school, built by the late Mrs. Page. R. Sutton, Esq., has a beautiful seat at Benham Park, formerly the residence of the late Margrave and Margravine of Anspach. Head Best, Esq., is lord of the manor of Church Speen, and Earl Craven of Speen.

The population in 1861 was 3,311; the acreage is 3,780.

Wawanda Paper Mills employ about fifty hands on the premises, working day and night, and turn out from twelve to fifteen tons of printing and newspaper, made wholly from the Esparto grass, which together with other materials used in the manufacture of paper, consumes a weight of over one hundred tons weekly. The paper is well and most favourably known in the trade as "555" paper, and is noted for its superior colour, owing chiefly to the unusual purity of the water.

STANFORD-in-the-VALE

Is a considerable village and parish, in the union of Faringdon, hundred of Ganfield, and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated in the Vale of White Horse, about  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles north-west from Wantage station, 3 east from Moor Hill junction, on the Great Western Railway, and 4 east-south-east from Faringdon.

The church of St. Denis is handsome; its architecture is of a mixed character—Gothic and Early English, it has a handsome chancel 40 feet high, and was built about A.D. 1280, and so much altered and added to as to be nearly rebuilt about A.D. 1350; in the year 1851, £500 was spent in its repair and restoration: it has a tower at the west end 80 feet high, containing six bells: there are some very curious old clerestory windows, and projecting from the wall on the south side is a curious stone chest of tabernacle work, the former use of which is very doubtful. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for £275, with residence, in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster.

There is a small Independent chapel in the village. Shilton's charity, four-sevenths of which is appropriated to a school, and three-sevenths expended in the distribution of bread, at present realises the annual sum of £21. There is likewise a small charity called the Poor Maid's Gift, and an inconsiderable one called the Poor's Gift. The National school is supported by the payments of the scholars, which amount to one-seventh, an endowment of the annual value of £9, and by subscription. The Stanford stone pits, in the neighbourhood, from which a great many fossils are dug, produce an inferior soft stone, principally used in the repairs of the roads. The executors of the late Joseph Cowderoy, Esq., are lords of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 1,075; the acreage is 3,829; a great portion of this parish is rich pasture land; the soil is a rich loam, belonging to several owners.

STEVENTON

Is a parish and pleasant village,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Abingdon, in the hundred of Ock, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the line of the Great Western Railway, which has a station here.

The church of St. Michael has lately been restored. In the churchyard is a stone cross, which has also been recently restored. The living is a vicarage, annual value £260, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. A handsome National school for boys and girls has recently been erected. There is also a new Methodist chapel, built in 1861. The Dean and Chapter of Westminster are lords of the manor,

There is an ancient causeway running throughout the entire length of the village, planted with trees on both sides, and kept in repair by a trust fund bequeathed for that purpose. There are several charities belonging to the parish; one bequest, arising from the interest of £20, is distributed in bread on Easter day.

The population in 1861 was 886; the area is 2,383 acres.

Here is an extensive and highly respectable boarding school for young gentlemen. It is conducted by J. W. Looker, Esq., and professional assistants.

STREATLEY

Is a picturesque village and parish, 10 miles north-west from Reading, 6 south from Wallingford, and 41 from London, in the hundred of Moreton, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford. It is situated in a beautiful valley on the river Thames, which runs here in two streams, and is crossed by a double bridge to the village of Goring, in Oxfordshire, where there is a station on the Great Western Railway.

The church of St. John the Baptist is an ancient fabric of Early English architecture. The living is a vicarage, value £200 per annum, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. The Baptists have a neat chapel in the village. Here is a school, supported by voluntary subscription; there is also another school in the parish, in the hamlet of Southridge, which has an endowment of £2 5s., by Mr. Richard Tull. There are several handsome residences in the neighbourhood, which, from their situation on the banks of the Thames, have a very pleasant appearance, and the surrounding scenery is beautiful and romantic.

The population in 1861 was 552; the acreage is 3,478. The soil is chalk and loam. J. S. Rowles, Esq., is lord of the manor.

There are several charities, and likewise a small endowment, left by some person unknown, for the repairs of the church.

WESTBRIDGE is a hamlet in this village, about 2½ miles from the church.

SULHAM

Is a very picturesque little village and parish, 43½ miles west from London, 2 south from the Pangbourne railway station, and 6 west from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford. It is pleasantly situated on a gentle acclivity, commanding beautiful views of the surrounding country.

The church of St. Nicholas was rebuilt in 1838, and is composed of stone and flint, and has a handsome tower, at the corners of which are four pinnacles, and surmounted by a lofty spire. The windows are all of stained glass, and the church contains several marble tablets to the memory of different members of the Wilder family; the marble font was presented by John Wilder, Esq., in 1733, which the present rector has enclosed in stone; the organ has lately been replaced by a new and larger one; the churchyard is tastefully planted with shrubs and ever-greens. The living is a rectory, annual value £198, with residence, in the gift of Frederick Wilder, Esq.

Sulham House, the seat of the Rev. John Wilder, is a handsome residence, with extensive grounds, commanding fine views of woodland scenery. Here is a school, established by the rector, for the education of the poor. Frederick Wilder, Esq., of Purley Hall, is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 118; the acreage is 1,100..

SUNNINGHILL

Is a straggling village and extensive parish and railway station, distant from London 24 miles, 6 from Windsor, and 6 from Egham, in the hundred of Cookham, union of Windsor, electoral division of Wokingham, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the Bath and Reading roads.

The church of St. Michael is a neat brick edifice, with square tower, containing three bells; it was rebuilt in the year 1828, is in good repair, and the interior is neatly fitted up. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of St. John's College, Cambridge, value about £250 per annum, with residence and forty acres of glebe land; the incumbent is the Rev. Alexander Malcolm Wale, B.D., of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a National school, endowed with about £22 per annum. There is a chapel for Methodists. G. H. Crutchley, Esq., and John Hargreaves, Esq., are the chief landowners. There are charities of £9 yearly value. There are several mansions in this parish, the principal of which are Sunninghill Park, the seat of P. H. Crutchley, Esq.; Sillwood Park, the property of John Hargreaves, Esq.; and Titnest Park, the residence of Albert Ricardo, Esq. There is a chalybeate spring at a place called the Wells, formerly much frequented.

Ascot race-course is situated in the parish; the races take place in July, and are usually honoured by the presence of her Majesty, who has a stand appropriated to her use; the grand stand is a building of considerable beauty, with front and back porticoes, an elegant staircase, with extensive drawing and refreshment rooms and offices; it was built by subscription; the ground for the races was appropriated by Act of Parliament for the purpose. A branch railway from Reading, by Wokingham to Staines, has a station here near the grand stand.

The population in 1861 was 1,596; the acreage is 3,173.

SUNNINGWELL

Is a parish in the hundred of Hormer, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles north from Abingdon, bounded on the east by the Thames; the parish includes part of the township of Kennington, the other portion being in Radley parish.

The church of St. Leonard is a Gothic structure; it has an octagon porch, built by Bishop Jewell. In the interior is a monument to the memory of John Baskerville, Esq., who died in 1688; also a small slab to the memory of the learned Dr. Samuel Fell, Dean of Christ Church, Oxford, and formerly rector of this parish, who died in 1648. The register dates from 1643. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of Sir George Bowyer, Bart., M.P., annual value £319, with residence. There is a charity, of the value of about £80 per annum, arising partly from land and partly from money in the funds, called Poor's Land Charity, the proceeds of which are devoted to the support of the poor; also one known as Beezley's Charity, of the annual value of £1, to be given by the churchwardens on Good Friday to the poorest inhabitants.

The population in 1861, including the portion of the township of Kennington in this parish, was 364; the parish comprises about 1,500 acres; the soil is clay, sand, and limestone. Sir George Bowyer, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil. Here are brick and tile works, which belong to Mr. Wm. Bowles, of Abingdon.

BAYWORTH is a hamlet about half a mile from the church.

SUTTON COURTNEY, with SUTTON WICK

SUTTON COURTNEY is a parish, 2½ miles south-south-east from Abingdon, and 53 from London, in the hundred of Ock, union of Abingdon, and diocese of Oxford, bounded on the north by the Thames.

The church of All Saints is a fine Gothic structure, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and square tower; the roof was repaired in 1846. The living is a vicarage, with the curacy of Appleford, annual value £150, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. There are Wesleyan and Baptist chapels; also a school, chiefly supported by subscription. The abbey, which is occupied by T. Theobald, Esq., the tithe lessee under the Chapter of Windsor, was formerly attached to the monastery of Abingdon, being then used as a hospital for invalids. There are almshouses for six poor widows, founded and endowed with £10 per year each by F. Elderfield, Esq., in 1818.

The population in 1861, including the townships of Appleford and Sutton Wick, was 1,581; the acreage is about 4,200; the soil is clay, gravel, and loam. Mrs. Bird is lady of the manor. Here are extensive paper mills, which give employment to a considerable number of persons.

John Thomas Norris, Esq., is proprietor. The crops are wheat, barley, and meadow grass.

SUTTON WICK is a township and hamlet, in the parish of Sutton Courtney, from which place it is 2 miles west.

The population in 1861 was 319.

Letters arrive through Abingdon at 7.30 a.m.; dispatched at 6.45 p.m. The nearest money-order office is at Abingdon.

THATCHAM

Is a village and parish on the road between London and Bath, in the hundred of Reading, union, deanery, and county court district of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles east from Newbury and 14 west from Reading.

The church of St. Luke is a very ancient edifice, in the Perpendicular style, with a mixture of Early English and Norman, built of stone and flint, and has lately been restored, at a cost of £3,000, raised by subscription. The living is a vicarage, annual value £555, with residence. Here are places of worship for Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyans. Thatcham is intersected by the river Kennet and the Avon and Kennet Canal. There are several endowed charities, almshouses, &c., amongst which is Lady Winchcomb's Blue School for 40 boys, sometimes called Queen Elizabeth's school. The boys are clothed, and taught reading, writing, &c., and the parents receive assistance towards their apprenticeship to some trade. In 1845 a National school was built on a spot called Clapper's Green, the ground being given by William Mount, Esq., who is lord of the manor; there is also a large school adjoining the Independent chapel, built at the expense of that body. Thatcham formerly had a market, but it has long been discontinued. Gas works were recently constructed for the lighting of the village.

The population in 1861 was 2,729, with hamlets; the acreage is 8,000.

TWYFORD,

SITUATED on the banks of the Loddon water, is a handsome village, in the parish of Hurst, rural deanery and county court district of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles from Reading, 8 from Maidenhead, 5 from Henley-on-Thames, and 34 from London. Here is a station of the Great Western railway.

In the year 1847 a handsome chapel (St. Mary's) was consecrated as a chapel of ease to the church of Hurst. There is a school, with chapel annexed, founded by Edward Polehampton, Esq., A.D., 1721, and endowed for the free education and clothing of ten poor boys of the village; the Rev. L. H. Rudd, M.A., is chaplain and master. The Reformed Wesleyans have a small neat chapel here, erected in 1853. Here are almshouses, founded by Lady Frances Winchcomb, for six poor persons of the liberties of Whistley and Hinton, in the parish of Hurst.

POST OFFICE.—Alfred Brooker, postmaster. Letters from all parts arrive at 7 a.m. and 4 p.m.; dispatched at 1.15 p.m. and 9 p.m.; on Sundays at 9 p.m. only. Money-orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. till 5 p.m.

UFFINGTON

Is a considerable village and parish, in the union of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham and diocese of Oxford. Uffinga was the English title of the sovereign of a district, from which Uffington, or Uffinga's Town, is derived. It is pleasantly situated at the base of the White Horse Hill, and distant one mile south from Moor Mill Junction, a branch of the Great Western railway to Faringdon, 4 miles south-east from Faringdon, 4 from Shrivenham, and 7 from Wantage. The Berks and Wilts Canal passes north of the village.

The church of St. Mary formerly belonged to the monastery of Abingdon; its architecture is Early English. It has an octagonal tower in the centre. The church is cruciform, and in good repair. The south door is a thick oaken one, strengthened with ornamental scrolls of iron, and is said to be coeval with the building, the supposed date of which is 1111. It likewise possesses a very curious clock, the work of the village blacksmith. The east window is filled with stained glass; there is a very ancient monument of Thomas Saunders, Esq., the founder of the school. The living is a vicarage, annual value £330, with residence, in the gift of Charles Eyre, Esq.

The White Horse Hill, situated in this parish, is remarkable for having the Saxon standard of a white horse cut in its steepest part: the horse is represented galloping; its length is 314 feet, and it extends nearly over an acre of ground; the outline is determined by deep trenches cut in the chalk about 10 feet broad. Though generally supposed to be the work of Alfred, in commemoration of a victory obtained at Ashdown, in the neighbourhood, in the year 871, it is more probably the work of the Britons, whose coins frequently exhibit the impress of a similar figure. From the base of this hill stretches the fine and fertile valley of White Horse, extending—though not in a direct line—from Swindon to Wantage. Here is a small Baptist chapel. There is an endowment, of the annual value of £40 for the education of poor boys, the foundation of which is for twelve, though as many as think proper can attend on payment of 6d. weekly. A school containing forty girls is supported by subscription. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 1,081; the parish contains 6,650 acres. The soil is loamy, stone brash, and chalk.

UFTON

OR UFTON NERVETT, is a small village and parish, 44 miles from London, 3 south from Theale railway station, and 8 from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Peter has stained glass windows, tower and spire, and was rebuilt in 1862 by R. Benyon, Esq., M.P., the landowner. The living is a rectory, value £426 per annum, with residence, in the gift of Oriel College, Oxford. There is a school, maintained partly by an endowment of the Rev. W. Bishop, formerly rector, and partly by subscription. Richard Benyon, Esq., M.P., of Englefield, is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil. There is an old Elizabethan manor house in the parish, called Ufton Court, now the property of Richard Benyon, Esq., M.P., and formerly the residence of the Catholic family of Perkins, one of whom married Pope's "Belinda."

The population in 1861 was 367; the acreage is 2,080.

UPTON

Is a parish and small village, on the turnpike road between Reading and Wantage, 16 miles from the former, and 8 from the latter town, in the hundred of Moreton, union of Wantage, and the diocese of Oxford.

The parish church, an ancient Norman chapel, is shortly to give place to a new and larger structure. The living is a perpetual curacy, ecclesiastically united to Aston Upthorpe, under the title of Upton and Aston Upthorpe, in the patronage of the Bishop of Oxford. The tithes of the benefice are commuted at £88 10s. There is a National school. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel. The chief landowners are J. S. Phillips, Esq., Thomas Humfrey, Esq., Captain John Douglas, Messrs. N. and P. Humfrey, and John Church.

The population in 1861 was 306; the area is 1,378.

WALLINGFORD

Is an ancient borough and market town, situated on the banks of the river Thames, and is governed by a corporation, comprising a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors. The curious ancient mounds for its defence still remain in the Kine Croft. It is 15 miles north-west from Reading, 13 south-east from Oxford, and 46 from London, in the hundred of Moreton, union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford.

It formerly contained thirteen churches, but sustained material injury during the civil wars of Charles I. It at present contains three, viz., St. Leonard's, St. Mary's and St. Peter's, and four parishes. St. Leonard's is in the Norman style of architecture, and is considered an excellent specimen. St. Mary's is in the Early English style, with a chime of six bells, and both have been lately restored and enlarged. St. Peter's is in the Mixed Modern style, also restored, with a new spire. The living of St. Leonard's is a rectory, with the chapelry of Satwell annexed, joint annual value £153, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. St. Mary's is a rectory, annual value £137, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. John Langley, who is also the incumbent of St. Leonard's. St. Peter's is a rectory, annual value £100, with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Gregson, and held by the Rev. William Hazel, M.A., of Christ Church, Oxford. The parish of All Hallows is a sinecure belonging to Pembroke College, Oxford. The tithes are commuted at £330 per annum, apportioned thus,—Pembroke College, £284 10s.; the Dean and Canons of Windsor, £45 10s. No clergyman is ever appointed to take charge of this parish. The Independents, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends have each a chapel, and the three former have Sunday schools.

A Corn Exchange has lately been built, and a Police office. A Cemetery has also been opened for all the parishes in common. Castle Priory, the seat of Mrs. Gregson, is a spacious mansion; and Castle House, that of John Kirby Hedges, Esq., is a beautiful mansion. Here are almshouses for six reduced tradesmen's widows, a National school, containing about 140 boys and 120 girls, a large Sunday school, and a Grammar school.

The market day is Friday, for corn and cattle. There are two fairs in the course of the year, the first on Thursday in Easter week, for cattle, and the second on the 29th of September, for pleasure. The town is well paved and lighted. It has a good Town Hall, with a good market place.

There are two banks—the old bank of Messrs. Hedges, Wells, and Co., and the London and County, branch. The Savings' Bank was established in the year 1843.

The Mechanics' Institution has been established for some time, and a Penny Savings' Bank.

The Royal Berkshire Horticultural Society was established in the year 1831, under the patronage of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, and his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort.

This borough returns one member to Parliament, the Mayor being the returning officer. Of the old castle there remain but a few fragments covered with ivy, a part of the ancient walls. The public charities amount to about £300 per annum.

The union of Wallingford comprises the following places :—Allhallows (Wallingford), Aston Tirrold, Aston Upthorpe, Bensington or Benson (Oxford), Berwick Salome (Oxford), Brightwell, Cholsey, Clapcot, Crowmarsh Gifford (Oxford), Didcott or Dudcott, Dorchester (Oxford), East Hagbourne, Ewelme (Oxford), Fifield (Oxford), Little Wittenham, Long Wittenham, Mongewell (Oxford), Moulsoford, Newington (Oxford), Newnham Murren (Oxford), North Moreton, North Stoke (Oxford), St. Leonard (Wallingford), St. Mary-le-More (Wallingford), St. Peter, Sotwell, South Moreton, South Stoke (Oxford), Wallingford Castle Precinct, Warborough (Oxford), and West Hagbourne.

A county court is held, comprising the following parishes in the district :—Aston Tirrold (Berks), Aston Upthorpe (Berks), Benson (Oxford), Berwick Prior (Oxford), Berwick Salome (Oxford), Brightwell Baldwin (Oxford), Brightwell (Berks), Brightwell Prior (Oxford), Brightwell Salome (Oxford), Crowmarsh Gifford (Oxford), Cholsey (Berks), Cuxham (Oxford), Didcot (Berks), Dorchester (Oxford), Ewelme (Oxford), Goring (Oxford), Holcombe (Oxford), Hagbourne East (Berks), Hagbourne West (Berks), Ipsden (Oxford), Mongewell (Oxford), Moreton North (Berks), Moreton South (Berks), Moulsoford (Berks), Newington (Oxford), Newnham Murren (Oxford), Nuffield (Oxford), Roke (Oxford), Sotwell (Berks), Stoke North (Oxford), Stoke South (Oxford), Streatley (Berks), Harborough (Oxford), Wittenham Long (Berks), Woodcot (Oxford), St. Mary (Wallingford), St. Peter (Wallingford), St. Leonard (Wallingford.)

The population in 1861 was 2,793. The land is principally arable, and generally very good. The rateable value of the four parishes amounts to £7,395. The bridge over the Thames, consisting of fourteen arches, was built at a cost of £14,000, the debt having been entirely paid off from the tolls; the bridge is now toll free to the inhabitants only.

CLAPCOT is a liberty, in the parish of Allhallows, with a population in 1861 of 53.

WALTHAM ST. LAWRENCE

Is a parish and very ancient village, 2 miles long, in the hundred of Wargrave, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, 8 miles from Reading,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  from Henley, 3 from Twyford station,  $11\frac{1}{2}$  from Windsor, and 32 $\frac{1}{2}$  from London.

The church of St. Lawrence is of considerable antiquity, supposed to be of the twelfth or thirteenth century; it is in the Norman and Gothic styles, and consists of a nave and two aisles: by the good taste of the vicar and the inhabitants, the church was in 1847 thoroughly repaired and restored to its original design: at the west end is a square embattled tower containing six bells, with a small turret at the south-west angle, conducting to the belfry and top of the tower: the tower contains a large stone window, strikingly beautiful: the pulpit is of stone, and the communion table of the Elizabethan age: the font is good, and in keeping with the original windows, which have remained entire; in the north-east corner is a handsome monument over the burial place of the Neville family, also two others of some interest: close to the churchyard are four immense elm trees, quite hollow by age, forming a square, now used as a pound for cattle. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £7 6s. 6d., present nett income, £211, arising from 218 acres of glebe land, in the gift of Lord Braybrooke, who is lord of the manor; the incumbent is the Rev. Edwin James Parker, B.D., of Pembroke College, Oxford. There is a district chapel in connection with the church at Scurlock. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here.

There is a National school, with an endowment of £35 by Lord Braybrooke. The sum of £45 (the rent of the Bell inn) is distributed annually amongst the deserving poor.

The population in 1861 was 848; the village contains 3,468 acres.

Parish clerk, Richard Perry.

WHITE WALTHAM with WALTHAM ABBOTTS

WHITE WALTHAM (formerly Bury Town) and WALTHAM ABBOTTS (or Abbas) form a parish, and exceedingly irregular village, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, 10 miles from Reading, 9 from Henley, 7 from Windsor, 3 from the Wycombe station at Maidenhead, and 31 from London.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a Norman structure, with tower and wooden steeple; it was erected in the twelfth century, and has had many subsequent additions. The living is a vicarage, annexed to the rectory of Shottesbrook, joint annual value £610, in the gift of Colevaine Vansittart, Esq., and held by the Rev. William Wellington Yonge, B.A., of Exeter College, Oxford; the Rev. Denys Nelson Yonge, B.A., of Christ College, Cambridge, is the curate. Here is an Independent chapel. Colevaine Vansittart, Esq., is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 917; the acreage is 2,576.

WOOLLEY GREEN is a small hamlet on the border of the Great Bath Road, in the parish of White Waltham.

National school (boys and girls), Thomas Johnson, master, and Mrs. Jane Johnson, mistress.

WANTAGE

WANTAGE is a market town, in the hundred, union, and rural deanery of its own name, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, about 60 miles west from London, on a branch of the river Ock, about 3½ miles from the Faringdon station, and 2½ from the Wantage Road station on the Great Western Railway.

The parish comprises the hamlets of CHARLTON and WEST LOCKINGE, with about 8,000 acres.

The town is not incorporated. Petty sessions for the town and neighbouring parishes are held on alternate Wednesdays in the Town Hall.

The Town Hall, which is situated in the centre of the Market place, is a large brick structure. A handsome Corn Exchange, with suitable ante-rooms and offices, was erected. A county court is held here: Llewellyn Jotcham, Esq., is registrar of the court. The district comprises the following places: Aldworth, Ardington, Blewbury, Brightwaltham, Catmore, Chaddleworth, Challow East and West, Charlton, Childrey, Chilton, Compton, Denchworth, Farnborough, Fawley, Goosey, Grove, Hanney East and West, Harwell, Hendred East and West, Ilsley East and West, Letcombe Regis, Letcombe Bassett, Letcombe Bower, Lockinge, Sparsholt, Upton, and Wantage.

In the year 1828 an Act of Parliament was obtained for the establishment of a Board of Commissioners, who have the supervision of the paving, lighting and watching of the town. The town is the head of a union: the guardians assemble every Tuesday at the Workhouse, which is situated in an elevated position, about a mile and a half from the town. The union comprises the following parishes: Aldworth, Ardington, Beedon, Blewbury, Brightwaltham, Catmore, Chaddleworth, Charlton, Childrey, Chilton, Compton or Compton Parva, Denchworth, East Challow, East Hanney, East Hendred, East Ilsley or Market Ilsley, East Lockinge, Farnborough, Fawley, Goosey, Grove, Hampstead Norris, Harwell, Letcombe Bassett, Letcombe Regis, Peasmore, Sparsholt, Upton, Wantage, West Challow, West Hanney, West Hendred, West Ilsley, and West Lockinge.

The church of St. Peter and St. Paul consists of chancel, with clerestory, north and two south side chapels, central tower with transeptal aisles, nave with clerestory, north and south aisles, north and south porch, with parvise staircase. The general character of the nave is Middle Pointed. The clerestory, apparently a later addition, of the Last Pointed era, which latter also is the character of the chancel windows and chapels. The church is remarkable for the very perfect and interesting remains of Pointed woodwork, consisting of a screen in the south chapel, parclooses shutting off the chancel, and eighteen stalls, with carved miserere seats and beautiful poppy heads. Two very fine brasses—a priest, said to be of the family of the Fitzwarrens, the founders of the church, and Sir Ivo de Fitzwarren, a knight armed—are in the chancel, with many of an inferior interest; a marble tomb of one of the Fitzwarrens, with recumbent figures, with several others of the Wilmotts of Lambourne, and neighbouring gentry, are also there. In 1857 a very handsome painted window, by Hardman, of Birmingham, was placed in the chancel; there is also a memorial window to the Hon. and Rev. E. Nelson (brother of the present Lord Nelson), formerly curate of Wantage. The old altar-stone, of the earliest date, still exists in perfect condition, and the church is full of remains of the olden times. The earliest date of register is 1537. The living is a vicarage, gross annual value £750, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, and held by the Rev. William John Butler, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, surrogate and rural dean. Grove is a separate ecclesiastical parish. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £83, with residence, in the gift of the vicar of Wantage, and held by the Rev. William Simcox Bricknell, M.A. There is a chapel of ease at Charlton, and another (St. Michael's) connected with the union workhouse.

There are various institutions connected with education established in the town: large National schools, and an Industrial school for training maid servants, another for training schoolmistresses for village schools, and a school for the daughters of the middle and upper classes; there is also a Penitentiary, conducted by Sisters of Mercy, in connexion with the Church of England.

The Grammar school formerly stood in the churchyard, having been erected there in the time of Queen Elizabeth. In 1849 advantage was taken of a millenary festival, in commemoration of the birth of King Alfred, to raise funds for the erection of a more convenient building, and in the following year the new Grammar school was founded, retaining the fine old Norman doorway of the previous structure as its most ornamental feature: it admits upon its foundation twelve free scholars of the town of Wantage, and has accommodation for private boarders and scholars. There is also a subscription reading room held in the Town Hall.

The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel here: the latter was erected in 1844, at a cost of £1,200, and will hold 500 persons; and the former, built in 1860, at the cost of £1,450, is capable of holding 300 persons; it has a schoolroom at the back for day and Sunday schools.

The manufacture of sacks and other hempen articles was formerly carried on here, the trade has, however, gone northward, and is now only pursued on a limited scale. The general trade of the town depends mainly upon the agricultural population of the town and surrounding villages. Here is an iron and brass foundry, known by the name of the Vale of White Horse Foundry, the property of Messrs. Gibbons, where a considerable number of hands are employed in the manufacture of agricultural machines.

The charter of a market was granted by Henry III. to the Fitzwarrens, a noble family, who were for some considerable period connected with Wantage: the market day was fixed for Saturday, and although a pitched market was established in 1817, it gradually receded into its former condition as a sample market, and business was usually transacted in the afternoon and evening, between a limited number of neighbouring farmers and a few local dealers: at the commencement of the year 1845, a second attempt was made to establish a pitched market, and the result has been eminently successful: the soil of this district is conducive to the growth of prime samples of corn, and the growers finding the proximity of the Great Western Railway contributed to the attendance of competing purchases from London, Bristol, and intermediate places in both directions, have from the commencement furnished a good supply: the corn market is now held on Wednesday, but the vendors of meat, poultry, butter and vegetables attend with their commodities as usual on Saturday.

Fairs are held on the first Saturday in March and the first Saturday in May, for cattle and cheese; on the 18th July for cherries; and the hiring and pleasure fair is held on the 17th and 18th October; the latter is the only one of importance.

Wantage is famed as being the residence of some of the English monarchs, and especially as being the birthplace of one of the most illustrious among them—Alfred the Great. Tradition commemorative of the circumstance, has preserved to a petrifying spring in the neighbourhood the appellation of "Alfred's Well." Dr. Butler, Bishop of Durham, the celebrated author of "The Analogy of Natural and Revealed Religion," was born here in 1692.

The Vale of White Horse, in this neighbourhood, is celebrated in ancient story as the scene of English victories over Danish invaders, and the fact has been perpetuated through subsequent ages by a memorial simple but enduring; on one of the hills forming the south boundary of the vale, and known as the White Horse Hill, is formed the figure of a white horse, represented in a galloping position on the upper part of the hill, 314 feet in length, occupying nearly an acre of ground; its shape is determined by trenched lines cut in the white chalk, between two and three feet deep, and about ten broad; the head, neck, body and tail are composed of one line varying in width, and one line or trench has been made for each of the legs; though the situation of the figure effectually preserves it from all danger of obliteration, yet the inhabitants of the neighbouring parishes hold from time to time a rustic fete, on which occasion they clear away any accumulation of weeds. The White Horse was the standard of the old English.

About a mile westward from White Horse Hill, near the Ridge way leading over the Downs, is the interesting and historical relic, called Wayland Smith's Cave, built up of the large stones called Sarsden stones, found in the neighbourhood, formerly cruciform, with cavities for four coffins or bodies, now broken up and irregular: the name Wayland is of Teutonic origin, Wolland being the great Smith of Northmen legend. The tradition has clung so, for the peasants relate that this spot was formerly inhabited by an invisible blacksmith, who good-naturedly shod any horse that was left there, provided a piece of money was deposited at the same time to reward the labours of the workmen. The fame of these antiquities is not, however, now confined to the student of ancient history and the residents of the neighbouring vale; the genius of Abbotsford has, in his "Kenilworth," given to these remains of remote ages universal publicity.

The facilities afforded by the neighbouring downs for coursing have induced the establishment of an annual meeting called the "Letcomb Bowers Meeting," and through the exertions of a veteran sportsman, Thomas Goodlake, Esq., of Letcomb Regis, it has become a highly creditable affair.

CHARLTON is a township and village, about 1 mile from Wantage. It consists of three respectable farmhouses, several cottages, a chapel of ease, and a school for boys and girls. The chapel was erected in 1848. It is a neat and commodious little building, having sittings for about 70 persons. The area of the township (not including the common downs) is 1,365 acres, and the population in 1861 was 255. The rateable value in 1866 was £2,848.

WEST LOCKINGE is a township and hamlet, about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  mile from Wantage. It consists of one farmhouse and a few cottages. The population in 1861 was 66, and the rateable value in 1866 was £1,457.

The population of the three townships of Wantage, Charlton, and West Lockinge in 1861 was 3,670; and the rateable value in 1866, was £14,711, and the area of the whole parish is 2,331 acres.

WARGRAVE

Is a parish and handsome village, situated in a valley surrounded by picturesque woodland scenery; it is in the hundred of Wargrave, union of Wokingham, county court district and rural deanery of Henley, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles from Henley, 7 from Reading, 2 from the Great Western railway station at Twyford, 14 from Windsor, 11 from Maidenhead, and 36½ from London.

The church of St. Mary is a Gothic structure of great antiquity, with embattled tower and belfry of six bells; it has undergone considerable repair, with an addition to the building, the expense of which was defrayed by subscription; the church is separated from the chancel by five carved arches, which support five elaborately carved pinnacles in oak, of the Gothic order; the west window is of stained glass, representing the four Evangelists; there are twelve marble monuments in the chancel, and ten in the church, the most prominent of which is to the memory of Thomas Day, Esq., the author of "Sandford and Merton." The living is a vicarage, annual value £226, with residence, in the patronage of Lord Braybrooke, and held by the Rev. Simon Sturges, M.A., of Magdalen Hall, Oxford.

There are several benevolent bequests, among which is one by Robert Piggot, Esq., who left the sum of £8,032 in the Three per Cents, the interest of which is appropriated for the support of a National school, erected in the year 1863. The Rev. Walter Sellon, vicar of Ledsham, in the county of York, left, in 1793, the sum of £400 in the Three per Cent. Consolidated Annuities, the interest of which to be given as follows—£10 to a servant man of good character who has lived three years in one place, and to a servant woman the following year, on the same principle, and so on every alternate year for ever; 10s. to the vicar or curate, who shall preach a sermon on every Michaelmas Day, setting forth the reciprocal duties of master and mistress and their servants. There is a Union district school for sixteen parishes.

The population in 1861 was 1806; the acreage is 4,814.

WELFORD

Is a parish, with the chapelry of WICKHAM, and the hamlets of EASTON, WESTON, and HOE BENHAM, 6 miles north-west from Newbury, in the hundred of Faircross, union of Newbury, and diocese of Oxford. The manor formerly belonged to the abbot and convent of Abingdon; the manor of Weston was purchased of Sir William Perey by John Aubrey, who conveyed it in 1364, to John de Cokking and his heirs; this manor, in Queen Elizabeth's time, was in the family of Hungerford.

The mother church of St. Gregory, at Welford, has lately been rebuilt, chiefly at the expense of the present rector; the tower and chancel being reproductions of the ancient work; the spire is circular; there are several memorials in the interior.

The church of St. Swithin, at Wickham, has also been lately rebuilt by the present rector, all but the lower part of the tower, and is a very handsome structure, with some elegant specimens of architectural carving; a handsome font-cover, from the Exhibition of 1862, was presented to the church by Lieut.-Col. Nicholson. The living is a rectory, with the chapelry of Wickham annexed, joint annual value of the tithe commuted rent charge £1,400, with residence, in the gift of, and held by, the Rev. William Nicholson, M.A. The National school, with master's residence, was erected in Wickham in 1854; it is a mixed school, supported by C. Eyre, Esq., and the rector. There is also an Infant school at Hoe Benham. Welford House is the seat of Charles Eyre, Esq., J.P., lord of the manor; the park is well stocked with deer.

The population in 1861 with 1,030; the area is 5,086a. 2r. 18p.

WHITLEY

Is an ecclesiastical district, formed out of the parish of St. Giles, Reading.

The church, which is dedicated to Christ, is a fine substantial structure, which was built in 1860, on an elevated situation on the Kendrick road. The living is a perpetual curacy, value about £120 per annum, in the gift of the vicar of St. Giles; the Rev. W. F. Harrison is incumbent. This new parish forms a populous suburb to Reading, having a population of about 3,000. It contains several genteel residences, and is the property of various owners.

Leighton Park is the residence of Capt. Alexander William Cobham, J.P. The Manor House, the property of Lord Strattenham Rose, is in the occupation of Mr. James Thorp, a respectable farmer.

The parish contains about 2,800 acres of fertile land; and its rateable value in 1867 was £6,818 4s. 5d.

WINDSOR

Is a borough and market town, containing the state castle of the sovereigns of England, in the union of Windsor, hundred of Ripplesmere, and diocese of Oxford. It is situated on the Thames, 22 miles from London, 19 from Reading, 6 from Maidenhead, and 2 from Slough. The town consists of the borough of New Windsor, the suburb of Old Windsor, and the suburb of Clewer. The town was given by Edward the Confessor to Westminster Abbey, but seems to have first acquired importance by the building of the castle, in which William the Norman is said to have lived. In 1276 it was made a free borough, and it has sent members to Parliament since that period.

The corporation consists of a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, with a high steward, recorder, treasurer, town clerk, &c. There is a separate commission of the peace, consisting of five justices, who hold petty sessions twice a week, and quarter sessions. The town is divided into two wards.

There is a market on Saturday; and there are fairs on Easter Tuesday for cattle, on the 5th of July for cattle and wool, and on the 24th of October for cattle: this is called Onion Fair.

Windsor is an important military station, where large bodies of cavalry and infantry are stationed. The town is well built, paved and lighted. The collegiate church is within the castle.

The parish church of St. John the Baptist, situated in High street, was rebuilt in 1822, at an expense of £14,000, in the Gothic style, and at the west end is a square embattled tower. There are some old tombs,—one of 1509, of William Cannon, mayor of Windsor; a large tomb of Mrs. Braham; one of Topham Foot, by Scheemaker; one, with Corinthian columns, to Dr. Richard Hale; one of 1570 to John Dugdale, son of Sir William. The living is a vicarage, annual value £450, with residence, to which has been added by Act of Parliament three-fifths of the proceeds of one of the suspended canonries of St. George; the remaining two-fifths are applied to the incumbency of Holy Trinity; it is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.

A district church is situated in Clarence Crescent. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £35, with residence; in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.

All Saints church in Frances Road was built in 1865; the first stone was laid on the 21st November, 1863, by the Crown Princess of Prussia.

There is a chapel for Baptists in Victoria Street; for Independents in William street, and for Wesleyans in Peascod street.

In Peascod street are schools for boys, girls and infants; a school for clothing and educating 20 girls, called the Ladies' Charity, founded in 1784; and a British school opened in 1842.

There is a Savings Bank, also a Dispensary, Lying-in Charity, almshouses for 28 persons; alms to the amount of £100 yearly, in bread; an apprenticeship and dowry fund of £200 yearly; a free loan of £1,000; annuities of £10 each for 14 poor widows, &c.

The Town Hall is a plain building, begun in 1686: adjoining is a large market for meat, poultry and butter, held every Wednesday and Saturday; the corn market is held under the Town Hall on Saturday: in the Town Hall are statues of Queen Anne and Prince George of Denmark; and portraits of James I., Charles I., Charles II., James II., William III., Mary II., Anne, George III., Queen Charlotte, George IV., Prince Rupert, &c.

The Theatre Royal in Thames street, was built in 1815, at a cost of nearly £6,000.

The bridge over the Thames is 200 feet long and 29 feet wide, with three piers of granite, from which spring three arches of cast iron, the middle one being of 55 feet span; it was built in 1823.

In Sheet street are Infantry Barracks, and in Spital road are Cavalry Barracks.

The Naval Knights of Windsor, five in number, have a house in Datchet lane; this was founded in 1728 by Mr. Samuel Travers, for the relief of lieutenants; they consist of a governor and twelve knights on the upper foundation, and fifty on the lower.

The Castle was commenced by William the Conqueror, enlarged by Henry I., who held here, in 1122, his marriage feast with Adelais of Lorraine. In 1170 Henry II. held a Parliament here. King John was besieged in it by the barons; and in the time of his son, Henry III., it was frequently attacked by the contending parties. The next kings lived at Windsor, where several of their children were born, and Edward III. took from it his name of Edward of Windsor: he rebuilt the greater part of the castle, in which William of Wykeham was employed. Edward IV. built St. George's chapel. Charles I. was imprisoned here. Most of the kings contributed in some way to the building, but George IV. was its chief restorer, and devoted nearly a million to the beautifying of this the most magnificent building of the kind in Europe. The Castle is situated on a hill, and commands extensive and pleasing views over the surrounding country and the Thames. St. George's chapel is a fine collegiate church, within the Castle: it is the place of installation of Knights of the Garter, who have their stalls in the choir: here are some fine stained glass windows, a curious iron tomb, said to be by Quinton Matsys, of Antwerp, erected to the memory of Edward IV.; a fine tomb to the Earl of Lincoln, who died 1584; one to the memory of Richard Beauchamp, bishop of Salisbury; another to Oliver King, bishop of Bath and Wells; altar tombs to Dr. Brideoak, bishop of Chichester, and Giles Thompson, bishop of Gloucester; Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester; Henry Somerset, Duke of Beaufort; a statue to William, Earl of Harcourt : in the chapel are buried Henry VI., Edward IV. and his queen, Elizabeth Woodville, and his sister, the Duchess of Exeter ; George, Duke of Bedford, and his wife ; Henry VIII., Queen Jane Seymour, Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk ; Charles I., a daughter of Queen Anne, William Duke of Gloucester and his Duchess, and their son and daughter ; Prince Rupert, and other royal personages : there is a splendid tomb to the Princess Charlotte : in the royal tomb-house are buried Georges III. and IV., and William IV., Queen Charlotte and Queen Adelaide, the Dukes of York and Kent, the Princesses Amelia, Charlotte and Augusta, and the Princes Octavius and Alfred. Near the chapel are the residences of the Dean, Canons and Military Knights of Windsor ; likewise a belfry tower, with chimes, and a peal of eight bells. In the chapter-house is the sword of Edward III. The Castle contains several wards, towers, apartments and gateways, with a large and ancient keep.

The State Apartments have a celebrated collection of paintings by the great masters, and many curiosities. In the Guard Chamber is some good armour ; also trophies of Marlborough, Nelson, and Wellington. St. George's Hall is 200 feet long, 34 feet broad, and 32 feet high, being the grand banqueting hall ; here are portraits of the kings, from James I. to George IV. The Waterloo Chamber, or grand dining room, is 98 feet long, 45 feet high, and 47 feet broad, and contains portraits of the sovereigns, statesmen and generals of the Waterloo period, chiefly by Lawrence. In the King's Drawing Room are eleven pictures by Rubens. The Ball Room is devoted to the collection of Vandyke portraits. In the Round Tower, and other parts of the Castle, many princes and great men have been imprisoned, including John, King of France, David, King of Scotland, the poet Earl of Surrey, Charles I., the Earls of Lauderdale and Lindsay, and the Marshal de Belleisle. From the top of the keep twelve shires can be seen : it is 295 feet from the level of the Little Park to the top of the flagpole. There are bronze equestrian statues of Charles II. and George III. The stables attached to the palace are on a large scale, and have a fine riding school. Around the Castle is a terrace walk, affording fine views. In the parks are Adelaide Lodge, the Queen's poultry-houses, Frogmore, the royal gardens, with a range of 920 feet of glasshouses, two experimental farms, the royal lodge of George IV., Cumberland Lodge, and an artificial lake, called Virginia Water, &c. In the neighbourhood is the King's Oak, near Cranbourn Lodge, on the forest, said to have been a favourite of William the Norman ; it is 26 feet round, and is hollow.

About half-past nine o'clock on the night of Saturday, the 19th of March, 1853, a fire broke out in the Prince of Wales's Tower, at the north-east angle of the Castle, which threatened serious consequences, and was not extinguished until half-past four o'clock the next morning. The Queen and Royal family had arrived at the Castle for their Easter sojourn a few hours previous to the breaking out of the fire ; it was extinguished by the 1st Battalion of the Scots' Fusilier Guards, under the command of Colonel Dixon, and a detachment of the 2nd Life Guards, under the command of Colonel Williams, aided by the inhabitants of Windsor and Eton, his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort personally directing their efforts. The damage was confined to the tower in which the fire originated, and its amount was estimated at £6,000.

Within seven miles of Windsor are above 100 gentlemen's seat. The importance of this town, as the royal residence, has induced two railways to compete for the traffic. The South Western has a branch through Richmond and Staines, crossing the river below Windsor, and having its terminus immediately at the base of the Castle: a private entrance has been made from the grounds for the convenience of Her Majesty. The Great Western, whose station for this town was previously at Slough, have constructed a branch into the town, crossing the river a little above it by a handsome bridge, of very peculiar construction.

The union of Windsor contains the following places:—New Windsor with Delworth, Old Windsor, Clewer, Sunninghill, Egham (Surrey), and Thorpe (Surrey). The county court district of Windsor comprises the following places:—Binfield, Boveney, Bray, Bray Wick, Bracknell, Burnham, Burnham East, Chalvey, Clewer, Cookham, Colnbrook, Chippenham, Datchet, Datchet Common, Dedworth, Ditton, Dorney, Eton, Eton Wick, Easthamstead, Farnham Royal, Farnham Common, Fifield, Hitcham, Horton, Holyport, Maidenhead, Maidenhead Thicket, North Town, Oakley Green, Pinkney's Green, Slough, Salthill, Shottesbrook, Spital, Stoke, Stoke Common, Taplow, Warfield, Waltham St. Lawrence, Waltham White, Wexham, Windsor, Old Windsor, Old Windsor Common, Wraysbury, Winkfield and Upton.

The population in 1861 was 6,728; the acreage is 2,890.

OLD WINDSOR, with SUNNINGDALE.

OLD WINDSOR is a village and parish adjoining New Windsor, on the banks of the Thames, in the hundred of Ripplesmerc, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks, and diocese of Oxford, 18 miles from London, 3 from the Great Western Railway,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  from Egham, and 2 from Datchet. Here is the union house for the parishes of Old and New Windsor, with Dedworth, Thorpe, Sunninghill, Egham, and Clewer.

The church of St. Peter is a flint structure in the Early English style, now undergoing thorough restoration. It has a tower and five bells, nave, chancel, porch, font, an organ, and a brass to the memory of Richard Mitchell Ham, a great benefactor to Queen's College, Oxford, and a monument to Colonel Powney, the companion and friend of Charles II. The living is a vicarage, value £250 per annum, with residence and four acres of glebe land, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held by the Rev. James St. John Blunt, M.A., of Balliol College, Oxford. Here is a National School for both sexes, endowed by Mrs. Hamersley with £89, and by Lady Onslow with £22 per annum. The principal seats are—Beaumont, formerly the property of the late Lord Ashbrook, once occupied by Warren Hastings; Moat Farm, said to have been the hunting seat of the Saxon kings, and also the place where Earl Godwin died. Her Majesty is lady of the manor. The chief landowner is William Devas, Esq., Woodside. There are charities of £25 yearly value.

The population of the parish in 1861 was 1,835; the acreage is 4,648; it is undulating, and the soil is gravel and clay.

POST OFFICE.—Mrs. Mary Ann Evans, receiver. Letters arrive from Windsor at 9.30 a.m.; dispatched at 10 a.m. and 5.45 p.m. The nearest money-order office is at New Windsor.

Union—Percy H. Crutchley, Esq., chairman; Rev. James St. John

Blunt, M.A., chaplain; Mr. George Henry Long, clerk to the board of Guardians; Charles Vie Ridout, resident surgeon; Joseph Samuel Pullin, master; Mary Ann Pullin, matron; Charles Clemments, school-master.

National School—John N. Massey, master; Mrs. J. Massey, mistress.

SUNNINGDALE is an ecclesiastical district, partly in the parish of Old Windsor, from which it is three miles distant, 6 from Windsor, a station on the Reading and Staines branch of the South Western Railway, and 23 from London, on the Bath and Reading roads.

There is a district church (Holy Trinity), built of brick and stone, in the Lombardo-Gothic style; it was erected in the year 1839, at a cost of £1,500. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £90, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. William Charles Raffles Flint, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is a chapel for Independents, and a National school, endowed. The principal residence is Cowarth, the seat of John Alves Arbuthnot, Esq., J.P. Virginia Water occupies part of this place.

The population in 1861 was 709. The principal landowner is John Alves Arbuthnot, Esq.

National School—Robert Tunstall, master; Mrs. Albertine W. H. Tunstall, mistress.

CARRIERS TO LONDON.—Aaron Coxhead, Thursday, returning Friday. Moses Puddle, Thursday, returning Friday.

Parish Clerks—Old Windsor, George Allen; Sunningdale, Joseph Finch.

WINKFIELD

Is a very large parish, which is nine miles across and twenty-five in circumference. It abounds with gentlemen's seats, in consequence of the beauty of its scenery, and its vicinity to Windsor, from which it is distant 6 miles, and 26 from London, in the union of Easthampstead, hundred of Ripplesmere, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary is a plain building, with square brick tower. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, annual value £500, with residence. There is a Free school, endowed by Lord Ranelagh, and a Church school; also a Primitive Methodist chapel. There are also National schools at Ascot Heath and Bulbrook, both in the parish of Winkfield. Courts leet are held at the White Hart.

The population in 1861 was, including Ascot, 2,508; the acreage is 10,500. Charles Cotton Ferard, Esq., of Ascot Place, is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

At CRANBOURNE, within this parish, is the church of St. Peter, to which a district comprising portions of the parishes of Winkfield, Sunninghill, and Old Windsor is attached. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £128, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. There are charities to a considerable amount.

LITTLE WITTENHAM

Is a small village and parish, 5 miles south-east from Abingdon, in the hundred of Ock, union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford; on the south-east are Wittenham Hills, with encampments made during a period prior to English history.

The church of St. Peter was entirely rebuilt in 1863, with the exception of the tower; it contains a monument to the memory of William Dunche, Esq., his lady, and family. The living is a rectory, annual value £400, with residence, in the gift of W. E. Hilliard, Esq., of Uxbridge. George Henry Cherry, Esq., of Denford House, Hungerford, is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Here is a Day and Sunday-school.

The population in 1861 was 134; the village contains 875 acres, including about 41 acres of glebe land; the river Thames separates it from Oxfordshire. The interest of £10 per annum is distributed to the poor. The soil is clay and chalk.

LONG WITTENHAM

Is a village and parish, 4 miles south-east from Abingdon, and 51 from London, in the hundred of Ock, union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the banks of the river Isis. The chief portion of the land is copyhold or held on lease under the President and Fellows of St. John's College, Oxford, who are lords of the manor and chief landowners.

The church of St. Mary, which is of the Norman, Early English, Decorated, Late Perpendicular, and Elizabethan styles of architecture, was restored in 1850, and the chancel rebuilt by Exeter College, the impropiators of the great tithes; the tower is 75 feet high; in the chancel several members of the Prowse family are interred. The living is a vicarage, annual value £166, in the gift of Exeter College, Oxford. Here is National day school. The vicarial glebe land is 94 acres. There is a charity of £30 a year, derived from the rental of 25 acres of land, given in coals to the poor. Here is a fine estate, the property of St. John's College, Oxford, occupied by William Turner Hayward, Esq.

The population in 1861 was 583; the parish contains 2,114a. 2r. 12p.; the rateable value is £2,540 a year. The soil is green sand and gravel.

Letters are received through Abingdon, and delivered at 10 a.m.; dispatched at 5 p.m.

WOKINGHAM

Is a market and union town and parish, partly in Berks and partly in a detached portion of Wilts, 7 miles from Reading and 32 from London. The town occupies an elevated and healthy situation within the prescribed limits of Windsor Forest, and consists of several irregularly-built streets, meeting in a central spot, used as a market place, in which stands a block of buildings, consisting of the town hall, market house, and police station; these buildings have been erected, at a cost of £3,500, on the site of the old town hall. The government of the town is vested in an alderman and burgesses, who derive their authority from a charter of great antiquity. Half-yearly sessions for minor offences are held by the corporation. The market, once celebrated for its supply of poultry, is on Tuesday; and fairs are held annually on October 11 and November 2. It is a polling-place for the county.

The parish church, which is dedicated to All Saints, was recently restored by public subscription. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, under an exchange with the Dean of Salisbury, the former rector and patron. The deans, in their character of rectors, were the appropriators of the tithes, which have been leased upon lives from time immemorial, and are now held as lessees by the trustees of the late J. H. Jacob, Esq.; on the determination of the interest of the present lessees the tithes will fall into the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, under the provisions of a recent Act of Parliament; the tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,700 a year. A portion of the parish has been constituted a separate district for ecclesiastical purposes, and John Walter, Esq., whose country seat, Bearwood, is in the neighbourhood of Wokingham, has built a church for the new district, at his own cost.

The church is in the Decorated style of the 14th and 15th centuries. The living is endowed with £150 a year, contributed in equal proportions by Mr. Walter and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and a further annual grant of £40 was made by the latter, on the completion of a parsonage house, which Mr. Walter has built at his own expense. The patronage is vested in Mr. Walter.

Wokingham contains places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans. The Baptist chapel was rebuilt about seven years ago. At Luckley Green, a mile from the town, is a hospital, founded in 1665 by Henry Lucas, Esq., for 16 poor pensioners, to be chosen from 16 of the neighbouring parishes; the hospital contains a chapel, and a residence for the minister.

Wokingham is endowed with many charities, amongst which may be mentioned a bequest by Archbishop Laud of £50 per annum, to be expended every third year in portioning poor maidens, and the other two years in apprenticing boys of the parish. The place is the head of a poor law union.

The Staines and Wokingham Railway, which joins the South Western line at Staines, gives access to London in one hour and a quarter, and the Reading, Guildford, and Reigate branch of the South Eastern line affords easy communication with the coast, and through Reading with all the stations on the Great Western Railway. Several important public institutions have within a few years sprung up in the neighbourhood.

OXFORDSHIRE.

OXFORDSHIRE is an inland county, taking its name from the town of Oxford ; it lies along the north shores of the Thames, the windings of which it follows, and it is, therefore, very irregular in shape, being, in some places only 7 miles across, and in others, 28 ; its greatest length is about 50 ; it runs in a north-west and south-east direction, having its longest dimensions on the river side ; it contains 752 square miles, or about 450,000 acres, and a population in 1851 of 170,439, and in 1861 of 170,944. It is bounded on the north by Warwickshire, and by the river Cherwell and Northamptonshire,—on the east by Buckinghamshire,—on the south by the Thames and Berkshire,—and on the west by Gloucestershire ; it is a county having a very varied surface, from the lowlands of the river to high and bare chalk hills. It is traversed by the Chiltern Hills from south-east to north-east, and by other ranges. The rivers are numerous, and mostly belong to the basin of the Thames, which is the chief waterway. The river is, in its upper course, called the Isis, and comes into Oxfordshire at Lechlade, being navigable for vessels of ninety tons ; it winds round, and passing Oxford, leaves the county at Henley. The Windrush rises in Gloucestershire, in the Cotswold Hills, passes Burford and Witney, and falls into the Thames. The Cherwell comes from Northamptonshire, enters Oxfordshire, near Claydon, and runs to the Thames near Oxford. The Evenlode rises in Worcestershire, and falls into the Thames about 4 miles below Oxford. The rivers of Oxfordshire are seventy in number. The Oxford Canal enters at Banbury, and passes by the Cherwell to Oxford ; it was begun in 1790, and is 91 miles long. By the Thames and the canal, Oxfordshire has water communication to every part of England. Its chief railway is the Great Western, which does not, however, enter the shire, but follows the other bank of the Thames ; it sends off a branch from Didcot to Oxford, and from Twyford by Shiplake to Henley. Lines are open from Oxford to Evesham, Worcester, Droitwich, Kidderminster, Dudley, and Wolverhampton, from Oxford to Warwick and Birmingham, passing Banbury, and from Oxford by Bicester to Winslow, thence to join the London and North Western at Bletchley, and thence by Bedford to Cambridge. There is also a branch of the Great Western from Banbury, by Brackley and Buckingham, to Winslow ; the county is connected with the whole of the southern system of railways by the Great Western, South Western, and South Eastern lines. In the rich meadows on the banks of the river and streams, cattle are fed ; butter is made, and also cheese ; calves are likewise reared. Many of the hills are also wooded, and a good deal of copse wood is sent down the river ; on the hills sheep are fed ; some good hogs are bred for making brawn, sausages, and bacon. The mineral productions are some coarse building stone, flints, Oxford clay, lime, slate, and ochre (from Shotover Forest). The manufactures are not of great importance; they are blankets at Witney, shag at Banbury, and gloves and polished steel at Woodstock. Some lace making is also carried on by the country women.

Oxfordshire is in the Oxford circuit and the archbishopric of Canterbury, diocese and archdeaconry of Oxford. The shire town is Oxford. There are fourteen hundreds, a city, twelve market towns, and about 273 parishes.

The county of Oxford sends three members to Parliament, the town of Oxford sends two, and the University of Oxford two; Woodstock also sends one member, and Banbury one. Oxford is a well-built city on the Thames, with a population in 1861 of 27,560; it is chiefly remarkable for its University, and is also the see of a bishop. Witney, Woodstock, and Banbury are small manufacturing towns. Woodstock has near it the palace of Blenheim, the seat of the Duke of Marlborough. Thame is a market town. Henley, Deddington, Chipping Norton, Watlington, Bicester, Bampton and Burford are market towns. Dorchester, also a market town, was the Roman station Durocina, and the seat of the bishop of the West Saxons and Mid-English.

EARLY HISTORY.

This county receives its name from the city of Oxford. When the Romans entered Britain under Aulus Plautius, the pro-prætor, by command of the Emperor Claudius, in the year of the Christian era 43, a great portion of the districts now denominated Gloucestershire and Oxfordshire, was inhabited by a race of aboriginal Britons called Dobuni. This term, says Camden, "seems to be derived from Duffu (Dufu) a British word, signifying deep or low; because inhabiting, for the most part, a plain, and valleys encompassed with hills, the whole people took their denomination from thence." According to Whitaker it is evident that this tribe prevailed chiefly in the low valleys of Oxfordshire, on the north side of the Thames. On the north-western and northern sides of the county, the possessions were bounded by the chain of hills which extend in those directions, and on the east their sway was limited by that natural barrier which rises, in an irregular form, on the Buckinghamshire side of the Thames, called the Chiltern hills. The Dobuni, who had offered no resistance to the Romans on their first invasion of Britain under Julius Cæsar, formed an immediate alliance with the same people when they entered the kingdom under Aulus Plautius. Indeed, the expedition headed by Plautius was undertaken at the suggestion of a Briton named Bericulus, who had been driven from his country through factious intrigues and had fled to Rome; and it is conjectured by several historians that this Bericulus was, himself, of the tribe or nation of the Dobuni. On the conquest of Britain, the whole territories of the Dobuni were comprehended in the Roman province Brittania Prima. A Roman military way leads into this county, pointing towards Ulchester, and the present village of Dorchester stands on the site of the station Durocornovium.

When the Romans abandoned the British islands, the Dobuni and several other tribes of Britons were left open to the assaults of every neighbouring piratical tribe; and after much suffering, and when the dread of an invasion from the Scots and Picts was pressing on them, they invited the Saxons to a defence of their southern territories. It was not until the latter part of the sixth century that the Dobuni became entirely tributary to the Saxons; and when that people founded the first three kingdoms of the Heptarchy, the territories of the Dobuni, we are told, formed a part, and were allotted to the portion denominated the kingdom of Mercia, which comprehended all the middle counties of England to the east of the Severn, and the south of Yorkshire and Lancashire.

Though the Dobuni are said to have been subjugated by the founder of the kingdom of Mercia, and to have formed a portion of his subjects, when he commenced his government in 585; yet, so late as 614 we find them defeated by the West Saxons in a battle fought at Beamdune or Bampton, and up to that period, therefore, they possibly continued independent. Their final subjugation, whether there was a former one or not, seems to have occurred in the course of the Mercian conquests under Penda. After the Saxons embraced Christianity, Mercia was divided into five bishoprics. The see of Dorchester, established about the year 638, is said to have comprehended Mercia and Wessex, and as its seat may be supposed to have been on the boundary between the two kingdoms, Oxfordshire almost certainly formed, at the date of its establishment, a part of Mercia.

Oxford for a long period was the capital of Mercia, and the residence of the monarchs of that kingdom. The Mercians proved one of the bravest of the seven Saxon kingdoms into which Britain was divided, and when Egbert reduced the whole Heptarchy to one kingdom in 827, he considered the Mercians so formidable a people, that he suffered them to remain beneath the peculiar jurisdiction or nominal government of Cogidunus, their former sovereign.

In 752, Cuthbert of Wessex, who had been compelled to acknowledge the superiority of Ethelbald of Mercia, and had revolted, met his superior in a pitched battle at Burford, achieved a victory, and regained independence. At this period a part of Oxfordshire seems to have been ceded to Wessex, and in 775, Offa, king of Mercia, defeated the West Saxons in battle, and re-took possession of Bensington. The Dobuni of the district disappear about this time from view, and the mixed race, chiefly their descendants, who occupied their ancient territories, are called Wiccii, a word which Camden supposes to mean a race who dwell in the woods and creeks of rivers. When the Heptarchy was crumbling towards ruin, Oxfordshire passed, with other districts of southern Mercia, into the possession of Wessex.

Towards the end of the ninth century the Danes penetrated to the centre of England, fixed their head-quarters at Reading, and ravaged every part of Oxfordshire, and during the long conquests which they subsequently maintained with the Saxons, they repeatedly made this county the seat of war. Several momentous battles were fought in the county; and the city of Oxford was four times completely reduced to ashes. In the eleventh century, according to the Saxon Chronicle, the whole district was principally inhabited by Danes. At the division of England, in 1016, between Canute and Edmund Ironside, Oxfordshire appears to have fallen to the former, and in 1015 and 1018, Oxford was the scene of two great councils or assemblies of the Danes and the Anglo-Saxons. In 1387, the insurgent nobles defeated the Earl of Oxford at Radcot bridge, in the vicinity of Banpton.

The dreadful and unnatural war of the Roses proved fatal to several of the nobility and gentry connected with Oxfordshire, among whom none suffered more severely than the august family which derived a title from the county. In 1469 an army of 15,000 insurgents, composed chiefly of the farmers and peasantry of Yorkshire, proceeded, under their leader, Robin, of Redesdale, so far south as the neighbourhood of Banbury. Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, jointly with the Earl of Devon, led on the Yorkist or Royalist army of Edward IV. to confront them; but the two earls quarrelled at Banbury, and the latter withdrew his forces. Pembroke, however, encountered the rebels on a level extent of ground called Danesmoor, on the border of Oxfordshire, and after a sanguinary struggle, and at disadvantage, he was defeated, captured, and put to death. In the civil war of Charles I., in the seventeenth century, the inhabitants of Oxfordshire, though comparatively neutral in the contest, were not so favoured as to escape the havoc of the sword. The contending armies traversed the county from one extremity to the other, and whether under the banner of the King or of the Parliament, their exactions and devastations were almost equally injurious, as far as regarded the great bulk of the inhabitants. At the beginning of the melancholy struggle, Sir John Byron, a royalist, took possession of Oxford, and of the castles of Banbury and Broughton, and during the vicissitudes of the contest, the city of Oxford was reduced by the sectarian army. Oxford was afterwards the scene of various important occurrences and councils. In 1643 a body of the Parliamentary army, who were then besieging Reading, fought a smart skirmish at Caversham bridge with a body of the King's troops under Prince Rupert and General Ruthven, who attempted to relieve the besieged, and about two months afterwards the parliamentarians suffered a surprise, and the capture of many of their number from Prince Rupert near Thame. In 1645, Cromwell defeated a body of the royal forces at Islepe bridge, and compelled Colonel Windebank, who occupied Blechington House, with a garrison of 200 men, to surrender.

ROMAN AND SAXON ANTIQUITIES.

Oxfordshire possesses few important monuments of Roman military construction, owing, perhaps, to the amity which prevailed between the Romans and the Dobuni. Vestiges of a large square camp, with a ditch and bank at Alcester, in Warwickshire, near the eastern boundary of Oxfordshire, are regarded by some antiquarians as the remains of a Roman station. Dorchester,* situated on the south-west border of the county, probably the Doricina of Richard of Cirencester, is the only Roman town or station which has been identified. That the Romans formerly resided here in considerable strength would seem to be evident from the great number of their coins which have been found in the neighbourhood; and the minor antiquities which have been discovered in almost every part of the county. Roman bricks are often found in the fields; and foundations seemingly of Roman masonry are occasionally struck by the plough, and numerous relics of funeral ceremony have been dug up in several places in different ages.

In addition to military and domestic vestiges of the Romans, may be noticed several funeral mounds, formed from the rude grassy squares of turf which the Roman soldiers were accustomed to throw over the ashes of their eminent warriors. According to Dr. Plot, the most remarkable of these mounds is that termed Astal Barrow, which he supposes to be the sepulchre of some eminent leader, on account of its unusual height and circumference. A tumulus, with fragments of Roman bricks and cement and remains of a Roman brick and tile factory, have been discovered at Wilcot, north of Witney. Only one of those four consular or prætorian ways which were constructed from sea to sea, along across the whole island, passed through Oxfordshire, and that was the Icknield or Ikeneild street, which crossed the county from north-east to south-west.

GENERAL FEATURES.

The southern portion of Oxfordshire presents a charming alteration of hill and valley, productive of many pleasing displays of pictorial scenery. The principal ridge of the Chiltern hills, which run across the county from north-east to south-west, near Stokenchurch Hills, Nuffield, and Chalkenden abounds in variety and grace of scene. "Now clothed with sheep, now luxuriously mantled with forests of beech, and now clad with crops of grain, at heights which were esteemed impracticable by the midland husbandry of the early ages."

CLIMATE AND SOIL.

The air in general is considered as healthy and bracing as any other county in England. The northern district, owing to the want of wood and of umbrageous fences, is comparatively chilly during the winter, and unpleasantly warm in summer.

FORESTS, WOODS, &c.

Except in the northern district, and omitting the article of oak, this county may at present be termed a well wooded county. When Camden wrote his Britannia, which he finished in 1607, he described the woods of Oxfordshire as forming one of the chief boasts of the country; and some writers have supposed that an expanse of wood covered all the Chiltern district, and formed part of the great forest described by Leland, as extending 120 miles westward from the border of Kent.

MINERALOGY.

In several parts of the neighbourhood of Oxford the clays were formerly used with considerable success by potters. The ochre of Shotover is considered "the best of its kind in the world, being of a true yellow colour, and very weighty." The sandstone of the oolite formations is quarried in several places, particularly near Burford; and forms the material of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, and of several other noted structures throughout the country. Freestone, limestone, and slate are plentiful in several places. A limestone, or coarse marble, is found in the forest of Wychwood, and the calcareous slate or grey oolite limestone, of Stonesfield, after being exposed to the frosts of the winter, is struck by percussion on the edge into slates sufficiently thin to be used for roofing. Quarries of the same sort are worked in the valley of the Evenlode, not far from Blenheim.

ADDERBURY

Is a parish, which includes the hamlets of EAST and WEST ADDERBURY, MILTON, and the chapelry of BARFORD ST. JOHN, in Bloxham hundred, Banbury union, and diocese of Oxford, situated on Sorbrook, a branch of the river Chirwell,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Banbury,  $19\frac{1}{2}$  north from Oxford, and 65 from London. The church of St. Mary stands in East Adderbury; it is in the Pointed style of architecture. The chancel was built by William of Wykeham, who in 1385 gave this vicarage to New College, Oxford, of which he was the founder. His bust is sculptured, with his armorial bearings, on the external wall, over the east window of the chancel, and his arms are also carved in the roof of the same. In the south transept of the church are some monuments of the Bustard family. In the front gallery is a handsome organ. The living is a vicarage, with Barford annexed, joint annual value, £818, in the gift of New College. Here is a chapel for Wesleyans. There is an endowed school for 50 boys, a school for girls on the National system, and an Infant school. The poor have the benefit of annual charities, amounting to upwards of £200. Henry Wilmot, Esq., was created Lord Wilmot of Adderbury by King Charles I in 1644, and Earl of Rochester by Charles II. in 1652; he was the father of the witty but profligate Earl. Sir Thomas Cobb, of Adderbury, was created a baronet in 1662. Sir George Cobb, Bart., who died in 1762, was the last of the family who resided here. The old manor house was built by one of the Bustard family, with whom Sir Thomas Pope was connected by marriage. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor. The population in 1861 was 895. The area is 1,900 acres. The Oxford Canal and river Cherwell pass through the parish.

WEST ADDERBURY is a township, in the hundred of Bloxham, union of Banbury, and parish of Adderbury, separated from East Adderbury by the river Sorbrook. It is 60 miles from London, about 20 north from Oxford, and 3½ south from Banbury. The Independents and Society of Friends have each a place of worship here. There are charities of upwards of £60 annual value. The population in 1861 was 346; the area is 1,147 acres.

BARFORD ST. JOHN is a chapelry, in the parish of Adderbury, hundred of Bloxham, and union of Banbury, 5 miles south-west from Banbury, and 2 north-west from Deddington. The church of St. John is a small plain edifice, with octagonal turret. The population in 1861 was 107; the acreage is 480.

MILTON is a hamlet, in the parish of Adderbury, one mile west; it is a small compact village. A neat church was erected in 1856; it can accommodate about 100 persons.

AMBROSDEN, with the Hamlets of UPPER and LOWER ARNCOTT and BLACKTHORN,

Is a large parish, extending over a considerable tract of country, 3 miles south-east from Bicester, and 12 north-east from Oxford, in the union of Bicester, hundred of Bullington, and diocese of Oxford. The name is supposed to be derived from Ambrosius Aurelius, the celebrated British leader, who encamped here during the siege of Alchester by the Saxons. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is an ancient structure, in the Early English style of architecture, said to have been built in the reign of Edward I. ; it consists of nave, chancel, and embattled tower. The living is a vicarage, value £230, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Sir G. O. P. Turner. Ambrosden Park, formerly of great magnitude and extent, and in which stood a noble mansion (few trees of which now remain), was, at one period, the seat of the ancestors of the present Sir Edward Turner. The population in 1861 was 161 ; the acreage is 4,865. Sir Edward Turner is lord of the manor.

ARNCOTT, UPPER and LOWER, or Over and Nether, is a hamlet to Ambrosden, situated a mile from that place. The population in 1861 was 334.

BLACKTHORN is also a hamlet to, and distant from Ambrosden, a mile east. There is a small Congregational chapel here. The population in 1861 was 376.

BAMPTON

Is a parish and small market town, with the hamlet of WEALD, 14 miles west from Oxford, and 71 from London, in the hundred of Bampton, union and diocese of Oxford, watered by the river Isis and several tributary streams. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is an ancient cruciform building, surmounted by an Anglo-Norman spire, with more recent additions; there are a gateway and other trifling remains of the castle, said to have belonged to King John. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The Deanery (commonly so called), is a fine Elizabethan house, of which considerable portions remain. Here is a Baptist chapel. The Grammar school, endowed with a house and £30 per annum, is an ancient building. The National schools for boys and girls, endowed with a school-room and £48 per annum, chiefly derived from land, have been recently built. The only public building is the Town Hall, in the centre of the town. The streets and the general appearance of the town have been much improved. It is situated in an agricultural district, and depends greatly for its prosperity on the agricultural interests. The markets are held on Wednesday, chiefly for grain. The fairs are held, one on the 26th of March, which is nearly obsolete, and a large fair for horses on the 26th and 27th of August. The population in 1861 was 1,865; the parish contains 4,326 acres, principally arable. The Earl of Shrewsbury is lord of the manor. Bampton has several charities.

WEALD is a hamlet in this parish adjoining the town.

BANBURY

Is a borough and market and union town, situated in a deep valley near the northern part of Oxfordshire, on the river Cherwell, which here divides this county and Northamptonshire, 71 miles from London, and 23 from Oxford, in the hundred of its own name, and diocese of Oxford. The town consists of several good streets. The manufacture of plushes, girth and other webbing is carried on, and owing to its being the centre of an agricultural district, it is a place of considerable trade, and noted for the extent of business transacted in cattle, corn, and all kind of provisions at its weekly market, on Thursday, and the numerous fairs, which are held on Thursday after January 17th, first Thursday in Lent, the third Thursday in February, the third Thursday in March—statute, for hiring servants, the third Thursday in April, Holy Thursday, third Thursday in June, and July 1st, wool fair, third Thursday in July, third Thursday in August, third Thursday in September, first Thursday after Old Michaelmas, third Thursday in November, and second Thursday before Christmas. The fame of the celebrated Banbury cakes, on record since the year 1608, has continued to the present day ; it is also noted for the good quality of its ale. Rhubarb is cultivated and prepared in considerable quantities in this neighbourhood for medicinal purposes : the manufacture of agricultural implements is extensively carried on at Banbury : the extensive foundries and manufactories of the above implements are those of Samuelson and Co., Barrows and Carmichael, together with a few minor ones, yielding employment to several hundred hands. There are three old established banks and a Savings Bank, established in 1818. Malting, brickmaking, wool-stapling, and blacking manufacture are also carried on ; and there are several corn mills on the river Cherwell. In the vicinity are extensive nurseries, varying in extent from 10 to 20 acres ; of the latter is that of P. J. Perry, in the Oxford road, pleasantly situated, commanding extensive views. The proximity of the London and North-Western and the Great Western Railways, and the Oxford Canal is a source of much commercial advantage ; there are three wharfs, also a dock for building and repairing barges. The commercial, passenger, and merchandise transit is conducted to a great extent from this centre to the Buckingham branch southward, Northamptonshire eastward and northward, also westward, connecting the cities of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester, through the Midland Railway. There are about 300 carriers visiting Banbury weekly from the surrounding towns and villages.

The corporation consists of a high steward, mayor, recorder, four aldermen, twelve councillors, a town clerk, and two sergeants-at-mace.

Banbury returns one member to Parliament.

The church of St. Mary is a modern erection, not remarkable for architectural beauty ; it is capable of accommodating a congregation of at least 2,300 persons, including 500 free sittings and 160 sittings for the school children : the tower, which is over the western entrance, rises to the height of 133 feet, and contains a clock with quarter chimes, and a peal of 8 bells ; the church was lighted with gas in 1841 ; the chancel contains two monuments of the Pigott family. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Neithrop annexed, in the patronage of the Bishop of Oxford. There is a chapel of ease (St. Paul's), situated in Neithrop. Banbury has been divided into two parishes for ecclesiastical purposes ; the parish church of South Banbury, called Christ Church, is a neat structure, in the Gothic style ; it was consecrated in 1854. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £180, with residence, in the Tudor style, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford.

The Catholic church of St. John is in South Bar street ; it was completed in 1838, with schools and priest's residence attached. The Independents, Particular Baptists, and Wesleyans, have each a neat and commodious place of worship : there are also a small chapel for Primitive Methodists, one for Calvinistic Dissenters, one for the Plymouth Brethren, one for Unitarians, one for the Society of Friends, which is a somewhat ancient structure, and the Wesleyan Reformers have also a place of worship.

A Grammar school was established here in 1858 : there are also several respectable private schools for young ladies and gentleman. A handsome school was erected by, and at the sole expense of, B. Samuelson, Esq., in 1860. Christ Church schools, in Grimsbury, were opened in January, 1862, for boys and girls, numbering about 250. There is a charity school on the National, and one on the British system, for boys and girls; also three Infant schools, educating altogether about 900 children; and there are almshouses for ten widows.

Of the ancient castle of Banbury, erected about 1125, by Alexander, Bishop of Lincoln, part of the walls alone remain: it was formerly of great strength, and sustained two severe sieges in 1642 and in 1644, during the civil war between the houses of York and Lancaster; near here the Battle of Banbury was fought in 1469, between the Earls of Pembroke and Warwick. William Lord Knollys, of Grey's Court, Treasurer of the Household to Queen Elizabeth, was created Earl of Banbury by Charles I. in 1626.

There are numerous charitable institutions within the parish of Banbury, which are supported by voluntary contributions, viz., Old Charitable Society, for the relief of indigent townsmen, the Charitable Society, for visiting and relieving the sick distressed poor at their own habitations; and the Clothing Fund, &c.; also a bequest by the Countess of Arran, for the apprenticing of poor children selected from the National school.

A new Town Hall was erected in 1854; the building is of the character used in England in the fifteenth century, the windows having tracery and mouldings in accordance with such character: the tower contains an illuminated clock, and is covered with a semi-spiral top, serving for the purpose of ventilation; the front of this tower has a stone balcony for the convenience of speakers at elections, and for addressing large audiences: the ground floor contains the Common Hall, approached by a stone staircase in the tower, forming a distinguishing feature in the first view of the building, as seen on entering the town from the railway; this room is 60 feet long by 34 wide, with a recess for the bench, the division to form which is moveable, so as to give accommodation for concerts and public meetings, and will seat 600 persons: there is also a small gallery in the tower over the principal staircase, a retiring room for the magistrates and recorder, and a private staircase as an approach to the bench for magistrates, witnesses, &c.; accommodation is also provided for fire engines, and for a resident policeman. The general quarter sessions and magistrates' meetings are held at the Town Hall; the latter in petty sessions every Monday at 10 a.m. The County Court is also held here monthly.

In 1862 a new Police Station was built in the Newland road, where the county magistrates hold their petty sessions for the district every alternate Thursday; it has also accommodation for superintendent, one sergeant, and three constables.

In the Market place are two handsome buildings each used as a Corn Exchange; one known as the Cornhill Exchange, is a circular building, very commodious, and has a neat stone frontage; the other, termed the Central Corn Exchange, is approached through the butter and poultry market; the interior is very spacious, having a gallery, which is also used for concerts and town meetings. Here is also a station of the Electric and International Telegraph Company.

Banbury Cross is a handsome structure, of a hexagonal form, 52 feet high. It is of Bath stone, and is divided into three stories, or compartments. The panels of the centre compartment are richly ornamented with the foliage of the rose, ivy, acacia, chestnut, hollyhock, and vine, and graced with the arms of queens Mary and Victoria, Kings Charles I., and George I., the Princess Frederick William of Prussia, &c., &c.

A new Cemetery has been opened on the north side of the town, a portion of which is unconsecrated, and set apart for the use of dissenters.

A Nunnery was established in 1850 for 15 ladies of the order of Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul ; the objects of which are visiting the sick and instructing poor children.

The town is well lighted with gas, and is abundantly supplied with good water.

The Union Workhouse is a handsome pile of buildings, situated on an eminence of Neithrop, and is registered to contain about 247 paupers. The Board of Guardians meet here every Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. The Banbury union comprises the following places, the jurisdiction of the county court includes the same, viz :—Alkerton, Appletree (Northampton), Aston-le-Walls (Northampton), Avon Dassett (Warwick), Banbury, Barford St. Michael, Bloxham, Bodicot, Bourton Great and Little, Broughton, Chalcombe (Northampton), Chipping Warden (Northampton), Clattercote, Claydon, Cropredy, Drayton, East Adderbury, East Shutford, Edgecott (Northampton), Epwell, Farnborough (Warwick), Grimsbury, Hanwell, Hook Norton, Horley, Hornton, Lower Boddington (Northampton), Middleton Cheney (Northampton), Milcombe, Milton, Mellington, Neithrop, Nethercot (Northampton), North Newington, Prescott, Radway (Warwick), Ratley (Warwick), Shenington, Shotswell (Warwick), Sibford Ferris, Sibford Gower, South Newington, Swalcliffe, Tadmarton, Upper Boddington (Northampton), Warmington (Warwick), West Adderbury, West Shutford, Wigginton, Wroxton.

The country around is fertile and most beautifully varied ; it also comprises some of the finest portions of arable and pasture land in the county, being the rich red and sandy loam. At the top of High street, near to the site of " Old Banbury Cross," was erected in 1858 a handsome memorial cross of Mediæval style, bearing the arms of Banbury, with several fountains, in commemoration of the marriage of the Princess Royal with the Crown Prince of Prussia.

The Water Works are at Grimsbury. The Local Board of Health and the Mechanics' Institute are in Church passage. The Post-office in the High street, near to which are the Reading Rooms.

There are two newspapers printed and published in Banbury, namely, the " Banbury Guardian," established in 1838, and the " Banbury Advertiser," in 1854, each having an extensive circulation in the neighbouring counties ; also guide books and almanacks.

In the town are several first-class hotels, commercial inns, and posting-houses, having flies and omnibuses to meet each train.

The population of the whole parish in 1861 was 9,140 ; the area of the parish, including the hamlets, is 3,150 ; and the acreage of the whole union is 76,190.

NEITHROP, a township of this parish, surrounds the town.

CALTHORPE, WYKHAM, EASINGTON, and HARDWICK, are also hamlets of the same parish of Banbury, parts of which extend into Northamptonshire, viz., GRIMSBURY and NETHERCOT, which lie on the eastern side of the Cherwell, in the Sutton hundred of that county, which is situated in the union of the same name.

BENSINGTON

(CALLED BENSON) is a large village and parish, situated on the banks of the Thames, partly in the hundred of Ewelme and partly in the hundred of Dorchester, union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford, 12 miles from Oxford,  $14\frac{1}{2}$  from Reading, 5 from the Great Western Railway station at Wallingford, 11 from Henley, 2 from Wallingford, and 46 from London.

The church of St. Helen is of great antiquity ; it is of the Pointed Gothic style, with aisles, separated from the nave by six Gothic arches, supported by pillars of two different orders, not corresponding with the rest of the structure ; one splendid arch separates the chancel from the body of the church. The register dates from 1596. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £220, in the gift of Christ Church, Oxford.

The population in 1861 was 1,157 ; the acreage, including Fyfield, is 2,922.

FYFIELD, or Fifield, near Wallingford, is a small hamlet, near the river Thames, in the union of Wallingford, and parish of Bensington, 2½ miles from Wallingford. Here is a very ancient manor house, which has been modernised, and is supposed to have been formerly a strong fortress ; the walls are of immense thickness. Robert Aldworth Newton, Esq., lord of the manor, holds in his own right the offices of constable, assessor, and surveyor.

The population in 1861 was 12.

PRESTON CROWMARSH is a small hamlet of Bensington, beautifully situated on the banks of the Thames.

BICESTER.

BICESTER is a market town and parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Bicester, and diocese of Oxford, and includes the townships of MARKET END and KING'S END; it is situated on the eastern border of the county and on the bank of a small stream called the Ray, falling into the Cherwell at Islip. The air is healthy and the water pure, and to the use of it is attributed the celebrity the town has obtained for its excellent ale. It is situated on the old mail coach road from Birmingham and Leamington to London, from which it is distant  $54\frac{1}{2}$  miles, 13 north-east from Oxford, 15 south-east from Banbury, 17 north-west from Aylesbury, and 10 south-west from Buckingham.

The church of St. Edburg is a spacious and handsome edifice, originally Norman and cruciform, with a central tower, now destroyed, and aisles added, the south about the thirteenth, the north in the fourteenth, and the western tower and north porch in the fifteenth century. The style of architecture is principally Early English, of the Decorated style, with Norman arches in transepts; the ancient Norman string course can still be traced outside as well as inside the church. It has been restored a few years ago, at an expense of £3,500. There are many good monuments; amongst others one of stained glass in the chancel window, representing the Ascension, to the memory of Sir E. P. Turner, lord of the manor of Market End, presented by Mrs. Fryer, his daughter; and another in one of the north aisle windows to Major Lewis Coker, lord of the manor of King's End, who was accidentally drowned in 1858. A new Cemetery was opened in 1861; it is on the south side of the town, and in direct communication with the churchyard; a neat chapel has been erected for the use of Nonconformists. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the Turner family, annual value £300, with residence.

There are also a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, situated in Sheep street, a neat building, erected by subscription—a Sunday school is connected with it; an Independent chapel, erected A.D. 1729, in Chapel street, a substantial, commodious building, capable of seating 400 persons; the celebrated Colonel Gardiner was an attendant at the service of this chapel; the table which he used is still preserved; the Rev. John Richards is the minister; a chapel in connection with the United Free Methodists was erected in Sheep street in 1863.

Bicester, anciently called Burin-ceastre, softened by time to the former, is supposed to have been founded in the seventh century. The etymology of its name is uncertain; antiquarians differ in their opinions. By many it is conjectured to derive its name from Birinus, the Saxon canonised prelate and supposed founder (in whose time it had been a frontier garrison), and may possibly have been built by his advice from the ruins of Alcester, which was a fortified city, made a Roman station of considerable note by Aulus Plautius, the consul: the site is on the left side of the Bicester and Oxford road, three miles from the former, and now called Wendlebury Meadows. Tanner, in his "Notitia," says, "Gilbert Bassett, Baron of Heddington, built a monastery here in 1182, for a Prior and eleven Black Canons, to the honour of St. Mary and St. Edburg, the holy nun of Aylesbury." The town consists principally of one long street, on the high road to Banbury; the Market place, with outlet joining it to King's End, on the road to Wendlebury and Oxford, and two others branching from them, called Chapel street and Crockwell. In the Market place formerly stood the Town hall, and shambles, erected in 1622, but destroyed by a riotous assemblage of townspeople in 1826.

The chief business of the inhabitants arises from their well-attended market and cattle fairs. Fairs are held here on the first Friday in Easter week, first Friday in June, August 5th and 6th, Friday before and first and second Friday after the 11th of October, and on Friday after December 11th. The market is held on Friday, and a cattle market on the first Friday in every month, which is generally well attended.

The management of the town is vested in two local boards, one for each township, both having a separate jurisdiction; that for King's End was formed in 1858, and that for Market End in 1862. Each township maintains its own poor and its separate highways, elects its own overseers, guardians, and churchwardens, but are still united as one ecclesiastical parish, King's End having from time immemorial paid one-fifth of the amount necessary for repairs of the church; many of the charities are also kept separate.

The mansion of the Coker family is a handsome modern building, now occupied by Captain Style, erected on the site of the ancient manor house called Nonnes Place, in King's End, purchased by an ancestor of the present owner.

MARKET END is a bailiwick, consisting of the lordship and manor, leased for a term of 10,000 years by the Earl of Derby, A.D. 1596, to whom it had passed, according to the laws of primogeniture, from Gilbert Bassett (a younger son of Ralph Bassett, Chief Justice of England), and granted to him, with six other knights' fees, in the twelfth century; the reversion in fee simple was afterwards conveyed to certain persons in trust for all interested in the lease; the manor and estates were thus constituted a bailiwick, purchased for the use and benefit of those who might hereafter obtain possession of part of the demesne; the lordship of the manor is thus vested in all those persons who become purchasers under the original lease.

The Bicester Union Workhouse was opened in October, 1836, and stands outside the town, between the Middleton and Caversfield roads; it is a large and commodious stone building, capable of accommodating 320 persons. The union contains an area of 103 square miles, and comprises the following places:—Ambrosden, Ardley, Arncott, Bainton, Bicester, (King's End), Bicester (Market End), Blackthorn, Bletchington, Boar-stall (Bucks), Bucknell, Caversfield, Charlton-upon-Otmoor, Chesterton, Cottisford, Fencott and Murcott, Fewcott, Fringford, Fritwell, Godding-ton, Hardwick, Hethe, Islip, Kirtlington, Launton, Lower Heyford, Merton, Middleton Stoney, Newton Purcell, Noke, Oddington, Piddington, Shelswell, Somerton, Souldern, Stoke Lyne, Stratton Audley, Tusmore, Upper Heyford, Wendlebury, and Weston-on-the-Green; the Rev. J. W. Watts is the chaplain.

The Town Stock is a fund arising out of the rents of certain lands and tenements left by will of very ancient date, for the relief of decayed tradesmen; the feoffees are Captain Style, J. H. B. Churchill, George Tubb, W. D. Cole, Jonas Paxton, R. Bathe, W. Hitchman, and W. Coleman.

The Benevolent Society provides articles of clothing, &c., for poor women in childbed. W. Walker, Esq., of Stamford Hill, Middlesex, bequeathed an annual sum to each of the following schools—the Blue Coat school, the Church, and Independent chapel Sunday schools; besides which there are the Visiting Society, the Provident Society, and the Dorcas Society (in connection with the Independent chapel), for supplying the poor with articles of clothing, soup, coals, &c.

The National schools were erected in 1858 for boys and girls, and are capable of accommodating 400 children; the cost of these schools, with the master's house adjoining, was nearly £2,000, £800 of which was granted by Government, and the remainder was raised by voluntary contributions; they are very handsome, built of native stone and faced with Bath stone, and fitted with every modern convenience; the architecture is Early English. They were built through the exertions of Mr. Charles Fowler, a tenant farmer, residing in King's End, aided by the vicar of the parish; prior to this the vestry room of the church was used for the purpose of education. The schools are under the management of a committee, annually elected by the subscribers; Mr. C. Fowler is honorary secretary.

There are Sunday schools in connection with the Church and the Independent chapel, established about the year 1794, through the perseverance of Mr. James Jones, an inhabitant of the town.

An Agricultural and Horticultural Society was established in 1859, which has been very successful—numbering upwards of 300 members, the largest number of any in the county—and has already been of great service in the district.

Petty sessions for the hundred of Ploughley are held at the clerk's office every Friday. A County Court house is now about being erected in Sheep street. The court is held monthly; the following is a list of the parishes within its jurisdiction:—Ambrosden, Ardley, Arncott, Bainton, Bicester (Market End), Bicester (King's End), Blackthorn, Bletchington, Boarstall, Bucknell, Caversfield, Charlton-upon-Otmoor, Chesterton, Cottisford, Fencott, Fewcott, Fringford, Fritwell, Goddington, Grendon Underwood, Hardwick, Hethe, Heyford (Lower), Heyford (Upper), Islip, Kirtlington, Launton, Ludgershall, Marsh Gibbon, Merton, Middleton Stoney, Moorcot, Newton Morrell, Newton Purcell, Noke, Oddington, Piddington, Shelswell, Somerton, Souldern, Stoke Lyne, Stratton Audley, Tusmore, Wendlebury, and Weston-on-the-Green.

There are public libraries and news-rooms at E. Smith and Son's, and Hewiett's.

Bicester owes much of its prosperity at the present day to the hunt, for which the country around is well adapted: it was established about 60 years since by J. Ward, Esq., who built Swift's House, now the residence of Sir Henry Peyton, Bart. The railway from Oxford to Bletchley passes through here, and there is a neat station at the bottom of the London road.

The population in 1861 was 2,711 Market End, and 338 King's End; total, 3,049: the acreage is 2,580.

BLETCHINGDON

Is a parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Bicester, and diocese of Oxford, 8 miles north from Oxford, and 7 south-west from Bicester.

The church of St. Giles is pleasantly situated in the park, and is a neat building, mainly in the perpendicular style. The pulpit and open seats are of the time of James I. The living is a rectory, gross annual value £530, with residence, in the gift of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford. There is a mixed day school, under the patronage and support of Viscount Valentia, and a day school and Sunday schools for boys and girls, supported by the rector. In 1620 Leonard Power bequeathed £200 towards the maintenance of four almshouses and a school house, formerly built by him in Bletchington. These buildings were pulled down some years ago and the present almshouses erected. No money has been applied by the trustees for many years past to the maintenance of the school. The income arising from the bequest of Leonard Power and others is about £60 yearly. Bletchington Park is the seat of Viscount Valentia, who is lord of the manor. Viscount Valentia, the Rev. T. Dand, and G. R. Walker, Esq., are the land-owners.

The population in 1861 was 659; the acreage is 2,540. The soil is mixed; the land two-thirds arable, one-third pasture.

The Kirtlington station of the Great Western Railway is situated at Gibraltar in this parish. It is about one mile and a half from the village. At Gibraltar, or Enslow, there is a wharf on the Birmingham and Oxford canal.

BLOXHAM

Is a parish in the hundred of Bloxham, union of Banbury, and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles south-west from Banbury, and 21 north from Oxford. It is situated on a gently rising ground, and is watered by a brook, a branch of the river Cherwell, which divides the town into two parts.

The church of St. Mary is an exceedingly interesting edifice, some portions of which were probably erected as early as the reign of Stephen, but the greater part is of the thirteenth century, though there are to be found in it examples in architecture of the style of various periods. It is said to have been repaired and beautified by Cardinal Wolsey, and that he added to it the spire. On the south side, projecting from the south aisle, is a chapel of the fifteenth century, with grand windows in the perpendicular style; also a good open timber roof. The tower and spire of this church are very beautiful; the spire, remarkable for its fine proportions, rises to the height of 195 feet, and is an object of admiration to the architectural antiquary. There are five bells in the tower; in the south aisle is an ancient carved stone font; the western entrance is enriched with a sculptured representation of the Last Judgment. The church contains several monuments, likewise monumental brasses attached to the walls of singularly late date—1750 and 1760—a period when that material was rarely employed for such a purpose; the south porch is a beautiful specimen of Early English, and the north porch one of Norman work. The living is a vicarage, annual value £200, with residence, in the gift of Eton College. Here is a chapel for Wesleyans, and one for Baptists. The Parochial school is endowed with £20 10s., through the benefaction of a Mr. Job Faulkener; it is the interest of money left in the funds by him at his decease, and is for the free education of 28 boys, sons of poor people not being farmers. A Grammar school, built in 1853, by the Rev. J. W. Hewett, M.A., was subsequently purchased by the Rev. P. R. Egerton, B.C.L., of New College, Oxford. Considerable additions were in progress in 1863; there is a good staff of masters, and when the new buildings are complete there will be excellent accommodation for 120 boys of the middle classes.

The charities of Bloxham are very extensive; they consist of an estate vested in sixteen of the principal inhabitants, or owners of property, or residents in the neighbourhood, called feoffees; the annual gross income of this charity is little short of £400 per annum, and after deducting the necessary outlay on the estate and such costs of management as are required, the remainder is divided, by a decree of the Court of Chancery of 1604, into three shares or thereabouts, one of which is distributed to the poor, a second share is allotted to the repairs of the parish church and bridges leading thereto, and the third to the common Town Charges Fund, such as paving the village, and other necessary uses; the shares vary from £85 to £100 each, according to the annual expenditure required on the estate.

The population in 1861 was 1,366; the parish contains 2,683 acres. Lord Saye and Sele is lord of the manor. The soil is rich, composed of red and sandy loam, fine arable and pasture land; the crops of the usual kind.

Bloxham Grove is the residence of the Rev. George Warriner, M.A. In its vicinity several Roman coins of "Antonius Pius" in good preservation were dug up in 1840. Brick making, rope making, and malting is carried on here.

BODICOT

Is a parish, in the hundred of Bloxham, union of Banbury, and diocese of Oxford, distant from London about 67 miles, 2 south from Banbury, and 21 north from Oxford.

The church of St. John the Baptist is a very neat structure, of the 14th and 15th centuries. The building is a mixture of the Decorated and Perpendicular styles of architecture, but principally of the latter: in 1844 it underwent very considerable repairs. In the chancel is a memorial window, to the memory of George Warriner, Esq., who died December 30th, 1845; the subjects are the Saviour, Apostles, and the Evangelists. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £150, with residence, in the gift of New College.

The Baptists have a commodious place of worship here, and there is a small one for Wesleyans. Here is a National school for boys and girls. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 626; the acreage is 1,217; the soil is rich, and the crops of the usual kind.

BROUGHTON, with the township of North Newington.

BROUGHTON is a parish and small village, in the hundred of Bloxham, union and county court district of Banbury, rural deanery of Deddington, diocese and archdeaconry of Oxford, 2 miles from Banbury, and 23 from Oxford, situated on the river Sorbrook.

The church of St. Mary is a very interesting structure, in the Decorated style of the 14th century, with a tower containing one bell and a spire at the west end ; a handsome stone screen divides the nave from the chancel ; there is a curious old Norman stone font on a pedestal, also a carved stone pulpit ; there are also several brasses. In the south aisle are some very fine monuments, one of which is that of Sir Thomas de Broughton, the founder of the church and castle ; in the chancel is a fine monument to the memory of Sir Thomas and Lady Wykeham, the great nephew and niece of William of Wykeham, whose heiress, Margaret Wykeham, intermarried with Lord Saye and Sele, who was slain at the battle of Barnet in 1471. The living is a rectory, annual value £666, with residence, in the gift of, and held by, the Rev. Charles Francis Wyatt, M.A. The Venerable Lord Saye and Sele is lord of the manor.

Broughton Castle is the seat of Lord Saye and Sele ; it is surrounded by a wide and deep moat, and was formerly a place of great strength ; the approach to the castle, over a stone bridge, through an ancient gatehouse tower, is highly picturesque ; the greater part of the building within the court on the north front was erected by the Fiennes family in 1544 ; the south front is partly covered with ivy. The most ancient part, built by the De Broughtons, is at the east end, and bears date 1301 ; the embattled walls and turrets which surrounded this residence have been partly removed, but some buildings on the edge of the moat, coeval with the original structure, remain ; the hall, 55 feet in length by 26 feet 9 inches in width, has a ceiling with fifteen pendants ; eastward of the hall is a more ancient passage, staircase, chambers, &c. ; contiguous to the dining-room and drawing-room, which are westward of the hall, is a gallery, extending along the north front, about 90 feet in length ; some of the apartments opening upon this gallery are also richly ornamented in their ceilings, chimney pieces, &c., and specimens of painted glass likewise remain. The park consists of about 100 acres.

The population in 1861 was 213 ; the acreage is 946.

NORTH NEWINGTON is a township, in the parish of Broughton, hundred of Bloxham, and union of Banbury, 2½ miles west from the latter town, and 23½ north-west from Oxford. The Independents have a place of worship here. There is a charity of £115 annual value, £40 for apprenticing two poor boys, £25 for distribution amongst the poor, and £50 for an Endowed school; there is also a Sunday school.

The population in 1861 was 428; the acreage is 1,089. Lord Saye and Sele is lord of the manor. Paper manufacturing is carried on here. There is a good school, with master's residence.

BURFORD and FULBROOK.

BURFORD is a parish and small market town, in the hundred of Bampton, union of Witney, and diocese of Oxford, situated at the western extremity of the county, on the borders of Gloucestershire, 5 miles south from Ship-ton station, 18 from Oxford, 72 from London by the road through High Wycombe, and 76 through Henley-on-Thames. The town is situated on an ascent, on the banks of the river Windrush, and had a charter from King Henry II. granting it all the privileges of the city of Oxford. Petty sessions are held here once a fortnight at the offices of the clerk to the magistrates. There is a market held every Saturday for corn, &c. The fairs are held on the last Saturday in April, July 5th, and September 25th, for horses, cattle, sheep, cheese, and toys.

The church of St. John the Baptist is a large and handsome edifice, erected at different periods, with a Norman tower in the centre, from which rises a lofty spire; the porch on the south side of the church is in the Pointed style of architecture; it is highly decorated and enriched with statues, in canopied niches, the whole being surmounted by crocketed pinnacles. In the church is a very fine monument erected to the memory of Sir Lawrence Tanfield, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, who died 30th April, 1625, and of Dame Elizabeth his wife; over the figures, which are represented in a recumbent attitude, is a canopy supported by marble pillars; here are also several ancient tombs without inscriptions, a monument to Edmund Harman, Esq., 1569, many for the family of Bartholomew, and various others; the font is enriched with a sculptured representation of the Crucifixion, &c. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Fulbrook annexed, joint annual value £294, in the patronage of the Bishop of Oxford.

A Grammar school was founded in 1571 by Simon Wisdom, which was closed for many years, but is now reopened under a new scheme established by the Charity Commissioners. There are a National school for girls and boys, eight almshouses, and various minor charitable bequests.

The manor of Burford, together with the Priory house, long in the possession of the Lenthall family, was purchased by C. Greenaway, Esq., the owner of the adjoining estate, Barrington grove, in Gloucestershire, and on his death devolved upon Miss Yonde, the present lady of the manor. The collection of historical pictures which was formerly here has been removed. The greater part of the mansion was built by the Speaker Lenthall. Dr. Peter Heylin, a writer of some distinction in the reign of Charles I., was a native of this town. The late Sir William Beechey, the eminent painter, was also a native of the town, and received his education at the Grammar school. About a mile south-west from Burford are St. Christopher's or Kitt's Quarries, producing fine stone for building. The Duke of St. Albans derives his second title, Earl of Rurford, from this place.

The population in 1861, with the hamlets of Upton and Signet, was 1,649; the area of the parish is 2,170 acres.

CAVERSHAM and Kidmore End.

CAVERSHAM is a parish and large village, the scenery of which is very picturesque, situated on the banks of the Thames, one mile north from

Reading. It is in Binfield hundred, Henley union and rural deanery, and archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Peter was partially restored and re-seated with open benches in the year 1867, and a new vestry built. It has a peal of six bells; there are several stained glass windows, the east window being to the memory of the late John Stephens, Esq., of Caversham Rise. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of Christ Church, Oxford, annual value £116, with modern residence. There are three schools for poor children, supported by voluntary contributions; also a Dissenting chapel in Park-lane. The Earl of Kildare, in 1707, left 17 acres of land, the rents to be applied to the use of the poor; and the Countess of Kildare, by will, in 1748, gave £100, which was laid out in the purchase of £105 7s. 6d. Old South Sea Annuities, the dividends of which are applied to the apprenticing of poor children. There are several very handsome residences in the neighbourhood, the most prominent of which is Caversham Park, the seat of William Crawshay, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and has greatly improved the estate since he purchased it.

The population in 1861 was 1,783; the acreage is 4,772.

Post Office.—Edward Gale, postmaster. Letters arrive from Reading at 6·30 a.m. and 2·30 p.m.; dispatched at 12·5 and 7·35 p.m.

KIDMORE END is a small village and ecclesiastical district in the parish of Caversham, about 4 miles north from Reading.

The church of St. John the Baptist was built in 1851-2, and a grant of £110 in aid of its erection was made by the incorporated Society for Promoting the Enlargement, Repairing, and Building of Churches and Chapels, on the condition that 208 seats, for 180 adults and 28 children, should be set apart and declared to be free for the use of the poor for ever. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £44, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. John Wolstenholme Cobb, M.A.

CANE END is a small but pleasantly situated hamlet in this parish, and is 5 miles from Reading, 4 from Goring station, and 43 from London.

CHALGROVE

Is a parish and village, 4 miles from Watlington, 6 from Tetsworth, and 50 from London, in the hundred of Ewelme, union and county court district of Thame, rural deanery of Aston, and archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary is an ancient stone structure, in the Norman style of architecture. In the interior are three piscinæ, two aumbries, four brasses, three sedilia, and several handsome monuments: there are also the remains of some frescoes, supposed to be 500 years old. The church is in good repair, there being a fund of £60 per annum arising from land left for the purpose of keeping it in repair. There are also charities amounting to £14 per annum. The living is a vicarage, with Berrick Salome annexed, of the joint gross annual value of £375, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford. The principal manor belongs to Magdalen College, Oxford, but there are two others which belong to Lincoln College, Oxford, and to Michael Blount, Esq. This place was the scene of a battle, on the 18th June, 1643, between Charles I. and the Parliamentarians, when the celebrated

John Hampden received his death wound, as it is supposed, from the bursting of one of his pistols: he was taken to Thame, where he died, and was afterwards buried at Great Hampden, in Buckinghamshire. Here is a monument in commemoration of the event, erected on the spot in 1843, chiefly through the instrumentality of Lord Nugent. Here is a school, under the superintendence of the vicar, and a Wesleyan chapel. A stream runs through the village which turns several mills.

The population in 1861 was 549; the acreage is 2,364.

CHARLBURY

Is a large parish and railway station, 7 miles north-west from Woodstock, and 6 from Witney, forming South Banbury hundred, which is attached to Chadlington hundred, union of Chipping Norton, and diocese of Oxford. It is pleasantly situated on an eminence in the vicinity of a woody country, and from various points in the neighbourhood may be obtained extensive and diversified prospects. The manor of Charlbury was founded by the Mercian kings, and was given by them to the Bishop of Lincoln, from whom it passed by exchange to the abbots and monks of Eynsham; it remained in possession of that monastery until the dissolution of these institutions, and was then purchased of Henry VIII. by St. John's College, Oxford, from whom it has passed into the hands of the Right Hon. Lord Churchill.

The church of St. Mary is a fine pile of ancient architecture, the body of it being in the old Saxon style, with massive round-headed arches, and is supposed to have been erected in the time of Edward the Confessor; it was enlarged in the thirteenth century, when the tower was built, the height being subsequently increased; and again, in the time of Henry VII., further additions were made to the size of the church; in the interior are monuments of the Jenkinson family, ancestors of Lord Liverpool, who possessed property in this parish, but sold it to the Duke of Marlborough. In 1857 the interior of the church underwent complete repair. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelries of Shorthampton and Chadlington annexed, joint annual value £800, with residence, in the gift of St. John's College, Oxford. The great tithes belong to the Duke of Marlborough.

There is a Free Grammar school, endowed by Miss Ann Walker, in 1675; a commodious Infant school was opened in January, 1863, and there is also a British school. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists.

Cornbury Park, in the immediate vicinity, is the seat of Lord Churchill. Friday is market day; it was formerly of considerable importance. Fairs are held on the 1st January, second Friday in Lent, May 13th, second Friday after 12th August, and first Friday in October. The railway from Oxford passes through here.

The population in 1861 was 1,380; the acreage is 4,810.

FAWLER is a hamlet in the parish of Charlbury, but united ecclesiastically with Finstock, in the hundred of Banbury, and union of Chipping Norton, 3 miles from Enstone, 5 from Woodstock, and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  from Witney: In 1861 it contained 143 inhabitants, and 980 acres of land.

WALCOTT is a hamlet adjoining this parish. The population in 1861 was 8.

POST OFFICE, MONEY-ORDER OFFICE AND SAVINGS BANK.—Miss Sarah Walden, receiver. Letters received from Enstone at 7.30 a.m.; dispatched at 7.15 p.m.

CHADLINGTON is a hamlet of Charlbury, divided into two parts, viz., East and West, 3 miles south from Chipping Norton, in the hundred of its name, union, rural deanery, and county court district of Chipping Norton, archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Nicholas is an ancient structure, with tower, in good repair, and six bells. The living is a chapelry, annexed to the vicarage of Charlbury; the Rev. George Carpenter, of Langston House, is the curate. Here is a Baptist chapel; also National and Infant schools, and Reading Rooms for working men, built by the late J. H. Langston, Esq., M.P. The population in 1861, was 753; the hamlet contains 3,300 acres. Earl Ducie is lord of the manor.

POST OFFICE.—William Willis, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Enstone at 8.15 a.m.; dispatched at 5 p.m. in winter and 6 p.m. in summer.

FINSTOCK is a hamlet in the parish of Charlbury,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Enstone, 5 from Witney, and 6 from Woodstock, in the hundred of South Banbury, union and rural deanery of Chipping Norton, archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford. There is a small plain church, erected in 1841, the site for which was given by Lord Churchill. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £75, in the gift of St. John's College, Oxford; the present incumbent is the Rev. Alfred Redifer, M.A. There is a National and Infant school, supported chiefly by Lord Churchill. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here.

The population in 1861 was 533; the acreage is 1,220.

CHARLTON-on-OTMOOR with the Hamlets FENCOTT and MURCOTT.

CHARLTON-ON-OTMOOR is a parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Bicester, and diocese of Oxford. Charlton is 9 miles north-east from Oxford, 2½ east from the Islip station on the London and North Western Railway, and 6 south from Bicester.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin, at Charlton, is an old structure, of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, and has undergone a thorough repair. The benefice is a rectory, in the gift of Queen's College, Oxford. The tithe commutation rent-charge is £603, and there are 86 acres of glebe, with a residence. A small stream, called the river Ray, runs through the parish and joins the Cherwell at Islip. The trustees of Sir G. P. Turner are lords of the manor of Charlton, and the Dean and Chapter of Westminster are lords of the manor of Fencott and Murcott.

There is a Wesleyan and a Baptist chapel in Charlton, and a Primitive Methodist chapel at Murcott.

The population in 1861 was, for Charlton, 374; Fencott and Murcott, 313. The acreage of the whole parish is 1,933, of which 270 acres are in pasture. The soil is chiefly clay; a very little of it, at Charlton, stone brash.

CHIPPING NORTON, with the hamlet of Over Norton.

CHIPPING NORTON is a parish and market town, situated in the north-west part of the county, on the borders of Warwickshire, 73 miles from London, through Islip, and 77 through Oxford, from which city it is distant 19 north-west; it is in the hundred of Chadlington, union of its own name, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary is a venerable structure, situated at the north of the town, and has been repaired at an expense of nearly £3,000, and the chancel restored and organ erected in 1856. The living is a vicarage, annual value £170, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. There is a neat and commodious Catholic chapel, and places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, and Wesleyans. There are new National schools, erected in 1859, for boys, girls, and infants, also British schools. There was formerly a castle here, near the church, the site of which is still known as the Castle field. The common adjoining the town, 198 acres in extent, was the gift of Lord Arundel, for the benefit of the householders.

Chipping Norton is governed by a corporation, consisting of a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve common councillors; the mayor is elected on the 8th of November. The old Town Hall has been removed, and a handsome one erected in its stead, of much larger dimensions. Here is a manufactory for woollen cloth, carried on by Mr. William Bliss. The town is situated in an agricultural district, and depends chiefly for its prosperity on the landed interest. The market day is Wednesday, chiefly for grain. The fairs are: New Year's fair, Wednesday after January 1st, the last Wednesday in every month excepting December, which is held on the Wednesday after the 11th; cattle and sheep in large numbers are brought hither for sale, and the fairs are usually well frequented by farmers and dealers; a statute, on the Wednesday before and after October 10th, for the hiring of servants.

Chipping Norton is the head of a poor law union, comprising the following places:—Ascott-under-Wychwood, Barton-on-the-Heath (Warwick), Bruern, Chadlington, Charlbury, Chastleton, Chipping Norton, Churchill, Cleveley, Cornbury Park, Cornwell, Enstone, Fawler, Fifield, Finstock, Gagingwell, Great Rollright, Great Tew, Heythrop and Dunthrop, Idbury, Kingham, Langley, Leafield, Lidstone, Little Compton (Warwick), Littell Rollright, Little Tew, Long Compton (Warwick), Lyneham, Milton, Over Norton, Salford, Sarsden, Shipton-under-Wychwood, Shocks Coppice, Shorthampton, Spilsbury, Swerford, Walcott, Wychwood. The county court district comprises the same parishes. The lords of the manor are the Mayor and Aldermen.

The population in 1816 was 3,137; the area (including Over Norton) is 4,780 acres.

OVER NORTON is a hamlet to Chipping Norton, distant three-quarters of a mile north from Chipping Norton, and  $74\frac{1}{2}$  miles from London, in the hundred of Chadlington, union of Chipping Norton, and diocese of Oxford.

The population in 1861 was 373. Henry Dawkins, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MIDDLE, TEMPLE and CHURCH COWLEY.

COWLEY is a parish, in the hundred of Bullington, union of Headington, and diocese of Oxford, extending from Oxford for 2½ miles south-south-east.

The church of St. James is an ancient structure; it has a low square tower. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £64; it is endowed with £600 private benefaction and £600 royal bounty, in the patronage of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The Diocesan school was established here in 1841 by the Oxford Diocesan Board of Education, for the purpose of providing the middle classes with first-class education at as low a cost as possible. Here is a National school for boys and girls, and an Industrial school. There is a small Wesleyan chapel, situated at Rose Hill. Middle Cowley is partly in the parish of Ifley.

The population in 1861 was 1,404; the acreage is 940.

Within the last few years a new district has grown up close to the city, which it is proposed soon to form into a new ecclesiastical district, under the title of Cowley St. John's; the population newly settled there is about 1,500, and there is an iron church named St. John the Evangelist; there is also a middle-class day school, with a large playground attached.

CROPREDY

Is a parish, in the hundred, union, and county court district of Banbury, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the river Cherwell, near the borders of Northamptonshire and Warwickshire, 4 miles north-north-east from Banbury, 27 north from Oxford, and 89½ from London by the Great Western Railway, which company has a station here.

The church of St. Mary is a handsome edifice, with a tower containing six bells and a clock ; it is of the Perpendicular and Decorated styles of architecture, and was repaired and repewed in 1825. The living is a vicarage, annual value £264, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. Here is an endowed school on the National system, for the children of Cropredy and Great and Little Bourton ; also a Dissenting chapel.

In June, 1644, a battle was fought at Cropredy Bridge, between Charles I. and the Parliamentarians, which terminated in the utter defeat of the latter : the bridge remains, but considerable repairs and alterations made in 1691, and again about the year 1780, have taken away somewhat of its primitive character ; many cannon balls have been found on the east side of the river. There are some considerable charities distributed annually amongst the poor of this parish.

CROWMARSH GIFFORD

Is a parish, in Wallingford union, Langtree hundred, and diocese of Oxford, separated from Berkshire by the river Thames, over which is a bridge of 17 arches; it is distant 16 miles from Reading, 14 from Oxford, 11 from Henley, 3 from the Great Western Railway station at Wallingford road, and 43 from London.

The church of St. Mary Magdalene is a Gothic building of great antiquity, having been built in the reign of Stephen. The living is a rectory, annual value £247, with residence, in the patronage of Lord Barrington. Charles Hedges, Esq., is lord of the manor, and Alfred De Morney, Esq., is chief landowner.

The population in 1861 was 360; the acreage is 662. The soil is exceedingly fertile, of the upper green sand formation, and a considerable portion is rich in phosphate of lime, in the form of coprolites, which are found distributed through the soil, and extend beyond the parish of Crowmarsh Gifford into the neighbouring parish of Preston Crowmarsh: an analysis, made by the London Manure Company, showed these coprolites to contain 67 per cent. of pure phosphate. The land bears heavy cereal crops, and both the wheat and the barley are of the finest quality; it is particularly adapted to the growth of peas and beans, bears heavy crops of saintfoin and other fodder plants, and potatoes.

CULHAM

Is a parish, in the hundred of Dorchester, union of Abingdon, partly in Berkshire, but principally in the county of Oxford, and diocese of Oxford, a mile and a half south-south-east from Abingdon, bounded on the south and west by the river Thames.

The church of St. Paul was rebuilt in 1852, in the Early English style of architecture: the funds were raised by money borrowed on the rate, by Diocesan and other societies, and by private subscription; the original chancel and square tower, built in 1712, still remain. The register dates from 1650. The living is a vicarage, annual value £100, with residence, formerly belonging to the see of Oxford, but now in the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

Here is a very handsome structure, standing in an elevated position about three-quarters of a mile west from the Culham station, which was erected in 1852 as a training college for schoolmasters for the dioceses of Oxford and Gloucester; the cost of the building was nearly £20,000, of which nearly £12,000 was raised by private subscription; it is built to contain 100 students, and was opened at the commencement of 1853; there are at present 53 young men studying there; the present principal is the Rev. James Ridgway, M.A., Lincoln College, Oxford.

Culham House, the seat of J. S. Phillips, Esq., is a handsome brick building. J. S. Phillips, Esq., is the lessee of the rectorial property.

The population in 1861 was 474; the parish comprises 1,686 acres, chiefly the property of the executors of the late James Merrell, Esq., who are lords of the manor. The Culham station on the Great Western line is in this parish.

DEDDINGTON with the Hamlet of HEMPTON and Chapelry of CLIFTON

DEDDINGTON is a market town and parish, on the road from Oxford to Banbury, 70 miles from London, 16 from Oxford, 10 from Woodstock, and 6 from Banbury, in the hundred of Wootton, county court district and union of Woodstock, rural deanery of Deddington, archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford. The Oxford Junction Railway passes to the east of the town.

The church of St. Peter and St. Paul is a handsome building, in the Gothic style of architecture. There are four sedilia in the chancel. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Clifton annexed, joint annual value £138, in the presentation of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. There is a Wesleyan Reformers' and a Congregational chapel.

Sir Thomas Pope, founder of Trinity College, Oxford, directed that a Free Grammar school should be erected here, to be called "Jhesus Scole," and that a salary should be paid of "20 marks," to the master, and "£8," yearly to an usher; but no such school exists. The said Sir Thomas Pope was born here in 1608, and Sir William Scroggs, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, was born here in 1623. This place and Hempton are of considerable antiquity, being mentioned in the Domesday Survey, under the names of "Dadintone," and "Hantone."

On the east side of the town are the remains of an ancient castle, which extended over more than ten acres of ground; it is mentioned by Dugdale and Kennett as being a fortified place in the tenth of Richard I. (1198), in which Piers de Gaveston, favourite of Edward II., was prisoner. This town is one of the polling places for the county. There is a National school; also four almshouses. Here are paper and flour mills. The lords of the manor are the Dean and Canons of Windsor, Christ Church College and the Duchy of Lancaster. The market day is Tuesday. The fairs are held on the 21st of August, the day after Old Michaelmas Day, the 22nd of November, and the last Tuesday in every month.

The population in 1861 was 1,551: the acreage is 3,990; the land is arable and pasture; soil, light red land.

HEMPTON is a small hamlet, in the parish of Deddington, from which it is distant a mile and a half west; it has a chapel, not yet consecrated, of which the Bishop, the Revs. E. Payne, and W. C. Risley, are trustees. The Rev. Edward Marshall, M.A., of Sandford, is the officiating minister. There is a school adjoining the chapel. The population in 1861 was 229.

CLIFTON is a chapelry. The church of St. James is a neat stone building which was built chiefly at the expense of the Rev. W. C. Risley, M.A., of New College, Oxford. Close to Clifton is the Oxford Canal, and a branch of the Great Western Railway. Several Roman coins and skeletons have been found in a field called Blackingrove, near Hempton; also considerable quantity of Roman pottery, &c., which may be seen at Mr. Faulkner's private museum, recently erected by him, for the reception of curiosities illustrative of ancient and natural history; the public are admitted gratuitously. The population in 1861 was 224.

POST OFFICE, MONEY-ORDER OFFICE AND SAVINGS BANK.—John Whetton, postmaster. Letters through Oxford are delivered at 7 a.m. in summer and 7.30 a.m. in winter, and 3.50 p.m.; dispatched at 8.50 p.m.

DORCHESTER with OVERY and BURCOT.

DORCHESTER is a parish, which gives name to a hundred, in the union of Wallingford, and diocese of Oxford, 49 miles from London, 4½ from Culham station, 8 south-east-by-south from Oxford, and 7 from Abingdon, on the western bank of the Thame, over which there is here a handsome stone bridge, a few hundred yards below which the Thame and Isis form a junction, and are thence called the Thames.

The church of St. Peter and St. Paul was originally a cathedral; it is a lofty and spacious structure, consisting of nave and chancel, the chancel being of unusually large proportions, and having a north and south aisle, commencing from the original Norman chancel arch. Its pillars and arches are lofty and well-proportioned, and its windows magnificent; it has a handsome square embattled tower containing six bells; the whole has been recently restored. The east window is a fine specimen of Late Decorated, and is singular in its design; the window on the south side of the chancel is of somewhat similar character, but much of the Perpendicular; under it are the sedilia and a double piscina, of very rich and beautiful design, but much mutilated. Opposite to this, on the north side, is the celebrated Jesse window, representing the genealogy of the Saviour from Jesse. On the south side of the chancel is a monument, with an effigy of a cross-legged knight in the act of drawing his sword; he is in ring-mail; at the foot of this is another effigy, recumbent on an altar tomb, representing John de Stonore, a judge of great note in the reigns of Edward II. and Edward III. On the north side of the chancel is a highly ornamented altar tomb, with an alabaster effigy of a knight in plate armour, his head resting on a tilting helmet, a lion at his feet, and on his breast the lion rampant of Segrave, with a bandlet. Some old fresco paintings on the eastern wall of the outer church have been beautifully restored by Mr. Bell, of the firm of Clayton and Bell, of London; here is also an ancient font, supposed to be the only one of its kind in England; it is of cast lead, and has on the sides twelve figures, each sitting in a separate stall, representing, it has been conjectured, incidents in the history of St. Birinus, first bishop of the see. The register dates from 1650. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £120, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Henry William Burrows. Here is a Catholic church, dedicated to St. Birinus, a neat edifice, in the Decorated style; it consists of nave, chancel (separated by a carved oak screen), and south porch. The altar is of stone, supported by sculptured figures of the Evangelists; the windows are of beautifully stained glass, representing the Nativity and Crucifixion of our Saviour; the interior of the church is chastely decorated; it was built at the sole expense of the late John Davy, Esq., who also bequeathed his house for the use of the resident pastor of the church; it was opened in 1849. Here is a National school. At a short distance from the town are the remains of an ancient Roman camp, now called Dike Hill. There are other remains of an old British encampment, the Sinodon Hill, in the neighbourhood; the town and its vicinity have afforded an abundant harvest of coins and relics. It was long famous for a bishop's see, founded by Birinus, the apostle of the West Saxons, who baptised Cyneigils, king of the West Saxons, A.D. 635, to whom Oswald, king of Northumberland, was godfather; these two kings gave the bishop this city, to constitute here his episcopal see; this Birinus was esteemed in that age a miracle for piety and strictness of life. This see after 460 years' continuance, was translated to Lincoln by Remigius, in the time of William the Conqueror: at which time (says William of Malmesbury, who flourished in that age), "Dorchester was a small and unfrequented town; yet the beauty and state of its churches were very remarkable, as well for the ancient work as the present care taken of them." The great road to London, which lay through the town, being turned another way, so weakened and impoverished it, that from the middle of the 12th century it began rapidly to decay, and from its former grandeur it is now reduced to a humble agricultural village. The market has long been discontinued, but there is still an annual pleasure fair on Easter Tuesday.

The population in 1861 was 1,097; the parish comprises 1,644 acres. Lord Abingdon is lord of the manor.

OVERY is a hamlet in this parish, half a mile south from the town. The population is returned with Dorchester.

BURCOTT is a hamlet in this parish, in the union of Abingdon, a mile and a half north-west from the town. The population in 1861 was 172.

DRAYTON

(NEAR BANBURY), so called to distinguish it from Drayton, near Wallingford, is a parish and small village, in the hundred of Bloxham, union of Banbury, and diocese of Oxford, 2 miles from Banbury, and 25 from Oxford.

The church of St. Peter is a small structure, of the fourteenth century, with low tower, and contains two very ancient monuments of the Greville family, a handsome stained window in the chancel, also a piscina, an old carved stone font, and neat organ. The living is a rectory, annual value £316, with about 70 acres of glebe land, in the gift of Earl De la Warr. A new rectory house has been built on the site of the old rectory, at a cost of nearly £2,000, defrayed by the present rector. Earl De la Warr is lord of the manor. There are charities amounting to upwards of £26, distributed annually amongst the poor.

The population in 1861 was 186; the area is 1,260 acres.

DRAYTON ST. LEONARD

(NEAR WALLINGFORD), so called to distinguish it from Drayton, near Banbury, is a parish, in the hundred of Dorchester, Abingdon union, and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles north from Wallingford, on the western bank of the Thame, and 2 from its confluence with the Isis.

The church of St. Leonard consists of nave, chancel, and belfry with three bells, and has lately undergone considerable restoration, under the superintendence of the diocesan architect, G. E. Street, Esq., who has followed out the Decorated Gothic style, in which the fabric had once been repaired, rather than the more ancient Norman, in which it had been built; the chancel has almost entirely been rebuilt, at the expense of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford; the roof of the nave has been opened, the gallery taken away, and the high pews have been replaced by open sittings, whereby a considerable increase of accommodation has been obtained for the poor; it was reopened by the bishop of the diocese on the 13th of February, 1860. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £130, with residence, lately erected in the Gothic style, in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford.

The population in 1861 was 327; the acreage is 1,260, chiefly gravel. Lord Abingdon is lord of the manor.

EMINGTON

(OR EMMINGTON) is a small parish, in the hundred of Lewknor, union of Thame, and diocese of Oxford, 4 miles from Thame, on the east side of the road leading thence to Chinnor.

The church of St. Nicholas is an ancient building in the Norman style of architecture, with a saddle-backed tower, which, from being in the shape of a parallelogram, and having no archway, door, or any entrance from the exterior, presents rather a singular appearance. The living is a rectory, annual value £162, in the gift of P. T. Wykeham, Esq.; the Rev. Sir William Augustus Musgrave, Bart., M.A., the incumbent of Chinnor, is also rector of this parish.

The population in 1861 was 88; the acreage is 726.

ENSTONE

Is an extensive parish, consisting of the hamlets or townships of CHURCH ENSTONE, NEAT ENSTONE, LIDSTONE, CHALFORD, CLEVELEY, GAGINGWELL, and RADFORD; it is 15 miles from Oxford, 5 from Chipping Norton, and  $72\frac{1}{2}$  from London, on the river Glym, in the hundred of Chadlington, union of Chipping Norton, and diocese of Oxford.

The rectory formerly belonged to Winchcombe Abbey, in Gloucestershire, but is now the property of Christ Church, Oxford; it is impropriate, and possesses the great tithes, commuted for an annual rent-charge of £1,244, besides a good glebe of 53 acres. The living is a vicarage, possessing a rent-charge of £300, an endowment from the rectory of £16, a glebe of 25 acres, and a good house; the patron of the vicarage is Viscount Dillon, and the incumbent is the Rev. John Jordan.

The population of the parish in 1861 was 1,198; the acreage is 6,177, the principal part being arable. The lord of the manor is Viscount Dillon.

There is a valuable estate belonging to the parish for charitable uses, the first being the repairs of the church, the title deeds connected with which are very ancient, some being 500 years old, and amongst them is one granting freedom to a man, one John Hobbes, who is thereby manumitted "ab omni iugo servitudinis et ab omni vinculo villano."

CHURCH ENSTONE contains the parish church of Edward the Confessor, which is a very ancient structure, and has a handsome Norman doorway, some very good transition Norman piers and arches in the interior, several other remarkable antiquities, as an altar and reredos, part of the rood loft, &c., and a good tower and peal of bells. There are National schools for boys and girls.

The population in 1861 was 287.

NEAT ENSTONE, sometimes called ROAD ENSTONE, from the circumstance of the high road to Birmingham and Worcester passing through it, has its name Neat from the herds of neat cattle that in ancient times were depastured on its open fields and commons. It is half a mile south from Church Enstone, 5 miles south-west from Chipping Norton, and 72 from London. Here were some famous waterworks, recently destroyed, that were constructed by Thomas Bushel, secretary to Lord Bacon, which were visited with much pomp by Charles I. and his Queen, while resident in the neighbourhood, in 1636. There is a small Methodist chapel here; a Baptist chapel at Cleveley, and a Roman Catholic chapel at Radford.

EWELME

Is a pleasantly situated village, in the parish of its own name, 10 miles from Henley,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  from the Great Western Railway station at Wallingford road, 4 from Wallingford, 14 from Reading, and 46 from London, in the hundred of Ewelme, diocese of Oxford, and union of Wallingford.

The church of St. Mary is principally of the Perpendicular Gothic order, remarkable for the beauty of its structure, with square tower containing six bells and a clock, and an ancient wooden perch. There is a tomb to the memory of Thomas Chaucer, the poet's son, and his wife, who are buried here; the south aisle was erected by their daughter, the Duchess of Suffolk, to whose memory there is a beautiful alabaster tomb. The whole church is in very good repair, having been restored through the exertions, and partly at the expense of the late rector, Dr. Burton. The living is a rectory, value £556, with residence, and is annexed to the Regius Professorship of Divinity, in the University of Oxford.

The Duke and Duchess of Suffolk founded in 1448 an almshouse, with a Grammar school attached: the mastership of the almshouse is held by Dr. Acland, Regius Professor of Medicine in Oxford: the appointment of the thirteen inmates is now in the patronage of the Earl of Macclesfield, who is lord of the manor. A new scheme for the management and regulation of the almshouse was directed by the Court of Chancery in June, 1859. There was a royal palace here, in which Queen Elizabeth occasionally resided; near to it is Ewelme Park, where the Earl of Essex resided, and which is now a farmhouse. There is a remarkable fine spring, forming a rapid stream, emptying itself into the Thames. There are chapels for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. The principal landowners are James Ross, Esq., and John Franklin, Esq.

The population in 1861 was 684; the acreage is 2,376.

GORING

(Formerly LITTLE NOTTINGHAM) is a highly picturesque village and parish, on the banks of the Thames, in the hundred of Langtree, union of Bradfield, and diocese of Oxford, 10 miles from Reading, 12 from Henley, 7½ from Wallingford, 18 from Oxford, and 44½ by railway from London. There is a station here on the Great Western Railway. In its fields and gardens have been discovered strong foundations of ancient structures, Roman coins, vases, pavements, and barrows, and even to this day one of the Roman roads, called the Icknield, is used.

The church of St. Thomas a Becket (a Norman structure) is of great antiquity, with embattled tower and belfry. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £146, in the patronage of Samuel W. Gardiner, Esq., of Combe Lodge, who is lord of the manor. Here are almshouses for four old men, with a weekly provision of 5s. 6d. each, founded and endowed in 1714 by Richard Lybbe, Esq., of Hardwick. There is a chapel for the Huntingdon persuasion. There is a Free school, supported by subscription; also a British school. Philip Powys Lybbe, Esq., is chief landowner.

The population in 1861 was 947; the acreage is 4,377. The soil is chalk and gravel; the crops are wheat, barley, oats, and roots.

GATEHAMPTON, in the parish of Goring, is supposed to have been a place of some consequence about the twelfth century, as the foundations of buildings have been frequently discovered; it is on the banks of the Thames, about a mile from the Great Western Railway station at Goring.

[GORING HEATH]

Is a village in the parish of Goring, 6 miles from Reading, 4 from the Goring station, and 42 from London. Here are almshouses for twelve poor men, founded and endowed in 1724 by Henry Alnut, Esq., of the Middle Temple; each has a house, garden, load of wood, clothing, and seven shillings a week, with a resident nurse and medical assistance. He also endowed a school for 47 boys, who are educated and clothed, and at the age of 14 are apprenticed with a premium of £20; the property bequeathed has so increased in value, that the trustees have added a school for 26 girls; he also bequeathed £100 a year for the discharge of poor debtors confined in the Marshalsea, whose debts do not exceed £4 each. Attached to this establishment is a neat chapel.

The lord of the manor is W. S. Gardiner, Esq.. The chief landowner is P. P. Lybbe, Esq. The soil is chalk, clay, and gravel.

COLLIN'S END consists of a few scattered cottages and one public house, where Charles I., then remaining at Caversham Lodge, is stated to have played at bowls.

HAMPTON GAY

Is a parish and small village, on the river Cherwell, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Woodstock, and diocese of Oxford, 6½ miles north from Oxford, and 3 from Woodstock.

The church is small, and has a low tower; it was built in the last century, and refitted in 1859 in the Early English style. The exterior was at the same time made to correspond with the interior by the insertion of new windows, mullions, doors, &c.; and the church is interesting, as showing what may be done with the unsightly architecture of the eighteenth century. The living is a perpetual curacy, now in the gift of Wadham College, Oxford, who have purchased the manorial estate: there is an endowment of £20 per annum. The Manor House is a fine Elizabethan building; it now forms two houses, one being occupied by Mr. J. Adams. Viscount Valentia and Wadham College, Oxford, are land-owners.

The population in 1861 was 67; the acreage is 620.

HAMPTON POYLE

Is a parish and village, 6 miles from Oxford, and 4½ from Woodstock, situated on the Cherwell, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Islip, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, and has been partly repaired by the instrumentality of the present rector; it is in the Early English style of architecture, with the nave and the south aisle in the Decorated style; in the interior are two recesses, and two monumental effigies of the Poyle family, from whom the village derives its distinctive name. The living is a rectory, yearly value £250, with glebe house, in the gift of Queen's College, Oxford, and held by the Rev. Joseph Dodd, M.A., of that college, who resides chiefly at Oxford. Viscount Valentia and Tyrrell Knapp, Esq., are landowners.

The population in 1861 was 125; the acreage is 772. The soil is mixed; the land arable and pasture.

Letters arrive through Oxford at 9 a.m. The nearest money-order office is at Kidlington.

HANWELL

Is a village and parish, on the borders of Warwickshire, 3 miles from Banbury, 25 from Oxford, in the hundred of Bloxham, union of Banbury, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Peter is one of the finest in the neighbourhood: its style is Decorated, with some portions of Early English work—of exquisite proportions, the nave-arches have caps ornamented with figures elegantly sculptured; at the east end of the north aisle is the reredos of an altar, with figures under canopies; the chancel contains a monument to Sir Anthony Cope, who died in 1614, which, with many other portions of the church, suffered greatly at the hands of Puritan fanatics under Cromwell, who is said to have stabled a troop of horse in this church. The living is a rectory, annual value £320, with residence, in the gift of Earl De La Warr. Here are the remains of a castle (now used as a farmhouse), with a good brick tower of Perpendicular work, which was formerly the residence of Sir Anthony Cope, Bart. Earl De La Warr is lord of the manor. There is a Free school for boys and girls, also a small annual charity for the poor.

The population in 1861 with 285; the area is 1,240 acres of good arable and pasture land.

HARPSDEN

Is an agricultural village and parish, in Binfield hundred, Henley union, and diocese of Oxford; two miles south from Henley-on-Thames, on the high road to Reading, from which place it is 7 miles.

The church of St. Margaret is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and low square tower, and was completely restored in 1854: in the interior are some ancient brasses, and in the chancel is a recumbent figure of a Knight Templar. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of All Souls' College, Oxford, commuted at £592, with about 90 acres of glebe and residence. Harpsden Court, the residence of Donald McLeod Gordon, Esq., is an ancient mansion adjacent to the church; and Boulney Court is the seat of John Fowden Hodges, Esq., J.P.

The population in 1861 was 261; the area is 1,460 acres of rich fertile land. J. F. Hodges, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil.

GREAT HAZELEY

(OR HASELEY), with the hamlets of LITTLE HASELEY, RYCOTE, LATCHFORD, and LOBB, is a parish, situated 5 miles south-west from Thame, in the hundred of Ewelme, union of Thame, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Peter is an ancient and handsome edifice in various styles of architecture, the tower and western part retaining portions of the Norman, part of the south side the Perpendicular or Early English, and the chancel, which is the most modern portion, being in the Decorated style. In a recess on the north side, paved with black and white in diagonal squares, and covering the family vault now belonging to Walter Long, Esq., of Hampshire, is a monument to the memory of John Blackall, Esq., date 1709: within the chancel, and close to the north side of the communion table, is an altar tomb, on which has been placed the figure of a knight which formerly stood in the tower: on the south side of the church are remains of a small chapel or oratory, the niche and pedestals and piscina being still discernible, and along the walls on this side are crypt tombs: the whole fabric has been repaired and decorated with great judgment and taste. The register dates from the time when Cromwell, High Chancellor in the reign of Henry VIII., issued an order for the register of every church to be kept. The living is a rectory, annual value £728, with modern residence, from designs by G. G. Scott, Esq., in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. There is a chapel for Independents.

A Free school for boys, being children of parishioners, was founded and endowed by order of the Court of Chancery from funds being the surplus of the will of Luke Taylor, in the 17th century; a school for girls has been erected, under the superintendence and partly at the expense of the present rector; and the Misses Birkett have erected an Infant school and house for the mistress. The celebrated, but ill-fated, Leland was once rector of this parish. M. W. Boulton, Esq., of Great Tew, holds the manor by lease from the Dean and Canons of Windsor. On pulling down the old Parsonage inside walls, which were six feet thick, old lofty arched windows appeared, and behind a fireplace formed in one of them was a number of encaustic tiles, with various patterns, about the date of Henry III.

The population in 1861 (including the hamlets) was 714; the acreage is 3,219.

HENLEY-UPON-THAMES

HENLEY-UPON-THAMES is a market and union town, in the hundred of Binfield, diocese and archdeaconry of Oxford, in the southern part of the county, 35 miles from London by the road through Maidenhead, and 35½ to Paddington by the Great Western Railway, which has a station here, on a branch line diverging from the main line at Twyford, and 23 south-east from the city of Oxford. It is one of the prettiest summer retreats in the county, and is surrounded by handsome villas and plantations, very pleasantly situated on the road from London to Oxford, on a slight ascent from the banks of the river Thames, which here divides the counties of Oxford and Berks: since the opening of the railway the town has become a very favourite and fashionable place of resort. Over the river a handsome stone bridge of five arches was erected in 1786, at an expense of £10,000, uniting the town of Henley to Remenham parish, Berkshire; the keystones of the centre arch, representing heads of Thame and Isis, were sculptured by the Hon. Mrs. Damer. The town consists principally of two wide streets, and is lighted with gas; the houses are for the most part spacious and well built. The corporation consists of a mayor, ten aldermen, sixteen burgesses, a high steward, and a recorder. Petty sessions are held here.

The Town Hall, erected in 1796, is an ornamental building, conveniently situated in the Market place; there is also a commodious Market House.

A considerable trade is carried on in corn, flour, malt, and beech wood. There are four breweries. The market is on Thursday; and fairs are held on March 7th, Holy Thursday, the Thursday after Trinity Sunday, and the Thursday after December 21st (a pleasure and statute hiring fair). Horticultural shows are held here during the summer.

The church of St. Mary stands near the bridge; it is a large and elegant edifice, in the Decorated style of English architecture, and has a lofty and embattled tower, with turrets at the angles (which was raised at the expense of Cardinal Wolsey). In the north aisle is the monument of Lady Elizabeth Periam, a benefactress to Balliol College, Oxford, the wife first of Robert Doyley, next of Henry Neville, and lastly of William Periam; she was sister of Lord Chancellor Bacon, and died in 1621. Over the south door is a monument to William Hayward, of Shrewsbury, architect, after whose design the bridge over the Thames in this town was erected; he died before it was begun, in 1782. Richard Jennings, the master builder of St. Paul's Cathedral, was interred in the churchyard here. In the vestry is an excellent library of valuable books, bequeathed to the town by Dr. Henry Aldrich; he was rector of Henley, and died in 1737. The parish register begins in 1558. In the summer of 1853, a subscription was set on foot for the restoration of the church, by the late rector, Dr. Morrell, now the Bishop Coadjutor of Edinburgh, by whose zeal and liberality the restoration was mainly effected, with great taste, at a cost exceeding £7,000; it is now one of the noblest churches in the county. It was re-opened on Friday, the 1st December, 1854, the Bishops of Lincoln and Oxford preaching sermons on the occasion. The architect was B. Ferrey, Esq., of London, and the contractor Mr. Robert Owthwaite, of Henley. The living is a rectory, annual value £427, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford.

The Holy Trinity church, on the south side of the town, in the parish of Rotherfield Greys, was built by voluntary subscription, &c.

There are twenty-six almshouses, situated on the east and west sides of St. Mary's churchyard, ten endowed by Mrs. H. Newberry in 1664; four by Mrs. Ann Messenger, 1666—these were rebuilt in the Gothic style by the corporation in 1846; the other twelve, endowed by John Longland, Bishop of Lincoln (who was a native of this town and confessor to King Henry VIII.), in 1547, were rebuilt in 1830. Edward Mackenzie, Esq., became lord of the manor by purchase in 1853.

A News Room was established here about twenty-five years ago.

The Grammar school was founded by King James I., and the Blue Coat (now called the Lower Grammar) school by Lady Elizabeth Periam. The National and Industrial schools were opened in 1849; there are residences attached for the master and the matron, and the whole (including the ground adjoining, which is very spacious) cost between £3,000 and £4,000, which sum was raised chiefly by subscription and voluntary contributions by the inhabitants of the town and neighbouring gentry; at the present time there are 126 boys, 96 girls, and 126 infants of both sexes.

William Lenthall, Speaker of the Long Parliament, was born here in 1591. Henley is a favourite resort for anglers, and the river abounds with fish; a society has been formed for preserving the water from depredation, and preventing the fish being destroyed, either by nets or poaching. The Chiltern Hundred Hills commence from this point and extend to Tring.

The prospects from Henley are in the highest degree picturesque and beautiful, the country around being pleasingly diversified by lofty wooded hills and low grounds, declining to the Thames. Henley Hill appears on the east; through the chalky face of it the road is cut; at its base houses are intermixed with woody scenery; and towards the south is Park Place, the seat of Mrs. Fuller Maitland. The mansion stands on the brow of a range of hills, nearly 300 feet above the level of the Thames, and sheltered by extensive plantations; the grounds, comprising 400 acres, are diversified with lofty eminences and deep velleys, producing scenes which combine all the varieties of English landscape. On a height is a circle of stones, denominated a Druids' Temple, brought from the island of Jersey, a singular relic of antiquity. The river Thames, seen in many parts to great advantage, considerably heightens the beauty of the prospect.

About half a mile north from Henley is Fawley Court, in Buckinghamshire, late the seat of W. P. W. Freeman, Esq., but now the property and seat of Edward Mackenzie, Esq., J.P. It was erected in 1684, from designs by Sir Christopher Wren; it has four fronts, and stands near the river, in the centre of an extensive lawn, well planted, and terminated by undulating hills in part clothed with beech. The possessor of this estate in the reign of Charles I. was Sir James Whitelock, one of the judges of the Common Pleas, whose son sold it to the ancestor of W. P. W. Freeman, Esq., who sold it to the present owner. The hall is entered by a colonnade of the Ionic order. Amongst the pictures adorning the rooms is the original painting, by Salter, of the Waterloo Banquet, and on the staircase are the numerous portraits of the gallant guests. The eastern front of the mansion commands a view of the Thames, the opposite village of Remenham, in Berkshire, and an island in the river. Southward are Henley Bridge, the church, and the grounds of Park Place. The rides through the woods on the eminences display the whole scenery of the vale, in which the windings of the Thames, from above Henley to Medmenham, appear exceedingly picturesque.

The old manor house of Phyllis Court stood on the bank of the Thames, on the north of the town; about 1788 the principal part was pulled down, and the remaining portion (with the exception of the ancient kitchen) was, about 1837, removed to make room for a modern residence.

In the neighbourhood are Culham Court, Hambleton House, Grey's Court, and Crowsley Park.

Pyrites and a black flint used in making glass are found here.

On the spacious and elegant reach of water immediately adjoining the town is held an annual regatta, established in 1839, for amateur rowers, and which is the first in England, both in respect of the character and skill of competitors and of the fashionable assemblies. The prizes contended for are of great value and beauty, and mostly challenge prizes—viz., held by the winners from year to year, to be yielded up to the next challengers who shall successfully contend with the holders. The regatta is liberally supported by the neighbouring nobility and gentry, many of whom fill the office of stewards, whilst amongst the gentlemen contending for the honour of holding the prizes will be found the élite of the aquatic world in Oxford, Cambridge, and London.

The union comprises the following places:—Bix, Brightwell Baldwin, Brightwell Prior, Brightwell Salome, Caversham, Checkendon, Cuxham, Eye and Dunsden, Fawley (Bucks), Hambleden (Bucks), Harpsden, Henley-on-Thames, Ipsden, Medmenham (Bucks), Nettlebed, Nuffield, Pirton, Pishill, Remenham (Berks), Rotherfield Greys, Rotherfield Peppard, Shiplake, Swincombe, Watlington.

The county court is held monthly at the Town Hall. The following is a list of places within its jurisdiction:—Assendon, Middle, Upper (liberty in the parish of Pyrton), Bix, Bottom, Fawley, Hurley, Hambleden, Harpsden, Medmenham, Nettlebed, Pishill, Remenham, Rotherfield Greys, Peppard, Shiplake, Swyncombe, Wargrave, Cock Pole, Warren Row, Hare Hatch, Wormondiscombe, Greenfields (liberties of Watlington).

Petty sessions for the Henley division of the county are held here every fortnight at the Town hall; the Right Hon. Lord Camoys, chairman; the Earl of Macclesfield, high steward; Sir H. E. F. Lambert, recorder.

Petty sessions for the town are held every Monday at the Town hall. Magistrates—the Mayor for the time being; W. H. Brakspear, Esq.; T. W. Jeston, Esq.; J. H. Brooks, Esq.: Mr. Wm. Dobson. Clerks, Samuel and John Cooper.

The population in 1861 was 3,676; the acreage is 1,737. The annual value of assessed property in 1863 was £11,852.

POST AND MONEY-ORDER OFFICE AND POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK.—Postmaster, Henry Stubbs, Market place. Letters arrive by mail cart from Twyford station on the Great Western Railway at 4.20 a.m., and are delivered in the summer months at 7 a.m. and in the winter months at 7.30 a.m. The day mail arrives at 11.30 a.m., and the delivery takes place at noon. (OR HEATH) is a parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, union, county court district, and rural deanery of Bicester, diocese and archdeaconry of Oxford, 5 miles north-east from Bicester, and 17 north-east from Oxford.

The church of St. Edmund and St. George consists of nave, north and south aisles, chancel, and south porch, and has recently been thoroughly restored, and a new north aisle added, at a cost of about £800: the font is very ancient. The register dates from 1678. The living is a rectory, value £190 per annum, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held by the Rev. Frederick Salter, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. The upper part of the village is separated from the lower by a small stream, which flows into the Ouse. There is a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists, and one for Roman Catholics, the latter stands just out of the village, and is a neat building; the Rev. Joseph Robson, priest. Here is a National school. Hethe House is now in the occupation of James Mitchell, Esq. J. H. S. Harrison, Esq., of Shelswell Park, is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 442; the acreage about 900. The soil is stone brash and gravel, a small portion is pasture, and the remainder arable.

LOWER HEYFORD

(Or HEYFORD PURCELL, or HEYFORD-AT-BRIDGE), with the hamlet of CAULCOTT, a mile and a half distant, is a parish, in the hundred of Floughley, union of Bicester, diocese and archdeaconry of Oxford, 7 miles from Bicester, and 6 from Woodstock.

The church of St. Mary, an ancient stone structure of mixed architecture, which has undergone considerable repairs, consists of nave, chancel, two aisles, south porch, and plain square tower with five bells. The living is a rectory, value £496, in the patronage of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The village is situated on the Cherwell, and close to the Oxford and Birmingham Canal, which runs through the parish, and is the nearest point to Bicester for conveyance of goods by water.

A market is held here every Monday, in the Bell public house; there are likewise cattle and sheep sales held during the year, but no regular fairs. There are two Methodist chapels. Four children are taught to read, whose schooling is defrayed by the interest of £50, a legacy left by the late Mr. Thomas Rose, who died in 1826. There are 30 acres of land, producing £29 per annum, given to the poor of the parish in coals. The President and Scholars of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, are lords of the manor. The Oxford and Birmingham branch of the Great Western Railway passes through the parish, parallel to the canal, and on the opposite side of the village, where there is also a station. There is a mixed school for children in Caulcott, under the patronage and support of the Countess of Jersey.

The population in 1861 was 625; the acreage is 1,650. The land, principally stone brash, is pasture and arable.

UPPER HEYFORD

(Or HEYFORD WARREN), situated on the river Oherwell, is a parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Bicester, diocese and archdeaconry of Oxford, 6 miles from Bicester, and 6 from Woodstock.

The church, which is to be rebuilt shortly, is a small stone structure, partly Gothic and partly Grecian, consisting of nave and chancel, with a square Gothic embattled parapet tower, and on one of the buttresses are carved the arms of William of Wykeham, founder of New College, Oxford: in the chancel is a very ancient sarcophagus, on the lid of which is a figure in a praying attitude; and close to the pulpit, on which the date 1618 is carved, there is an hour glass, the frame of which is quite perfect. The register dates from 1557. The living is a rectory, annual value tithes commuted for £523 5s., in the gift of New College, Oxford.

There is a fosse and a vallum in the upper and eastern part of the parish, which, Camden says, was first raised as a boundary between the Mercian and West Saxon kingdoms, and the whole, or part of it, was called Aves (a corruption of Offa's) Ditch. Lady Jersey, J. Lechmere, Esq., and Mr. Richard Greaves, of Fritwell, are landowners. The Warden and Scholars of New College, Oxford, are lords of the manor. The Oxford and Birmingham Canal runs through the parish; likewise the Oxford and Birmingham Railway.

In connection with the Manor House, occupied by Mr. Edmund Creek, is a very ancient and curiously constructed barn, built by William of Wykeham, who died in 1404. Here are two chapels, one for Wesleyans, and the other for the Wesleyan Reformers. Sunday and day schools have been erected by the rector, assisted by the Warden and Scholars of New College, Oxford, in connection with the church, which are supported by subscription. There are 18 acres of allotment, producing £46 10s. 8d., which is distributed to the poor, in coals and clothing, the week before Christmas.

The population in 1861 was 453 ; the area is 1,608a. 3r. 89p. The land in the upper part is chiefly stone brash, and in the lower part mixed, partly pasture and partly arable.

HOOK NORTON

Is a parish, including the hamlet of Southrop, on the borders of Warwickshire, 5 miles from Chipping Norton, and 8 from Banbury, in the Banbury union, and diocese of Oxford. In a commanding situation, about the centre of the village, stands the fine old parish of St. Peter, a spacious and interesting edifice, which has been repaired at great cost : the tower is a striking and noble object, and there is a very curious Norman font of the 12th century. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £180, with residence, in the patronage of the Bishop of Oxford, to whom pertains the impropriate rectory.

There are four dissenting chapels, viz.,—one Baptist, one Wesleyan, one Primitive Methodist, and one for the Society of Friends : likewise National schools, with residence for master, built upon a site given by Miss Davis ; there is also a school on the British system.

About the year 917 (according to the Saxon Chronicle), in the reign of Edward the Elder, a battle was fought at, or very near to Hook Norton, between the Danes and the English ; there are the remains of a camp near Hook Norton Lodge, which Dr. Plot conjectures was formed on this occasion by the English. Florence of Worcester (who gives the year 914 as the date of this battle), calls Hook Norton "Regia Villa," a royal town or village. The manor of Hook Norton was bestowed by William the Conqueror on Robert de Oily, who, at the period of the Domesday Survey, held this and 27 other manors in Oxfordshire, besides many in the adjacent counties. In the year 1285, Ela, Countess of Warwick, was found to hold the manor of Hokenorton of the King in capite, upon the serjeantry of carving before the king at Christmas, and to have the knife with which she carved.

The population in 1861 was 1,393 the acreage is upwards of 5,000.

KIRTLINGTON

Is a parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, diocese of Oxford, and union of Bicester. The village is situated on the road from Bicester to Woodstock, 6 miles south-west from the former, and 4 north-east from the latter.

The church of St. Mary consists of a chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and a lady chapel or chantry, with a tower between the chancel and nave. The original structure, the Saxon arches and imposts of which bear witness to its great antiquity, was composed of the present chancel and a tower which has twice been pulled down, and was very recently rebuilt. The nave, together with both the aisles, appear to have been added about the middle of the 14th century, but the south aisle was rebuilt by Sir Robert Dashwood, Bart., and the lady chapel, assigned by faculty to him and to his heirs, about 1720. The church underwent very extensive repairs in 1853, the tower having been rebuilt on the original foundation, and the fine peal of eight bells, three of which had been dismounted for eight years, were re-hung by Messrs. Mears. The interior of the church was cleared of the square pews and heavy galleries which disfigured it, and fitted up with open sittings, all of which in the nave are free. Minton's red and black tiles form the pavement of nave, aisles, &c. A memorial window, by Wailes, of Newcastle, has been placed in the south aisle; the large west window and a small one in the north aisle being filled in with Powell's quarries. The living is a vicarage, annual value £420, in the gift of St. John's College, Oxford. There are two charities of very small amount, one for the relief of widows, the other for the aged poor; also a parish school, partly endowed.

Kirtlington Park, the seat of Sir Henry William Dashwood Bart., J.P., lord of the manor and chief landowner, is very extensive, and contains a noble mansion of very imposing structure, erected upwards of a century since. The river Cherwell divides the parish from that of Tackley. The Oxford and Birmingham Railway passes through the parish. The Kirtlington station on the Great Western and Oxford and Birmingham line is about a mile and a quarter south-west from the village. Here is a Wesleyan chapel.

The population in 1861 was 725 ; the area is 3,495a. 2r. 16p. ; the soil is various, the land chiefly arable.

MIDDLETON STONEY

Is a parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Bicester, diocese and archdeaconry of Oxford, 3 miles from Bicester, and 12 from Oxford.

The church of All Saints, which stands in Middleton Park, is an ancient structure, supposed to have been erected by one of the Norman lords. A sepulchral chapel, beautifully decorated, has been added on the north side for the family of Earl Jersey. The living is a rectory, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, value £400 per annum. The village is remarkably pretty; most of the cottages, repaired and ornamented at the cost of the Dowager Countess of Jersey, have a rustic porch and garden, giving them a neat and pleasing appearance. Within a few yards of the church stood an ancient castle, probably built by the same Norman nobleman who erected the church; though no portion of the structure remains, the foundation may be perceived and its formation traced; on the north-east side of which is a mound of considerable elevation.

The mansion, the seat of the Dowager Countess of Jersey, was erected on the site of a building destroyed by fire in 1753. There are three schools, one for infants, a day school for boys, and another for girls (six of whom are boarders); which, together with the Free schools at Chesterton and Somerton, are supported by the Dowager Countess of Jersey, the boarders being selected from each school, and afterwards placed out in service. The Earl of Jersey is the landed proprietor and lord of the manor.

GREAT MILTON, with the hamlet of Chilworth.

GREAT MILTON is an extensive parish, in the hundred and union of Thame, and diocese of Oxford, 8 miles from Oxford, and 6 from Thame.

The church of St. Mary is an ancient and handsome building in the Decorated style of architecture. Round the exterior are remains of several niches intended for statues, and on the north side is a beautiful specimen of the Early English arch: in the interior is a very handsome marble monument to one of the family of the Dormers; it is one of the handsomest churches in the diocese, and was thoroughly restored in the year 1861, under the able supervision of G. G. Scott, Esq., and is a very good specimen of the fourteenth century work; the tower is Perpendicular and contains eight bells. The living is a vicarage, annual value £248, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. Hardwick Shute, M.A., of Pembroke College, Oxford, and, till within the last ten or twelve years, was a peculiar of the Bishop of Lincoln's, and furnished two prebends to Lincoln Cathedral, one called Milton Ecclesia and the other Milton Manor. There is a Wesleyan chapel, the services of which are performed by local preachers.

Letters received through Tettsworth. The nearest money-order office is at Wheatley.

MINSTER LOVELL

Is a parish, in the hundred of Chadlington, union of Witney, archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford, 2½ miles from Witney.

The church of St. Kenelm is a large and ancient structure, with a tower rising from the centre; in the chancel is a splendid monument, encircled with military trophies, to the memory of Henry Heylyn, Esq. The living is a discharged vicarage, endowed with £200 private benefaction and £200 royal bounty, in the patronage of the Provost and Fellows of Eton College.

Minster Lovell is situated on the declivity of two opposite hills, between which runs the river Windrush, dividing the parish into what is termed Great and Little Minster. An alien priory of Benedictine monks, or cell to the abbey of St. Mary de Ibreio, was founded here in the reign of John, and at the suppression granted to Eton College. Lady Taunton owns the manor. Here are the remains of an ancient mansion, formerly the residence of the Lovell family.

NETTLEBED

Is a parish and village, pleasantly situated on an eminence, 5 miles north-west from Henley, and 6 from Wallingford, on the road from London to Oxford. It is included in the hundred of Ewelme, union and county court district of Henley, and diocese of Oxford. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture, but there are many employed in the manufacture of chairs. There are two brick, tile, and lime kilns, with potteries for coarse red ware, especially draining pipes. A saw mill for cutting brush boards has been erected, and a considerable trade is carried on in beech timber, with which this part of the county abounds.

The church of St. Bartholomew was rebuilt in 1846, and is a beautiful structure: the expenses were defrayed by subscription, towards which the Incorporated Society for Building Churches and Chapels granted £200. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £130. A new schoolroom has been erected, for which object liberal subscriptions were made.

There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans. By the Act of William IV. it was appointed one of the polling places for the county. There is a fair held here on the Monday before the 29th of October. From the Windmill Hill, near the village, beautiful and extensive views are obtained of the surrounding country.

OXFORD.

THIS city, the capital of the shire, the see of a bishop, and the seat of a university, having separate jurisdiction, is situated in the midst of fertile meadows, at the confluence of the rivers Cherwell and Isis, which constitute the magnificent Thames, locally in the hundred of Bullingdon, about 62 miles north-west from London. It has two railways (North Western and Great Western), and communicates with London by both.

The history of the justly far-famed university is involved in much obsecurify. Alfred, who is said to have resided here with his three sons, is also said to have founded three schools at this place, for philosophy, grammar, and divinity; it is, however, supposed to have been a seminary of learning even prior to the time of Alfred, although his exertions renovated its institutions and augmented its consequence; and it certainly was a place of study at the Norman invasion. At a remote period it was a city well fortified with walls, and defended by a strong castle; the tower of the castle now forms a part of the County Gaol.

The architectural views of the city of Oxford in every direction are singularly interesting. From Cumnor Hill, on the north-west, the prospect resembles that from the hills above Cologne. There are various lofty edifices happily grouped, which exhibit the Radcliffe Library to the greatest advantage as a central object; here is no monotonous break of the horizontal line, as in the views of Rome from a similar eminence, where are domes infinitely repeated, from the immensity of St. Peter's to the diminutive cupola of a convent. From the second hill, in Bagley Wood, the landscape is foreshortened, with the hall of Christ Church as the principal object, and Magdalen Tower to the east. From Headington Hill, Iffley, and Nuneham, the great features change their position, without losing their beauty; and as most of the grand buildings of Oxford approach nearly to each other, the accidental grouping of them from different points of view affords surprise and pleasure: these buildings, singly considered, have sufficient merit to detain the artist, as they are rich examples both of the Gothic and the Palladian style, and are worthy monuments of the skill and taste of the most eminent artists England has produced. It has been observed by an elegant critic, that the architectural beauties of Oxford, as a whole, exceed those of any city in the British empire. With the exception of Rome, Florence, Venice, and Genoa, Oxford will find few rivals on the Continent: so grand and varied a group of towers, turrets, spires, and cupolas must, on his approach, strike every traveller with admiration of a city where learning rears her head amid surrounding splendour.

The city of Oxford, including its suburbs, comprises an area of at least 3 miles in circumference, extending a mile and a quarter from the eastern side to the western, and nearly as far from north to south. The city is in form an ellipse, and was formerly environed by a wall, with bastions about 150 feet distant from each other; of these works there is still a fine specimen remaining in the wall which bounds part of New College gardens. There are four principal entrances into Oxford, three of which are over bridges: that over the Cherwell, on the eastern side, is Magdalen Bridge, 523 feet in length, which was erected in 1779; hence the High-street, one of the noblest in Europe, stretches westward through the greater part of the city: that on the south, over the Thames or Isis, is Folly Bridge, terminating in St. Aldate's-street. On the west are several bridges, which cross either the Oxford Canal or branches of the Isis.

The High-street, Oxford, is admired not only for its extent, but for the graceful curvature which it exhibits, and the number of public buildings by the fronts of which, in various styles of architecture, it is adorned. At Carfax the four principal streets of the city, viz., the High-street (already noticed); Cornmarket-street, leading into St. Giles-street; St. Aldate's-street; and Queen-street, converge to a centre: the third-mentioned of these streets contains the Town Hall and Christ Church.

The Town Hall was erected in 1754, chiefly at the expense of Thomas Rowney, formerly high steward, and M.P. for the city of Oxford. The Post Office, Town Clerk's Office, and the City of Oxford Free Public Library and Reading Room occupy the ground floor, and is well supplied with the daily and other newspapers, &c. This institution, which was opened 1st June, 1854, contains about 6,000 volumes. In November 1844, a good statue of Alderman Thomas Rowney was placed in the niche, which had been left from the time of its erection. Adjoining the Town Hall is the Council Chamber, in which are portraits of Queen Anne, William III., John first Duke of Marlborough, George third Duke of Marlborough (by Gainsborough), and other branches of the nobility and benefactors to the city: in this room, on the 8th of November, 1832, the present Queen, then Princess Victoria, with the late Duchess of Kent, paid a visit to the corporation, when an address was presented to the Duchess: in October, 1835, Queen Adelaide was presented with a loyal address from the corporation: and in 1841, his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, was presented with a loyal address, on which occasion his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, the high steward, was present.

The officers of the city and borough are the Mayor, High Steward, Recorder, ten Aldermen, Sheriff, thirty Councillors, a town clerk (who is also clerk of the peace for the city), four city lecturers, a coroner, and other officers. A charter was granted to Oxford by Henry II., who gave the mayor the right of sharing with the Lord Mayor of London the office of chief butler at the coronation; but the charter under which the city of Oxford was governed before the late Municipal Act of Parliament, was granted by King James in 1605. At present the city is governed by the mayor and magistrates, who appoint a police force to act during the day—as another police force, under the direction of the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors, is appointed by the University to act during the night.

The city has regularly sent two members to Parliament from the reign of Edward I.: the right of election is defined by the Reform Bill: the mayor is the returning officer. Oxford confers the title of earl on the family of Harley.

Several meetings of Parliament are recorded to have taken place at Oxford, the last of which was in the reign of Charles II., in 1681.

After the Battle of Hastings, Oxford was granted by William the Conqueror to Robert D'Oyley, who built the castle. The Empress Maude having obtained possession of the castle, it was so closely besieged by King Stephen that Maude escaped being made a prisoner only by passing the Thames, which was frozen, and travelling on foot, through deep snow, to Abingdon, six miles distant, whence she took horse for Wallingford Castle.

The County Gaol and House of Correction now occupies part of the site of Oxford Castle, of which there is an ancient tower remaining. The gaol has been enlarged by converting the governor's house into a ward for female prisoners, and by erecting a new house for the governor. :

In 1840 a new County Hall and Courts, together with offices for the clerk of the peace of the county, were erected, at a cost of about £15,000.

On the north side of the High-street is a commodious Market place, designed by Gwynn. The market days are Wednesday and Saturday, for meat, vegetables, &c. : a market for corn is held every Saturday at the Corn Exchange, in the Town hall yard; and a cattle market every second Wednesday, on Gloucester green. All regulations concerning the market are made by twelve commissioners appointed for the purpose. There are annual fairs on May 3rd, Monday after September 1st, and on Thursday before Michaelmas, for toys, &c,

By means of the river Thames and the Oxford Canal, but especially by railway communication, a considerable inland trade is carried on, chiefly in corn and coals, for which convenient wharfs and quays are provided. Brawn is here made in large quantities, both for immediate consumption and for the London markets.

At the top of Castle street has been erected, mainly through the liberality of the late Philip Bury Duncan, Esq., D.C.L., of New College, a neat building, where warm and cold baths are provided for all classes at very moderate charges, as well as washhouses for the poor.

Four newspapers are published every Saturday—the 'Oxford Journal,' the 'Oxford Chronicle,' the 'Oxford University Herald,' and the 'Oxford Times.'

Quarterly courts of session are held on Tuesdays and Fridays, in the Town Hall at 11 o'clock, and petty sessions are held by the county magistrates in the County Hall, New road, at 12 every Saturday, at which the mayor and magistrates preside. In this city are also held the assizes for the county, and the election of the county members of Parliament.

A county court is held every month at the County Hall, New road; John Billingsley Parry, Esq., Q.C., is the judge: John Crews Dudley, Esq., registrar; Mr. Samuel James Dalton, high bailiff. The following is a list of places comprised within the district:—Barton, Bayswater, Beckley, Binsey, Botley, Bradley, Chawley, Chiswell, Chippinghurst, Saint Clement's (beyond Caroline street, Oxford), Cold Harbour, Cowley (Church), Cowley (Middle), Cowley (Temple), Cuddesden, Cumnor, Dean Court, Denton, Elsfield, Forest hill, Garsington, Grandpont, Headington, Headington Quarry, Headington (New), Hendon, Henwood, Hill End, Hincksey (North), Hincksey (South), Hincksey (New), Hincksey Hill, Hockmore street, Holton, Horsepath, Horton, Iffley, Littleworth, Littlemore Liberty and St. Mary the Virgin (Oxford), Marston, Marston Lane, Oxford, Park Town, Rose Hill, Seacourt, Shotover, Stanton St. John's, Stowood, Stroud, Studley, Swinford, Summertown, Tumbledown Dick, Wheatley, Whitley, Woodeaton, Woodend, Wootton, Wytham, Woolvercott.

The New Workhouse for the Oxford union stands in the Cowley road; it is a handsome structure of red and white bricks, with a portion of Bath stone for cornices and dressings, and consists of three principal ranges or blocks parallel to each other; the central portion of the front range of buildings is of two stories, with entrance archway, over which is a bell cot; passing through the archway, at the distance of 100 feet, is the main building, 258 feet long, and 44 feet wide, with central corridor, extending the whole length, but broken in the centre by a large hall, over which is a tower, 90 feet high to the vane, serving for a staircase for the master and matron, and a ventilating shaft: the infirmary is placed at the back of the building on the high ground: a detached chapel, of a cruciform shape, with the usual fittings, is provided for the inmates: it is surrounded by iron railings: the architect was Mr. William Fisher, of London place, St. Clement's.

Oxford union was incorporated many years ago under a local act, and the incorporation consists of the following parishes:—All Saints, Holywell or St. Cross, Oxford University (part of), St. Aldate (Berks and Oxford), St. Ebbe, St. Martin, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Mary the Virgin, St. Michael, St. Peter le-Bailey, St. Peter-in-the-East, and St. Thomas.

Oxford Corn Exchange Company, (Limited).—Capital £2,500, in 500 shares of £5 each; deposit 5s. per share. The site and building belong to the corporation, and the latter is let to the Corn Exchange Company for the term of 31 years, one day in the week, Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., at a rental of £125 per annum. The company receive the rents and fees for admission on Saturday, and the corporation have the control and profits at all other times. The building is 100 feet long by 50 feet wide.

Oxfordshire Agricultural Society, amalgamated with the Banbury Agricultural Association for the exhibition of stock and implements only. The meetings alternately at Oxford and Banbury. Subscription, one guinea per annum.

The Oxford Farmers' Club was established in 1849 for the advancement of the science of agriculture. Patron, His Grace the Duke of Marlborough. The club meets on the 2nd Wednesday in the month, in the Council Chamber, when lectures are delivered, papers read, and discussions take place. Subscription, honorary members, 10s. to £1 ordinary members, 2s. 6d.; entrance fee, 2s. 6d.

The Clarendon Club, Clarendon Hotel. Annual subscription, 2 guineas for the first 100 members. Members enrolled after, pay, in addition, an entrance fee of one guinea. The advantages offered to members are similar to those afforded at the metropolitan clubs, although the subscription does not exceed that usually charged for the use of an ordinary reading room. The club room, which is at the Clarendon (late Star) Hotel, is one of the most spacious and elegant rooms in Oxford, and has been recently furnished with every comfort and convenience: it is liberally supplied with morning and evening papers received by the earliest trains, the principal London and local weekly journals, magazines, works of reference, &c. Refreshments of every kind are supplied to members from the establishment at a reduced tariff, attendance included. Smoking is permitted in the club from half-past 6 in the evening. The club room is open every day from 9 in the morning till 12 at night, except on Sundays, when it is opened at 1 p.m. and closed at 10 p.m.

The population in 1861, including the members of the University, was as follows:—All Saints, 478; Binsey, 67; Cowley (part), 725; Headington (part), 26; North Hinksey, Berks (part) 235; St. Aldate (part in Berks 487, part in Oxon), 1,424; St. Clement, 2,286; St. Cross, or Holywell, 943; St. Ebbe, 4,909; St. Giles, (part), 3,984; St. John, 187; St. Martin, 377; St. Mary Magdalen, 2,680; St. Mary the Virgin, 382; St. Michael, 971; St. Peter-le-Bailey, 1,153; St. Peter-in-the-East, 1,174; St. Thomas, 5,059; Woolvercot (part), 13 --Total, 27,560.

The new buildings at Christ Church were commenced in 1862, and occupy an entire length of 300 feet, comprising the site of the Chaplain's quadrangle, Dean Fell's buildings, and a part of the adjoining garden: there are 50 additional sets of rooms and accommodation for the porter: the central tower is 90 feet high, with recessed archways, with shafts and carved capitals, and is 70 feet eastward of the entrance from the meadow; the building is in the Venetian-Gothic style, and the cost is £20,000. The restoration of those portions of the exterior of St. Mary's Church, which was commenced about seven years ago, is now completed, and the effect of the traceried and battlemented parapets, with their crocketed pinnacles is now properly brought out. Sixteen additional sets of rooms have been erected for Merton College, in the rear of the chapel on the east side of the grove leading through to the meadow, and the new buildings form a quadrangle with the older portions. The whole of the south side of the hall and chapel of Queen's College has been restored with Bath stone. A spirited restoration has been commenced in the chapel of Jesus College: the chapel was consecrated in 1621, and enlarged a few years later by the addition of a quasi chancel, the aperture of the original east window being left to do duty as a chancel arch: a handsome arch of fitting character has now been constructed, which shows to great advantage the east window, dating from 1686, and recently filled with stained glass, after it had been blocked up for about 80 years, and partially hidden by a copy of Guido's painting of St. Michael overcoming the Devil: a new north window has also taken the place of a nondescript production of the last century. The finely-decorated pure Gothic tower over the principal entrance of Brasenose College has been entirely restored, the original being reproduced in every detail: the only addition to the original is the erection of three statues in the niches originally built for their reception: in the centre, near the summit of the tower, is the Virgin and Child, while lower down on each side are St. Chad and St. Hugh, the patron saints of Lichfield and Lincoln, of which sees Bishop Smyth, the founder of the college, was successively bishop. At many other colleges, and at St. Alban Hall, extensive improvements have been made. At St. Alban Hall the improvements conducted by J. Gibbs, Esq., are especially worthy of note: they comprise a re-modelling of a portion of the buildings, the new facing of the entire quadrangle, the restoration of the quaint and lofty bell-turret, and the addition of the entirely new appendage, of a chapel for the society; these improvements have given to the Hall a collegiate appearance, which it certainly wanted before. The Radcliffe Library has undergone some changes: a new entrance doorway opens on the north side of the building: a handsome flight of steps, inclosed by a balustrade, leads to the level of the first landing on the present staircase: the ground story of the library is inclosed with an oak floor over the stone paving, and the archways are converted into windows. The new library and reading-room of the Oxford Union Society, which are additions to their buildings in Frewin's court, are completed: the prison-like wall in New Inn, Hall street, has been removed, and a low wall, surmounted by railings, has taken its place. Many alterations have been made in the Ashmolean Museum, owing to the removal of the Ashmole collections to the New Museum: the basement is to receive the Arundel marbles and mediæval antiquities, and the upper room, which has had a separate entrance made to it from the Schools side, is to serve for an examination room: the buildings and steps in the front area have been removed, thereby enabling windows to be inserted to light the basement chamber, which is a very fine room, having a stone carved vault from end to end: the walls have been cleaned and restored, and the floor laid with stone paving and encaustic tiles.

The see of Oxford constituted part of the diocese of Lincoln until the year 1542, when Henry VIII. erected a bishopric, which he endowed with the estates of the dissolved monasteries of Osney and Abingdon, assigning at the same time the abbey church of Osney as a cathedral to the diocese. The abbey, situated in the suburbs of the present city of Oxford, or Ouseneyford, was founded by Robert D'Oyley, Lord High Constable of England in the reign of Henry I., and the last abbot of Osney was appointed bishop of the new see: the king, in the year 1546, translated the episcopal see to the cathedral church of Christ, in Oxford, and granted some of the estates to the Dean and Chapter which had been appropriated by Cardinal Wolsey to the maintenance of his college. The value of the see, as reported by the commissioners for enquiring into the ecclesiastical revenues, is £2,400 per annum: but the bishop receives at the present time, by arrangement with the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, £5,000 per annum; the present bishop, consecrated in 1845, is the Right Rev. Samuel Willerforce, D.D., F.R.S., F.R.A.S., F.G.S., F.R.G.S., Chancellor of the Order of the Garter, and Lord High Almoner to the Queen, who resides at Cuddesdon Palace, near Wheatley, in this country, and also has a seat, his private property, at East Woollavington, near Petworth, in Sussex.

The cathedral of Oxford is a large building, partly erected in the Norman and partly in the Pointed style of architecture, with a central tower containing ten bells, surmounted by a spire: the ceiling of the choir is ornamented with tracery and pendants; the shrine of St. Frideswide, who died A.D. 739, enriched with tabernacle work, is highly interesting: on the northern side of the cathedral are chapels in a later style of architecture than other parts of the building: some of the windows contained stained glass, the subjects being chiefly armorial; but in the great window of the northern transept is an ancient representation of the murder of St. Thomas-a-Becket: in the western window are figures of St. Frideswide, St. Katherine, &c., and in the east window medallions of Scripture history, designed by Henry Gerente; the window in the north aisle, representing St. Peter conducted out of Prison by the Angel, was painted in 1700 by Isaac Oliver, when he was 84 years of age. The church has been new roofed, and the interior has undergone many alterations and repairs. Service is performed every morning and evening at 10 and 4 o'clock; there is a fine-toned organ, and the stone roof in the choir is much admired; amongst the monuments in the cathedral, are that of Robert Burton, author of "The Anatomy of Melancholy," and a fine statue of Dr. Cyril Jackson, formerly dean, by Sir F. Chantry. The Chapter House is a noble specimen of Early Pointed architecture, and a portion of the conventual cloisters yet remains.

Oxford, with its suburbs, consists of thirteen parishes, which, with the exception of St. Giles and St. John's, were consolidated by Act of Parliament in 1771.

St. Aldate's Church, or St. Old's, is one of great antiquity, and is said to have been originally founded about 1004, at the west end is a tower, surmounted by an octangular spire. The living is a rectory, value £137 per annum, in the patronage of the trustees of the late Rev. Charles Simeon, formerly a fellow of King's College, Cambridge. This parish includes the hamlet of Grandpont, locally situated in Berkshire. The Rev. A. M. W. Christopher, M.A., of Jesus College, Cambridge, is rector, and the Rev. T. A. Nash, M.A., of Worcester College, curate.

All Saints' Church is in the High street. The old church of All-hallows, as it was formerly frequently called, fell down from decay in 1699, when the present building, one of the principal churches in Oxford, was erected in 1708, from designs by Dr. Henry Aldrich, the accomplished Dean of Christ Church. It has often and justly been praised by critics in architecture; being constructed of perishable stone, many of the projecting parts have lost their sharpness, and the admirable details have been impaired; by this, however, its pictorial effect is increased, the mouldering stone blending more happily with the venerable structures by which it is surrounded; the order is Corinthian, and the entablature, which is remarkably bold, is carried completely round the building, and is supported by coupled columns, a mode purely Italian; the columns are not fluted, and the frieze is perfectly plain, all its grandeur of appearance is therefore derived from the breadth and justness of its proportions, it is surmounted by an attic and balustrade, a very fine tower at the west end supports a beautiful peristyle of Corinthian columns, above which is an obelisk termination. In 1843 a splendid monument was erected in this church to the memory of Edward Tatham, D.D., 42 years rector of Lincoln College, by his widow, and executed by Mr. H. Weekes, at a cost of upwards of £800; in the chancel are seats for the rector and fellows of Lincoln College. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £65, in the gift of the college.

St. Ebbe's church, in St. Ebbe's street, is a modern edifice, opened for divine service February 9th, 1817, and was erected from designs by Fisher, in the Pointed style of architecture, corresponding with the tower of the old church, which has been preserved; a curious Norman doorway has been adapted to the vestry. This church formerly belonged to the abbey of Eynsham, and was dedicated to St. Ebbe, daughter of Ethelfrid, King of Northumberland, who became abbess of Coldingham, and died in the year 683. The living is a rectory, annual value £111, with residence, formerly in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, but recently sold by him, under the Augmentation Act, to the Earl of Shaftesbury.

St. Giles's church, in the street of the same name, on the road to Woodstock, is a very ancient structure, and well proportioned. The living is a vicarage, annual value £160, in the patronage of St. John's College, and held by the Rev. F. A. Powys, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College; the curates are the Rev. H. Cholmeley, M.A., Fellow of Magdalen College, and the Rev. J. Rumsey, M.A., of Pembroke College. Summer Town, in this parish, is a perpetual curacy, also in the gift of St. John's College, and held by the Rev. W. W. Jones, B.A., Fellow of St. John's. The new district of St. Philip and St. James has lately been formed within this parish; it is a perpetual curacy.

Holywell church, in the street of the same name, at the north-eastern extremity of the city, was dedicated to the Holy Cross, and the parish is named from an ancient well near the church. The embattled tower was erected about the year 1464, but the church is more ancient; on the south side of the chancel is a small chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary. In 1838 a new aisle was added to the north side, and in 1843 a corresponding aisle on the south, when the whole was newly pewed with open seats. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £80, in the gift of Merton College.

St. John the Baptist church is used as Merton College chapel; it originally belonged to Reading Abbey, the monks of which gave it to Walter de Merton; but the present edifice was built in 1424, from designs by William Rede, one of the Fellows of the College and Bishop of Chichester, one of the most able architects of the age; the tower of the church was built by Thomas Rodbourne, Bishop of St. Davids, and Warden of Merton College. The external panelling of the tower and the pinnacles were probably then added, and show a later style of architecture than the rest of the chapel; the corbels on the northern side of the church exhibit sculpture of better design and execution than any of the same kind in Oxford, and the whole elevation of the northern transept towards the street, with the window and recesses, presents a very beautiful architectural composition. The great east window of this church is, perhaps, the most perfect instance of spreading the mullions with so rich an effect now in existence. The interior of the church was repaired in 1823; the chancel is hung with tapestry, representing the history of Ahasuerus and Esther; the side windows are filled with ancient stained glass, exquisitely beautiful and perfect; and in the east window six compartments contain the principal events in the life of Christ, executed in stained glass, by W. Price, in 1700. The altar-piece is a picture of the Crucifixion, by Tintoretto. On the north side of the altar is a monument in memory of Sir Thomas Bodley, founder of the Bodleian Library; near it is the monument of Bishop Earle, author of "Microcosmography." In the ante-chapel is the monument of Anthony Wood, the celebrated Oxford antiquary, who died in 1695. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £30, in the gift of Merton College.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin is one of the principal ornaments of the High street. The present edifice was erected in 1498, by the contribution of several bishops, and other wealthy persons. It consists of a nave with its aisles, a tower crowned with a spire on the north side, and a large chancel, its entire length being about 250 feet, and its breadth about 50; the height of the roof is 70 feet, the whole of light and elegant architecture. The southern porch, in the High street, was built in 1637, at the expense of Morgan Owen, D.D., chaplain to Archbishop Laud; over the entablature of the porch is a statue of the Virgin Mary, which was defaced soon after its erection, and the placing it there made one of the articles of impeachment against the archbishop, who was then chancellor of the University. The spire of this church, which has been beautifully restored, is one of the most striking objects in every distant view of Oxford; from the basement of the tower to the vane is 180 feet, the exact altitude of the spire alone of Salisbury cathedral. In 1828 a great alteration was made in the interior of the church, when the vice-chancellors's and doctors' seats were re-constructed upon a tasteful model by the late Mr. Thomas Plowman, architect, and all the monuments were removed from the pillars of the nave. St. Mary's being the University church, sermons are preached here every Sunday morning and afternoon, and on holy days, during term, by preachers appointed by a prescribed cycle; on the northern side of the chancel is the common law school, where the Vinerian Professor reads his lectures. The living is a vicarage, annual value £38, in the gift of Oriel College.

St. Martin's, commonly known as Carfax, is the city church. It is called Carfax from its situation at the meeting of the four main streets of the city, the quatre vois. It was rebuilt in 1822, but the ancient tower remains. The living is a rectory, annual value £62, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor. There are also four City lecturers appointed by the corporation, viz.,—Rev. W. S. Bricknell, M.A., of Worcester College, vicar of Eynsham; Rev. R. C. Hales, M.A., of Magdalen Hall, rector of Woodmancote, Sussex; Rev. R. Gandell, M.A., chaplain of Corpus Christi College, and Laudian Professor of Arabic: Rev. J. S. Sidebham, M.A., chaplain of New College. Sir John Peshall gives the following account of the ministers of this church in his History of the City (4to London, 1773):—"Besides the rector are four lecturers, as of old, appointed and paid by the city, at £10 each, exempt from episcopal visitation. And Bishop Fell demised £20 yearly to be paid for a lecturer, to be appointed by the Deans of Christ Church successively, to read prayers every morning at 9, and in the evening at 8 o'clock, in a church at Oxford (which is this at present), whence this church is perhaps the best attended with clergy and Divine service, and the worst paid of any in the kingdom. It is supplied on Sundays in the morning and afternoon by one of the lecturers, which are generally some of the best preachers in the University, much to the honour of both the University and city." Bishop Fell's lectureship has long since been lost sight of as regards St. Martin's parish, but the four city lectureships still remain, and preserve their ancient prestige, being always the objects of much competition as a connecting link between the University and the city of Oxford. The Mayor and Corporation attend Divine service here every Sunday morning. Carfax conduit, which formerly stood in the centre of the four streets, was presented to the Earl of Harcourt in 1771, who re-constructed it in Nuneham Park.

St. Mary Magdalen's Church is situated near Balliol College, between the Corn Market and St. Giles' street. The southern aisle of this church is said to have been originally founded in 1194, as a chapel to the palace of Beaumont, which was erected by Henry I. on the site now Beaumont street. This part of the church was rebuilt in 1337. The interior has lately been refitted, and many seats added. A new gallery has also been erected, in which is a fine-toned organ; the font is highly enriched. The parish is the largest in the city of Oxford. The living is a vicarage, annual value £145, in the patronage of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church.

St. Michael's church is near the Corn Market. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £100, in the presentation of the Rector and Fellows of Lincoln College.

St. Peter-le-Bailey church, near the Castle, on the western side of the city, was built in 1740. The living is a rectory, annual value £104, in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor.

St. Peter's-in-the-East, one of the oldest churches in the kingdom, is near Queen's College. The chancel is worthy of notice for two beautiful enriched windows, and for the very curious interesting ribs of the ceiling. Many persons of local distinction, and of eminence in the literary world, are buried within this church, and in the churchyard is the tomb of the celebrated antiquary, Thomas Hearne, who died in 1735. The vaulted crypt underneath the chancel is scarcely inferior to that of Canterbury Cathedral. In dimension it is 36 feet by nearly 21 feet, being divided into a centre and aisles by eight massive pillars, which support the roof. The living is a vicarage, annual value £203, in the gift of Merton College.

St. Thomas the Martyr's church is situated a little southward of the Witney road, at the western extremity of the city. A few years since it was repaired and much improved, at the same time newly pewed, and in 1847 a new aisle was added by the Rev. T. Chamberlain, the vicar. The living is a vicarage, annual value £185, in the presentation of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church. Osney Abbey and Rewley Abbey were both situated in the parish of St. Thomas.

St. Clement's is a suburb at the eastern end of the city. The church has been rebuilt in the Norman style of architecture, with low semi-circular arches, and massive pillars having small and varied capitals. The tower is low, and totally without ornament: such buildings are found to be less costly than the more florid style of Pointed architecture, and the general effect is pleasing. The living is a rectory, annual value £92, formerly in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, but recently sold by him to the Rev. B. P. Symons, D.D., Warden of Wadham College.

Holy Trinity, a new district church in the parish of St. Ebbe, is a neat Gothic structure, built by Mr. Gardiner, under the superintendence of Mr. Underwood, the architect, at a cost of about £3,400, raised by subscription. It was consecrated on the 14th October, 1845. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £150, in the gift of the Crown and the bishop alternately.

St. Paul's, a handsome district church, erected in 1836, by Mr. James Johnson, under the direction of Mr. Underwood, is of the Ionic order, and has a very handsome portico. The expenses were defrayed by public subscription. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £150, in the gift of the Bishop, and held by the Rev. Alfred Hackman, M.A., precentor of Christ Church ; the Rev. J. D. Jenkins, B.D., Fellow of Jesus College, and Canon of Natal, and the Rev. Henry Bullocke, B.A., of Exeter College, are curates.

St. John the Baptist, Summer Town, a new district church in the parish of St. Giles, is about one mile and a half from St. Giles's church. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £116, in the gift of St. John's College.

There are also public buildings in Oxford belonging to the University : they consist of a public library, schools, theatre, museum, printing house, botanical garden, &c.

The Bodleian Library, founded in 1595, was originally contained in three large rooms, and to these have been added several others. Below the library is the Auctarium, appropriated to choice manuscripts and early printed books. In the library are busts of Charles I. and Sir Thomas Bodley, and portraits of learned men.

The Divinity Schools, eastward of the Bodleian Library, form a quadrangular building, three sides of the upper story forming the Picture Gallery, which contains numerous portraits and subjects, as well as models of celebrated buildings. The gate-house of the schools displays each of the five orders of architecture, from the Tuscan to the Composite ; this tower is the repository of the public acts of the University. The Arundelian marbles are preserved on the northern side of the Divinity Schools, as are also the antique marbles given to the University by the executors of Selden. In the Moral Philosophy school are the statues, busts, &c., presented to the University by the Countess of Pomfret in 1755. The Parian Chronicle, one of the most interesting marbles now to be found in any museum, was purchased in Anatolia.

The Sheldonian Theatre, one of the principal buildings of Oxford, was opened in 1669, having been erected by Sir Christopher Wren, at a cost of £15,000, the whole of which was defrayed by Archbishop Sheldon, who added £2,000, to be laid out in estates for its support and repair. The late Dr. Willis, warden of Wadham College, left £1,000 for the same purpose. The southern front is disposed in two stories of the Corinthian order. Over the entrance are the arms of Archbishop Sheldon, the founder, and in niches at the extremities are statues of the archbishop and the Duke of Ormond. Within the theatre are portraits of the founder, of George IV., the Emperor of Russia and King of Prussia, of James Duke of Ormond, Sir Christopher Wren, and Lord Crewe. Here public meetings of the University are held for the annual commemoration of benefactors, and for the recitation of prize compositions. Meetings are also held here occasionally for conferring degrees on distinguished personages, and sometimes concerts are performed here.

At the Oxford Commemoration, which took place June 16, 1863, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales were received with becoming state and rejoicing. The Archbishops and Bishops, with the great dignitaries of the College, entered the Sheldonian Theatre shortly before 3 o'clock. Then, at 3, the Prince and Princess entered, and a scene ensued which will not easily be forgotten by those who witnessed it. The whole assemblage rose, and the undergraduates, starting to their feet with a deafening cheer, waved caps, gowns, handkerchiefs in the air, and stamped their feet in the ecstasy of their enthusiasm, till the building trembled in a manner that was almost alarming. Never since the Theatre was built have its walls echoed and vibrated to such a long, hearty, and absolutely deafening outburst as the young Prince advanced, bowing with his usual kindly courteous grace from side to side, and leading his fair young bride, who was quite unable to conceal the expression of absolute astonishment in her face at this astounding welcome. The Prince wore his uniform and riband of the garter, and over it his academic gown. The Princess was dressed plainly and simply. With them came Lord Derby, in his splendid robes as Chancellor of the University, the Dukes of Newcastle and Marlborough, Earls Granville, Spencer, Mount Edgumbe, Lord Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, Mr. and Mrs. Disraeli, General Knollys, Dr. Travers Twiss, Dr. Liddell, Dr Jelf, &c. After an elegant and fluently delivered oration in Latin of about a quarter of an hour from the noble Chancellor, the usual dry formula was gone through, and the Chancellor presented the diploma conferring the degree of Doctor in Civil Law on his Royal Highness, amid prolonged applause.

Frewin Hall, an old sombre-looking mansion in Corn Market street, is celebrated as the Prince's home while he was in residence here, and for which, as associated with his academic days, he is said to entertain a strong liking, notwithstanding it is rather small, very old, and certainly gloomy-looking. The entrance to it is up a narrow and shabby court, and thence between tall old monastic-looking walls to a small, low-pointed gateway overgrown with limes, the oak door in which gives entrance to a little court before the old-fashioned house in which the Prince lived: it is sombre outside and plain within, and the wonder is how the Prince and even the small suite who were with him ever found room to live there.

The Ashmolean Museum, westward of the theatre, was completed in 1682. The collection is rich in manuscripts connected with heraldry and genealogy, and the geological collection is said to be one of the best in the kingdom.

The Clarendon building, once the Clarendon Printing office, was erected in 1711, from the profits of the sale of Lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion; over the entrance is a fine statue of Lord Clarendon. This building until recently was held by the University under lease from the city, and consists of various offices for University purposes. The University Printing office, northward of Worcester college, was erected in 1826; it is of the Corinthian order, with a front 252 feet in extent.

The Oxford University Museum, a large and handsome structure in the ancient Gothic style of architecture, stands in the Parks, on the north side of the city; it has a frontage of 346 feet, was erected by the University authorities at a great expense as an educational institution, to bring under one roof astronomy, geometry, mathematics, chemistry, mineralogy, geology, zoology, anatomy, physiology and medicine. Sir Thomas Deane was the architect, and the building was opened in July, 1860. The main entrance is on the west, through a finely carved doorway, into the Museum Court, which has a glass roof, supported by iron columns; this court is 112 feet square, and the middle avenue contains zoological collections; on the north side are skeletons and other anatomical objects; on the south side the collections of reptiles and fish are placed, and there are also many fine specimens of minerals and fossils; on the south side of the lower corridor are the apparatus used in connection with experimental philosophy; the north side is devoted to specimens of geology and anatomy. The library and reading-room, 200 feet long, are on the first floor: the rare and valuable works on natural history and medicine, from the Radcliffe Library, have been deposited here, by permission of the trustees, and some part of the Ashmolean collection has also been placed in this museum. Henry W. Acland, Esq., M.D., formerly Fellow of All Souls, Regius Professor of Medicine, is the librarian. The Theatre, or lecture-room, on the same floor, will accommodate 500 people: it is intended for occasional use, and is amply supplied with gas, water, and drainage, for experiments. In other parts of the building are offices and rooms set apart for the use of the different professors and students, and which are not opened to public view. The residence of the Curator, at the south-east angle of the museum, is an elegant structure in the Gothic style.

The Radcliffe Library was founded in 1737: it is 100 feet in diameter, with a rustic basement, and superstructure of the Corinthian order, having a balustrade over the entablature at the height of 80 feet, above which is a cupola 60 feet in height: over the door of the entrance to the library from the staircase is a portrait of the founder by Kneller, and within the library is a statue of Dr. Radcliffe, the founder, by Rysbrach; this great benefactor to the University left £40,000 for the erection of this library, £150 per annum to the librarian, £100 per annum for the purchase of books, and £100 per annum to keep the library in repair: in the area are casts of the most celebrated of the antique statues, and marble busts of Greek and Roman physicians. On the 14th of June, 1814, a dinner was provided by the University, in this library, for the Prince Regent, the Emperor of Russia, the King of Prussia, the Duke of York, the Duchess of Oldenburgh, many other royal personages, great officers of state, nobility, &c., to the number of nearly 200. The library is now used as an additional chamber of the Bodleian, and is appropriated to the reception of all books and periodicals which have been published during the preceding four years: it is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. for those who have permission to read: the books in medicine and natural history, formerly placed here, are now removed to the New Museum.

The Radcliffe Infirmary, beyond St. Giles's church, in the Woodstock-road, was opened in 1770, for the reception of patients, and is supported by annual subscription: it was built and completely furnished by the trustees of Dr. Radcliffe: the ground on which it stands, containing five acres, was the donation of Thomas Rowney, Esq., Member of Parliament for the city of Oxford.

The Botanical Garden, on the banks of the Cherwell, nearly opposite Magdalen College, contains five acres: it was founded in 1632, when the ground was raised to prevent its being overflowed, and the walls were erected; the gateway is said to have been designed by Inigo Jones. In 1728, Dr. W. Sherard bequeathed to the University his library and valuable herbarium, and endowed a professorship of botany, which is in the gift of the College of Physicians; the professor's assistant, Mr. Baxter, is appointed to show the garden and greenhouses.

The Observatory, founded in 1772, and erected out of the funds bequeathed by Dr. Radcliffe, is amply supplied with astronomical instruments, and apartments for observation and for lectures.

Oxford became a very flourishing University in the reign of Henry II., or at least of Richard I.: the opinion which ascribes its foundation to Alfred the Great, if it cannot be maintained as a truth, contains no intrinsic marks of error; but the earliest charters were granted by King John. The University of Oxford is a corporate body, styled the Chancellor (who is generally a peer of the realm), Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford—the House of Congregation and the House of Convocation: it is governed by statutes of its own making: the Chancellor is elected by the votes of all members of Convocation; the office is now held by the Earl of Derby, D.C.L.; he is not required to attend the meetings of the University, except at his installation, and in case of royal visits. The Vice-Chancellor is always the head of a college, and is nominated by the Chancellor, and approved by Convocation; he is the highest resident officer of the University. The High Steward, the Earl of Carnarvon, is appointed by the Chancellor, and approved by Convocation. The Proctors are two masters of arts, of at least four years' standing, chosen annually out of the several colleges in turn; they each nominate two pro-proctors, two masters of arts of any college or hall, to be their respective deputies. The Public Orator is chosen by Convocation, and retains the office for life.

The University sends two members to parliament, a privilege granted by James I., when the elective right was conferred on the doctors and actual masters, amounting to about 450; the candidates are put to no expense; the present members are the Right Hon. Gathorne Hardy and Sir William Heathcote, Bart. During the civil war the colleges took part with the King, and in 1643 sent their plate to be coined for his use. A commission to inquire into the state of the University was issued 31st August, 1850; the Constitution was changed 7th August, 1854; and amended 23rd June, 1856.

There are nineteen colleges and five halls: the latter are not incorporated bodies, but enjoy the same privileges as the colleges. Each college has a resident governor, under one of the various titles of dean, rector, provost, warden, president, master, or principal; the heads of halls are styled principals. The head of a college is chosen by the Fellows, excepting in the instance of Christ Church, the dean of which is nominated by the Crown, and Worcester College, where the provost is appointed by the Chancellor of the University. The qualification for fellowship varies in almost every college. The Fellows, in conjunction with the head of the college, are in all cases the directors of internal regulation, and managers of the property and estates of the society. From this body the church preferment which is attached to every college is distributed, according to seniority, as a vacancy occurs: other members of the several colleges in the University are scholars, consisting of noblemen, gentlemen commoners, commoners, and students of Christ Church, chaplains, bible clerks, and exhibitioners, who receive support during their residence at college, and servitors; many of the London trading companies have exhibitions in their presentation: there are also tutors, who direct the studies of the junior members, and prepare them for the public examinations, and bursars or treasurers. In the colleges that have choirs there are singing clerks, choristers, and organists among the members. The college servants are the butler, the manciple or steward, the cook, and the porter.

There are four terms in the year, viz., Michaelmas term, from October 10th to December 17th; Hilary term, from January 14th to the day before Palm Sunday, except that day should be a festival, then the term ends the Monday following; Easter term, from the tenth day after Easter Sunday to the day before Whit Sunday; and Trinity term, which begins on the Wednesday after Whit Sunday, and ends on the first Saturday in July.

Every member of the University must be matriculated, and for this purpose he appears before the Vice-Chancellor, and describes his rank in life, takes the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and swears to observe all the statutes, privileges, and customs of the University. The degrees taken are in arts, law, divinity, medicine, and music. The members of the University, previous to obtaining a degree, are styled under-graduates. For a Bachelor of Arts, a residence of sixteen terms is necessary; and previously to admission to this degree it is necessary to undergo responsions, and a public examination. The examinations take place in the schools twice a year, and no one can be examined who has not previously responded before the masters of the schools. A bachelor is entitled to his degree of Master of Arts twelve terms after taking his first degree, without any further examination; one term of intermediate residence, comprising 21 days, being all that is requisite. A Student in Civil Law undergoes the same examination as that for Bachelor of Arts; and the number of terms to be kept for the degree of Bachelor of Civil Law, is 28, reduced by dispensation to 17. A Bachelor in Divinity receives his degree seven years from the time of his regency, which is taken out the first act after his master's degree; a Doctor in Divinity, four years after his degree of Bachelor in Divinity; a Doctor in Civil Law, five years after his bachelor's degree; a Bachelor in Medicine, one year from his regency; a Doctor in Medicine, three years after his degree of bachelor. For the degrees of Bachelor and Doctor of Music, the candidates prepare a composition, on the approval of which by the professor of music, they are subjected to a musical examination, both on paper and viva voce, by the Professor, the Choragus, and a third examiner nominated by the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors and approved by Convocation; after which the successful candidates perform their exercises in the music school, or occasionally in the hall of some college, or the theatre, before the Vice-Chancellor and other officers of the University. The dresses of the members vary according to their rank and degree; those in general use, for a Master of Arts, a black gown, with long pendant sleeves, having a circular cut at the bottom, and a hood of black silk lined with crimson; for a Doctor in Divinity, the same dress, with cassock, sash, and scarf; for a Bachelor of Arts, gown, with full sleeves looped at the elbow, and terminating in a point ; for a Proctor, black gown, with facings and sleeves of black velvet, and a small tippet attached to the left shoulder; and for a Pro-Proctor, a master of arts' gown, faced with velvet, and a tippet on the left shoulder. The dresses of under-graduates are, for a nobleman, a black silk gown, and square velvet cap with gold tassel ; of a gentleman commoner, silk gown with plaits at the sleeves, and square black velvet cap, with silk tassel ; that of a commoner, a gown without sleeves, with a broad strip from each shoulder hanging behind to the bottom of the dress and gathered into plaits near the top, and a square black cloth cap with silk tassel ; the dress of a servitor is, under a recent statute, in all respects the same with that of a commoner.

Christ Church, the largest college in the University, was originally founded by Cardinal Wolsey, Archbishop of York, on the site of the priory of St. Frideswide ; but after considerable progress was made in the building, the cardinal, having fallen into disgrace with his royal master, was not permitted to complete an undertaking which reflects the brightest lustre upon his prosperity. Henry VIII. seized upon and suspended the foundation, which he re-established in 1532, under the name of Henry VIII.'s College ; this was suppressed in 1545, and in the year following the episcopal see was removed from Oseney, and the church of St. Frideswide was constituted a cathedral, by the name of Christ Church. The principal front of the college, in St. Aldate's street, is about 400 feet in extent. Wolsey having left the very rich and elegant gate-house tower unfinished, it was completed by Sir Christopher Wren in 1682. The arms of benefactors are upon the groined ceiling of the arch of entrance, and over it is hung the Great Tom, one of the largest bells in England, weighing 17,000 lbs. ; it is inscribed, MAGNVS . THOMAS . CLVSIVS . OXONIENSIS . RENATVS . APR. 8. 1680. Every night, at five minutes past nine, it tolls 101 times (the number of students), at which time the gates of most of the colleges are shut. The great quadrangle is about 263 feet square, with a wide terrace walk round it, and in the centre a fountain, supplied with water from a spring at Hinksey ; it contains the hall, the lodgings of the dean and five of the canons ; in the north-east corner of the quadrangle is a statue of Bishop Fell, and over the entrance to the hall one of Cardinal Wolsey, by Francis Bird. The Hall, 115 feet in length by 40 feet wide, and 50 feet high, was built by the founder, and strikes every eye by the grandeur of its proportions and propriety of ornament ; the lofty and highly enriched timber roof and the beautiful oriel window at the upper end, excite general admiration. A fine collection of portraits forms an appropriate decoration to the hall : among them are those of Henry VIII., by Holbein ; Cardinal Wolsey, by Holbein ; Queen Elizabeth, by Zuccherò ; Dr. Aldrich, by Kneller ; Lord Grenville, Chancellor of the University, by Owen ; the Right Hon. George Canning, by Lawrence, &c., and numerous celebrated divines. At the upper end of the hall is a bust of George IV., by Chantrey. Very near the hall is the kitchen, said to be the first part of the college that was completed, and retaining its original appearance ; it contains the large gridiron, four feet six inches by four feet one inch, and supported on four wheels. The common room, under the hall, contains portraits of Henry VIII., Archbishop Markham, Dean

Aldrich, and Doctors Busby, Friend, Nicholl, and Frewin. In the court, near this part of the quadrangle, is the Grammar school, where the choristers are educated, and opposite to it is the Anatomical Theatre. The Peckwater quadrangle derives its name from an ancient hall which stood on the south-west corner of the present court, the property of Richard Peckwater. It was rebuilt from designs by Dr. Aldrich in 1795, excepting the southern side containing the library. In the lower rooms of this building are the pictures, busts, &c., presented by General Guise to the college in 1765, and some curious paintings of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth centuries, presented by the Hon. W. T. H. F. Strangways. On the staircase is a statue of Locke, by Roubillac. Canterbury quadrangle is on the site of Canterbury hall, granted to the college by Henry VIII. The north and east sides were rebuilt by Wyatt in 1775, and the south side in 1783; the gateway of this court is of the Doric order, and much admired for its graceful simplicity. The cathedral of the diocese is also the chapel of this college, and has been described.

Christ Church Meadow, a walk belonging to this college, is bounded on the east by the river Cherwell, on the south by the Isis, on the west by a branch of the same river, and on the north by the broad walk; it is adorned by ornamental trees, and commands a delightful and extensive prospect.

University College, said to have been founded by Alfred the Great in 872, was restored by William of Durham, Archbishop of Rouen, who died in 1249. This college, situated in the High street, extends 260 feet in length, and is divided into two courts. The chapel and hall are on the south side of the great quadrangle, which is 100 feet square. Above the principal gate is a statue of Queen Anne, and upon the inner side a statue of James II, remarkable, as only two statues of this king are supposed to exist in England; the other is at Whitehall. Above the other gate, on the exterior, is a statue of Queen Mary, daughter of James II., and on the side within the court a statue of Dr. John Radcliffe. In the common room is a bust of King Alfred, by Wilton, and in the ante-chapel is a cenotaph, by Flaxman, in memory of Sir William Jones, who died at Bengal in 1794.

Balliol College was founded by John Balliol, of Barnard Castle, Durham, who died in 1269. It consists principally of one court, entered by a gate-house, erected in the reign of Henry VII. The hall contains portraits of Wycliffe, the Reformer, who was master of this college; Shute Barrington, Bishop of Durham, &c. The north side of the quadrangle is occupied by the chapel and library, in which is a collection of manuscripts, some of them illuminated; many early printed English Bibles, and some curious volumes of tracts, besides a good collection of books on general literature. In the chapel, erected in 1529, are some stained glass windows of early date; the east window represents the Passion, Resurrection, and Ascension of Christ; the north window shows Philip Baptizing the Eunuch, executed by Van Linge in 1637, and given by Sir Richard Atkyns, of the county of Gloucester; the south window contains the story of Hezekiah's Sickness and Recovery, painted by the same artist, and presented by Dr. Wentworth, fellow of the college.

Merton College was originally founded at Malden, in Surrey, in 1264, by Walter de Merton, Bishop of Rochester, and Lord Chancellor of England, and ten years afterwards was transferred to Oxford. It is pleasantly situated in the south-east part of the city, and consists of three quadrangles, erected at different periods. The first, or outer one, is as attractive as any in the University, as it contains, with other fine specimens of architecture, the east end of St. John's church, the college chapel. The hall, on the south side of this quadrangle, was built in the early part of the fifteenth century, and contains, among other portraits, one of the founder. The inner or principal quadrangle is 110 feet by 100, and in the garden quadrangle is a terrace formed on the city wall, commanding a remarkably pleasant prospect over the meadows on the banks of the Cherwell. The Emperor of Russia and his sister resided at this college in the warden's lodgings, when they visited the University in 1814. The gate-house was erected by Thomas Rodbourne, Bishop of St. David's, and warden of the college in 1416. The sculpture over the entrance refers to the history of St. John the Baptist, and is a relic of the old church; the statues, in canopied niches on the sides, are those of Walter de Merton and Henry III.

Exeter College was founded by Walter de Stapledon, Bishop of Exeter, in 1314, and was originally called Stapledon Hall. It is situated in Turl street, and has a frontage of 220 feet, with a gate-house in the centre, of Gothic architecture, opening upon a spacious quadrangle, containing the hall, chapel, rector's lodgings, and chambers of fellows and scholars. The chapel has been recently rebuilt at an expense of £15,000 from the designs of George Gilbert Scott, R.A., and is a masterpiece of Gothic architecture. The hall, built in 1620, by Sir John Acland, contains a portrait of Walter de Stapledon, the founder, painted and presented in 1789 by the Rev. W. Peters, R.A.; an old portrait of the same person; others of Charles I., Sir John Acland, Sir William Petre, Mrs. Shiers, and those of other benefactors. The chapel, built, in 1624, has eight windows, all bearing this inscription:—DOMVS. MEA. DOMVS. ORATIONIS. The library contains a valuable collection of the classics. In 1834 the whole front was renewed with Bath stone by Mr. Plowman, builder, of this city, under the direction of Mr. Underwood. The three oriel windows in this front are much admired. The garden is pleasantly laid out, and although in a central part of the city, is open to the east, where a terrace commands a view of some of the principal buildings of the University.

Oriel College, founded by Edward II. in 1226, at the suggestion of Adam de Brome, his almoner, is situated in St. Mary's Hall lane, and consists of one quadrangle, which was finished about the year 1640, on the north side of which are the provost's lodgings, on the east the hall and entrance to the chapel, and on the south and west are the rooms of the fellows and students. In 1818 a considerable addition was made to this college by the erection of a handsome stone building, which contains fifteen sets of rooms for members of the society, built at the south end. Opposite to the gate-house, bearing the arms of Charles I., is the hall, which was built in 1637, and in 1826 and again in 1838 it was repaired, the porch of which is ascended by a flight of steps; over the porch are statues of the Virgin Mary, and of Edward II. and III., in canopied niches. In the hall are portraits of Edward II. on his throne, by Hudson; Queen Anne, by Dahl; the Duke of Beaufort, by Soldi; and Bishop Butler. Two very curious ancient cups belong to this hall, one given by the founder, and the other by John Carpenter, Bishop of Worcester, in 1476. The east window of the chapel contains the Presentation of Christ in the Temple, by Peckitt, of York. Northward of the quadrangle is the garden court, at the end of which is the library, built by Wyatt in 1788, one of the best examples of the Ionic order in Oxford. Under the library is the common room.

Queen's College was founded in 1340 by Robert de Eglesfield, confessor to Philippa, Queen of Edward III., from whom the name of it is derived. The queens of this kingdom are considered to be the patronesses of this college. This edifice is situated opposite to University College, and its southern front adds greatly to the fine effect of the High street. It is chiefly admired as contributing to the pleasing variety of style which is so conspicuous in the architecture of the buildings of this University. It was completed in 1759, from designs by Hawkesmoor. Over the entrance in the centre of this front rises an open cupola, supported by columns, containing the statue of Queen Caroline, the consort of George II., Her Majesty having contributed, in 1733, £1,000 towards the erection of the southern quadrangle, which is 140 feet by 130; the entire front was renovated during the vacations of 1845 and 1846. The chapel and hall are on the northern side. The chapel is of the Corinthian order, and the ceiling, painted by Sir James Thornhill, represents the Ascension. The altar piece is a copy by Mengs of La Notte (the night), Correggio's celebrated picture in the Dresden gallery. The hall, 60 feet by 30, contains portraits of the founder, Queen Philippa, Edward the Black Prince, Henry V., Charles I. and his queen, Queen Anne, Queen Caroline, Queen Charlotte, Addison, and various others. In the gallery at the west end of the hall are portraits of six queens, given to the college by George Clarke, D.C.L.; also portraits of Edward III., Henry V., &c. The library, 123 feet by 30, contains a large orrery, two ancient portraits on glass of Henry V. and Cardinal Beaufort, portraits of Charles I., Queen Charlotte, &c. In the buttery of this college is a drinking-horn said to have been presented to the society by Queen Philippa; it is remarkable both for its antiquity and beauty; it holds two quarts, and the elegance of its form is increased by the rich silver-gilt mounting, with the word Wasseyl inscribed three times on each hoop. The members of this college are called to dinner every day by the sound of a trumpet. Another custom is that of serving a boar's head on Christmas Day, ushered into the hall with an old monkish carol. A custom of this college, of the bursar giving to each member on New Year's Day a needle and thread, saying "Take this and be thrifty," as a memorial of their founder, is merely a rebus on his name, Eglesfield, "Aiguille et fil," needle and thread, from which it is supposed to have been derived.

New College was founded in 1386, in the reign of Richard II., by William of Wykeham, Bishop of Winchester and Lord Chancellor, who also founded a college at Winchester in 1387, whence the vacancies in this are filled up. It is situated in New College lane, eastward of All Souls' College. In the quadrangle are the hall, chapel, library, and warden's apartments. A third story was added to the original building about the end of the sixteenth century, but the present uniformity of the windows was not completed till 1675. The chapel, which was completely repaired in 1789, is one of those objects which are more particularly presented to the notice of strangers visiting Oxford. The choir is 100 feet in length by 35 in width, and 65 feet high, approached by an ante chapel 80 feet in length. The painted windows are of four different eras; the great west window contains the Nativity, with the four cardinal and three Christian virtues, by Jervas, from designs by Sir Joshua Reynolds. The altar-piece consists of fifty niches, disposed in four courses over the whole east end of the chapel, and ornamented with tabernacle work of the purest character. Over the altar are five compartments of marble sculpture in alto-relievo, by Westmacott, representing the Salutation, the Nativity, the Descent from the Cross, the Resurrection, and the Ascension. One of the most curious objects in this chapel is the crozier of William of Wykeham, the founder; it is of silver, gilt and enamelled, and nearly seven feet high. Adjacent to the chapel are the cloisters, surrounding an area of 175 feet by 85 feet, which was consecrated as a burial place for the college in 1400. The garden court, built after the manner of Versailles, is terminated by an iron palisade and gates, said to have been brought from Canons, the once splendid seat of the Duke of Chandos. The garden is beautifully laid out, and commands striking views of the venerable buildings in its vicinity. In the south-eastern part is a spacious lawn, near the old city wall, with its deep bastions, which is still in perfect repair, and at the end of the lawn or bowling green is an Ionic temple.

Lincoln College was founded by Richard Flemyng, Bishop of Lincoln, in 1427; but in 1479 Thomas Scot, better known by his surname—Rotherham, Archbishop of York, became so considerable a benefactor as to be denominated a second founder. It is situated in Lincoln College lane, in the space between All Saints' Church and Exeter College, and preserves, more than most of the collegiate edifices, its original character. It consists of two quadrangles: the northern, 80 feet square, contains the hall, in which are several portraits and busts, the library, rector's lodgings, and the common rooms. In the inner court, 70 feet square, is the chapel, which was erected in 1631, at the expense of Dr. Williams, Bishop of Lincoln, and afterwards Archbishop of York. The ceiling is of cedar, embellished with the arms of the founders and principal benefactors; the screen, also of cedar, is richly carved. The windows are entirely of ancient painted glass, said to have been brought from Italy by Archbishop Williams in 1629; they are remarkable for the superior brilliancy of the colours, and are perhaps the finest in the University; the four windows on the northern side of the chapel contain the twelve prophets, and the four southern ones the twelve apostles. The eastern window is divided into six compartments, in which are represented subjects from the Old and New Testaments, viz., 1, the Creation of Man and the Nativity of Christ; 2, the Israelites Passing the Red Sea, and the Baptism of Jesus Christ; 3, the Passover, and Institution of the Lord's Supper; 4, the Brazen Serpent in the Wilderness, and Christ on the Cross; 5, Jonah issuing from the Whale, and the Resurrection; 6, Elijah in the Fiery Chariot, and the Ascension. The common room was newly fitted up in 1816; and in 1818 the whole front was repaired and improved in appearance by the introduction of appropriate Gothic windows.

All Souls' College was founded by Henry Chicheley, Archbishop of Canterbury, in 1437. Like his predecessor, Wykeham, he had amassed considerable wealth, and determined to expend it in facilitating the purposes of education. John Druell, archdeacon of Exeter, and Roger Keyes, both afterwards fellows of the college, were the architects. It is situated in the High street, westward of Queen's College, and consists chiefly of two courts. Over the gateway are statues of the founder and of Henry VI. The old quadrangle, 124 feet by 72, contains a curious dial, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, with the inscription "Pereunt et imputantur." The new or grand quadrangle, behind the former, erected by Hawksmoor, is 172 feet by 155 in dimensions, and contains the library on the north, the chapel and hall on the south, the cloister on the west, and the common room and tower on the east. The chapel, about 70 feet by 30, is separated from the ante-chapel, of the same dimensions, by a screen constructed by Sir Christopher Wren, the altar-piece, by Raphael Mengs, represents Christ appearing to Mary Magdalen, beneath the western is a marble statue of Sir William Blackstone, by Bacon. The hall contains windows a large picture of the Finding of the Law, by Sir James Thornhill, and numerous portraits, among which are those of the founders, and Henry VI., Archbishop Sheldon, Archbishop Vernon; Colonel Codrington, founder of the library, Sir William Blackstone, Sir Christopher Wren, Young, the poet, &c. Adjoining the hall are the buttery and kitchen; in the former is a bust of Giles Bennett, manciple, and another of Hawksmoor, architect; here is also a very curious ancient salt-cellar, of silver-gilt, supported by an armed figure, given to the college by a descendant of the Chicheley family. A custom is observed on 2nd November of keeping the Mallard night, when a merry old song "The swopping, swopping mallard," is always sung, in commemoration of the discovery of a very large mallard or drake in a drain when digging for the foundation of the college. The library, about 200 feet long by 33 wide, contains upwards of 60,000 volumes. A gallery is carried round three sides of the room, and over the cases are 24 busts, in bronze, of some of the most eminent fellows of the college, cast by Sir H. Cheere, in the centre is a planetarium, kept in motion by machinery, and a statue of Colonel Christopher Codrington, governor of the Leeward Islands.

Magdalen College was founded in 1456 by William of Waynflete, Bishop of Winchester, to whom the buildings of the suppressed hospital of St. John the Baptist were granted; but these being too small for the reception of the society, he resolved to enlarge them, and the foundation stone of the new college was laid in 1474, and it was completed in about seven years. Next to Christ Church, this is the largest college in the University; it is most beautifully situated at the eastern extremity of the city, its outer side being terminated by a branch of the river

Cherwell, which is crossed by Magdalen bridge, at the entrance of the High street. The extreme length of the college from north to south is 570 feet, and from east to west 380 feet, it comprises three quadrangles the principal one being cloistered and surrounded by double sets of apartments, which give it an unusual character of loftiness and magnificence. The entrance to the first court is by a modern Doric porch; but near the president's lodgings is the old gate-house, one of the most beautiful features of the college. Above the gate are two stories, having on the front four niches, two on each side of the oriel window, containing statues of Waynflete and St. Mary Magdalene, and of Henry III. and St. John the Baptist, well sculptured and in fine preservation. In the south-western angle of this court is an ancient stone pulpit, from which a sermon was annually preached on the festival of St. John, a custom long discontinued. The chapel in plain resembles the Roman letter T, the ante-chapel being a transverse building of considerable dimensions: in 1635 the interior of the chapel was fitted up according to the prevailing taste of those times; the choir was then paved with black and white marble, and in 1833 it was restored to its primitive magnificence, under the direction of Mr. Cottingham, at a cost of about 18,000*l*: the altar-piece is a very fine picture of Christ bearing the Cross, by Moralez, a Spanish artist, and over it is a sculptured representation of Christ appearing to Mary in the Garden, by Sir Francis Chantry, R.A.: the principal window represents the Last Judgment, after a design by O. Schwartz: the altar-tomb, of alabaster, of Richard Patten, father of the founder, has been lately brought to this chapel from the church of Waynflete, in Lincolnshire, the birth-place of the founder. The hall is a grand and well-proportioned room, having an oriel window on the north side near the High-place; its extreme length, including the gallery and screen, is 73 feet, and width 30 feet, the passage under the screen being 8 feet wide; here is a fine picture of St. Mary Magdalene, by Guercino, and portraits of the founder, Prince Rupert, Henry Prince of Wales, Archbishop Boulter; Dr. Sacheverell, a fellow of this college; Addison and numerous others. On the southern side of the chaplain's court is a very magnificent tower 145 feet in height, and consisting of four stories; at each angle is an octangular turret, slender, and of equal size, excepting towards the north-west, which encloses the staircase: this tower, completed in 1498, is a bold and striking feature of the college, and is remarkable for beautiful proportion, admirable simplicity, and picturesque effect: it is situated near the extremity of the south front, in the High street, and is the first grand object that meets the eye on the entrance to the University from the London-road. The great quadrangle, with its fine cloister, is formed by the chapel, hall, and library, the ancient part of the president's lodgings, and the rooms of the fellows and demies. Some of the side buttresses are surmounted by curious emblematical figures, which, as works of art, possess little merit. The new building, 300 feet in length, northward of the great quadrangle, was founded in 1783, and erected after a design by Edward Holdsworth, M.A. The Water Walk, on the banks of the Cherwell, is kept in excellent order, and commands a variety of interesting objects, part of it is called Addison's Walk. The grove, supposed to have been formed in the reign of Elizabeth, contains some of the largest elms in Oxford. Here are also a number of deer.

Brasenose College was founded in 1509 by William Smyth, Bishop of Lincoln, and Sir Richard Sutton, of Prestbury, in Cheshire; its appellation was derived from the circumstance of its standing on the ground formerly occupied by Brasenose Hall. This college is situated on the western side of Ratcliffe-square, and consists of two quadrangles. The gate-house is worthy of notice, for the exceeding purity of the style and elegance of the enrichments. Over the entrance to the hall are two very ancient busts of King Alfred and John Scot Frigena, the former discovered when the foundation of the college was made. The hall has a very fine bay-window at the upper end, filled with painted glass, and contains portraits of the founders, King Alfred, Sarah, Duchess of Somerset, Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, Dr. Burton (author of "Anatomy of Melancholy"), several of the principals of the college and others. In the lesser quadrangle are the library and chapel: the library, rebuilt in 1780, contains a fine bust of the Right Hon. Lord Grenville, Chancellor of the University from 1809 to 1833, by Nollekens. The chapel has been lately repaired: in the east window, the gift of Principal Cawley, is a representation of Christ and the Four Evangelists, executed by Pearson, in 1776, from a painting by Mortimer: in the ante-chapel are monuments of Dr. Shippen; of Bishop Claver, by Bacon: of Dr. Hodson, by Manning: and of the Rev. H. Cholmondeley, Dean of Chester, by Sir Francis Chantrey.

Corpus Christi College was founded in 1516, by Richard Fox, Bishop of Winchester, and Lord Privy Seal in the reign of Henry VIII., and is situated on the western side of Oriel College. The quadrangle, 101 feet by 80 in dimension, has in the centre a curious cylindrical dial, designed by Charles Turnbull, a fellow of this college, in 1605. The gate-house is enriched with a very fine bay-window and three canopied niches. A statue of the founder is on the south side of the quadrangle, and on the same side is the library, containing a remarkably fine collection of curious printed books and manuscripts. In the chapel are several monuments to distinguished members of the college; the screen is of cedar, on which are carved figures of the Evangelists; the altar-piece is a fine picture by Rubens, representing the Adoration, presented to the college in 1804 by Sir Richard Worsley, Bart.; it originally belonged to the Prince of Conde, and cost Sir Richard 2,500*l*. The hall, on the eastern side of the quadrangle, is 50 feet by 25, and contains various portraits, among which are those of Lord Tenterden, and of Thomas Burgess, Bishop of Salisbury, both scholars of this college. The fellows' building was erected in 1706, on the site of the old cloisters; the front 119 feet in extent, is of the Ionic order and much admired for its chaste style of architecture; it is opposite to Christ Church-walk. A very curious cup, of silver gilt and enamelled, is preserved here; it bears the initials of the founder, and the pelican, his badge, frequently repeated; his crozier, about six feet in height, of silver gilt, although upwards of 300 years old, is in the highest state of preservation; and other articles of great rarity are also preserved here. When the allied sovereigns visited this University in 1814, the King of Prussia resided in the lodgings of the president.

Trinity College, situated in Broad-street, was originally founded by Edward III., Richard II., and the Priors and Bishops of Durham. Being merged with religious houses, it was suppressed at the Reformation. In 1554 Sir Thomas Pope, Knt., of Tittenhanger, Hertfordshire, began and endowed a new foundation for a president, twelve fellows, and twelve scholars. There is also a scholarship founded by Richard Blunt, Esq., of the city of London; an exhibition, called the Unton Pension, given by Thomas Unton, of Drayton, Shropshire, in 1693: a second, called the Tylney Exhibition, granted by Frederick Tylney, Esq., of the county of Hants, in the year 1720; and a third by the Rev. Edward Cobden, D.D., Archdeacon of London.

St. John's College, founded in 1555, fronts towards St. Giles'-street, and stands on the site of St. Bernard's College of Cistercian monks, which had been founded by Archbishop Chicheley in 1437. In a niche of the gatehouse the statue of St. Bernard yet remains. The front and southern side of the first court are parts of the original structure, the eastern side of this quadrangle, built in 1597, is partly occupied by the president's lodgings. The chapel, on the northern side of the first court, was erected in 1530, but repaired by the founder of St. John's, Sir Thomas White, alderman and merchant tailor, of London. The college consists of a president, fifty fellows, and one chaplain, an organist, choristers, &c. All the fellows, excepting six of the founder's kin, two from Coventry, two from Bristol two from Reading, and one from Tunbridge school, are elected from Merchant Taylors' School in London. The visitor of the college is the Bishop of Winchester. The principal part of the inner quadrangle was built at the expense of Archbishop Laud, and completed in 1635, after a design by Inigo Jones. In the central compartment of each of the eastern and western sides is the statue of Charles I. and his queen, Henrietta Maria, by Fannilli. The library, on the southern side of this quadrangle, has a bust of Charles I. over the entrance of the first room, the large window at the end of which is enriched with the arms of the Merchant Taylors' Company, and various benefactors of the college, and in a window near it are the arms of the Archbishop of Canterbury; in this room is also a fine portrait of Archbishop Laud, by Vandyke. The hall contains portraits of the founder, Archbishops Laud and Juxon, of several learned members of the college, and of George III., by Ramsay. The garden is the best specimen of modern gardening in the city of Oxford, and presents a great contrast to the formal taste which preceded the present style; the southern walks of the garden are bounded by the buildings of Trinity College.

Jesus College, founded in 1571, is situated opposite to Exeter College, and consists of two quadrangles: the first contains the chapel, on the northern side, and the hall on the western. Over the entrance to the chapel is the motto "Ascendat oratio, descendat gratia." In the hall are portraits of Queen Elizabeth, Charles I., many benefactors, and John Nash, the architect. The college was founded by Dr. Hugh Price, to whom Queen Elizabeth granted a charter in 1571; the endowment has since been increased by other benefactors, amongst whom was Charles I. The college consists of a principal, nineteen fellows, eighteen scholars, and several exhibitioners. The hall, a handsome well proportioned room, was repaired and improved in 1818. The Earls of Pembroke are the hereditary visitors.

Wadham College, founded in 1613, is in the northern suburbs of the city, near the parks. The entrance to the quadrangle is by a gate-house, opposite to which is a porch, embellished with statues of James I., and of Nicholas Wadham, the founder, and his lady, who was the daughter of Sir William Petre, Secretary of State. Dr. Wills, warden, who died in 1806, was a munificent benefactor to this college; he left £400 a year to the wardenship, £1,000 to improve the warden's lodgings, £100 a year for a law exhibition to a fellow, £20 a year for a law exhibition to a scholar, £100 a year for a medical exhibition to a fellow, £20 a year for a medical exhibition to a scholar, 30 guineas annually to a divinity lecturer and preacher, £75 to one superannuated fellow, and £50 a year to a second, and appointed the college his residuary legatee. The college consists of a warden, fifteen fellows, and fifteen scholars. The hall and chapel are on the eastern side of the quadrangle; in the great window of the hall are the arms and badges of James I., and the arms of the principal benefactors of the college, beautifully and skilfully executed in stained glass, by Willement; in the oriel window are the arms of eminent persons educated at Wadham College. In the hall are preserved several very fine portraits. The chapel contains a fine eastern window of stained glass, representing subjects from the Old and New Testaments, by Bernard Van Linge; in the northern window are figures of the prophets, and in the southern figures of Jesus Christ and His apostles. The garden of this college is on the northern side of the chapel, and beyond are the parks, fine open walks kept up by the University.

Pembroke College was founded in 1620 by Thomas Teasdale and Richard *Wightwick, and consists of a master, fourteen fellows, and twenty-six scholars and exhibitioners. The college obtained its name from the Earl of Pembroke, Chancellor of the University at the foundation. It is situated near St. Aldate's church, and contains two quadrangles, which have lately been rebuilt; and in the years 1845 and 1846 the college was much improved by the addition of a western wing, about 150 feet in extent.

Worcester College, founded in 1714, stands near the river and canal, at the western extremity of the city. The foundation consists of a provost, twenty-one fellows, sixteen scholars, and three exhibitioners. The eastern front of the principal buildings comprises the hall, library, and chapel.

There are five halls in the University, which are not endowed with estates as colleges are, although some of them have exhibitions for the maintenance of students—Alban Hall, adjoining Merton College; St. Edmund Hall, in New College street; St. Mary Hall, northward of Oriel College; New Inn Hall, on the west side of the North Bailey; and St. Mary Magdalen Hall, on the site of Hertford College, northward of All Souls' College.

At the extremity of the churchyard of St. Mary, towards St. John's College, has been erected the Martyrs' Memorial,—a monumental cross, to commemorate the sufferings of Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, in 1555 and 1556: this cross resembles those erected by Edward I. to the memory of Queen Eleanor, bearing resemblance to that of Waltham, although on a more extensive scale,—the Memorial cross being 73 feet in height, including its basement of steps, whereas that of Waltham does not exceed 45.

ROTHERFIELD GREYS

Is a large parish, extending six miles from the Thames to Nettlebed. The village is 3 miles south-west-by-south from Henley-upon-Thames, and 7½ from Reading, in the hundred of Binfield, union of Henley, and diocese of Oxford.

The church is a small ancient structure, and has a small belfry of wood containing three bells: in the interior is a very handsome brass to the memory of John de Grey, bearing date 1387; and in a chapel on the north side of the chancel is a magnificent monument, erected in 1605 by William Earl of Banbury, to the memory of a branch of the Knollys family; beneath a canopy, supported by black marble pillars, are the effigies of Sir Francis Knollys and his lady, by the side of whom is an infant; on the two sides, in a kneeling position, are represented their seven sons and six daughters, and the Countess of Banbury, their daughter-in-law. The living is a rectory, annual value £800, with residence, in the patronage of Trinity College, Oxford. The Hon. and Rev. Sir Francis Jarvis Stapleton, Bart., (who is lord of the manor), Lord Camoys, H. Baskerville, Esq., and Mr. Alfred Piercy, are chief owners of the soil. At Greys Green is a charity school, supported principally by subscription and a small endowment. Greys Court, the seat of the Hon. and Rev. Sir Francis Jarvis Stapleton, Bart., is a fine old mansion, situated in a well wooded park, stocked with deer: the house stands on the site, and is a part of a stately and spacious fortified residence, erected in the reign of King John by the Archbishop of York, for his nephew John de Grey: in the pleasure grounds are some very interesting ruins of this once stately residence: four of the towers are still in good preservation. The church of Holy Trinity was erected about twelve years back, and cost about £3000, raised by private subscription, when a district was formed on the Henley side of the parish. The living is a perpetual curacy, annual value £120, in the gift of the Bishop, and held by the Rev. William Philip Pinckney, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is a National school in connection with the church.

The population in 1861 was 1,629; the acreage is 2,910.

HIGHMOOR is an ecclesiastical district, situated in the western part of the parish of Greys, including a small portion of the parish of Bix; it is  $2\frac{1}{4}$  miles from Greys church, and  $4\frac{1}{2}$  from Henley-upon-Thames.

The church of St. Paul is a small structure in the Early English style, consisting of nave and chancel; it was erected, together with the parsonage house, solely at the expense of the Rev. Joseph Smith, B.D., the previous rector of this parish, and was opened for divine service in 1859. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the rector of Greys; the Rev. Horace George Monro, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, is the incumbent. Here is a National school in connection with the church.

SANDFORD

Is a village and parish, 7 miles from Woodstock, half a mile from West-cot Barton, and 2 miles from Great Tew, in the hundred of Wootton, union of Woodstock, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Martin was restored by the care of the present incumbent, the Rev. Thomas Curme, in 1845, and consists of nave, chancel, aisles, south porch, and western embattled tower. A lych gate has lately been placed at the north-west corner of the churchyard. The nave has Transition Norman arches in the north aisle, and Early English in the south; the clerestory has perpendicular windows; the south aisle is Transition from Decorated to Perpendicular; the east chancel window, which has been preserved, is of the same character; the pews are all open. It contains a handsome modern carved stone pulpit. The chancel has been rebuilt and adorned with a handsome painted window at the cost of Edwin Guest, Esq., D.C.L. The living is a vicarage, to which the Duke of Marlborough has one turn of presentation in three, and the Rev. E. Marshall has the other two; it is of the annual value of £200, with residence. There is a National and Infant school. Sandford Park, the residence of Edwin Guest, Esq., D.C.L., J.P., Master of Caius College, Cambridge, and the Manor House, the residence of the Rev. Edward Marshall, M.A., are the principal seats. M. P. W. Boulton, Esq., and Mr. Henry Painter, are the lauded proprietors.

SOULDERN

Is a parish, in the hundred of Ploughley, union of Bicester, and diocese of Oxford, seven miles from Bicester, seven miles from Banbury, and one mile and a half from the Aynho station.

The church of St. Mary is a stone structure of various styles of architecture; the tower is Early Norman, having walls of considerable thickness, but inclines from the perpendicular: the nave has a clerestory, and is separated from the south aisle by three pointed arches resting on round columns; the windows of the aisle are elaborate specimens of Early Decorated work; the porch and the aisle to which it opens have each a pointed arched doorway: the chancel is modern. The living is a rectory, value £550, with residence, in the gift of St. John's College, Cambridge. The river Cherwell bounds the parish on the west, but is a mile and a half from the village, which is pleasantly situated on the south side of Aynho Park. There are quarries of plank stone in and adjoining the parish. William, Duke of Suffolk, killed in 1449, held, with Alice his wife, a portion of the lands. Wordsworth, the poet, was a constant visitor here during the incumbency of his college friend the late Rev. Robert Jones, and here he composed his sonnet "On a Parsonage in Oxfordshire, i.e. on Souldern rectory. Some Saxon remains, consisting of urns, brass straps, and bone ornaments, have been dug up in the neighbourhood, and are in the possession of Sir H. Dryden. There is a school, with an endowment of £50 per annum, and an excellent house. There are charities of the annual amount of about £30. The principal landed proprietors are R. S. Cox, Esq., of Broxwood Court, Herefordshire, the lord of the manor; W. C. Cartwright, Esq., of Aynho, Henry Westcar, Esq., of Esher, Surrey, and others.

The population 1861 was 587: the acreage is 1,451. The soil is fertile, clay and loam near the Cherwell, sand and stone brash on the high ground, divided into arable and pasture.

STEEPLE ASTON

Is a parish and pleasant village, in the hundred of Wootton, union of Woodstock, and diocese of Oxford, 7 miles north from Woodstock, 13 from Oxford, and 4 from Deddington.

The church of St. Peter is of mixed architecture: it consists of nave, chancel, aisles, north chantry chapel, south porch, western embattled tower containing six bells and a clock: the interior is handsome; the pews are of carved oak: in the chapel is a splendid monument to Judge and Lady Page, the former notorious for his arbitrary conduct to prisoners, mentioned by Pope in a sharp satire: J. Lechmere, Esq., has recently presented an organ to the parish; there is an ancient embroidered reredos and altar frontal, 4ft. 3in. high, and 5ft. 2in. long, which was on view in the 'lent' department at Kensington Museum. The living is a rectory, annual value £582, with residence, in the gift of Brasenose College, Oxford. There is a National school and a Wesleyan chapel. A Friendly Society is held here, consisting of more than 200 members, and having a capital of upwards of £1,000. Charles Cottrell Dormer, Esq., is lord of the manor; and C. C. Dormer, John Lechmere, William Wing, G. A. Davis, and Edmund Creek (of Upper Heyford), Esqrs., Brasenose, Balliol and New Colleges, Oxford, and the Great Western Railway Company, are landowners here.

The population in 1861 (including Middle Aston) was 736: the area is 1,870 acres of wood, arable and pasture land. The soil is oolitic, stone brash, the meadows in the Cherwell valley being deep rich alluvial land: the arable land bears superior crops of barley, turnips and mangold wurtzel: the crops of wheat and oats do not reach the average of this country, but for sheep the land is esteemed very healthy and suitable.

MIDDLE ASTON is a township of Steeple Aston, from which place it is distant one mile north, and is composed of two farms and a few cottages.

SWINBROOK

Is a village and parish, 2 miles east from Burford, on the banks of the river Windrush, in the hundred of Chadlington, union of Witney, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary stands on a gentle acclivity: there are stalls with carved seats in the chancel, which is the burial place of the Fettiplace family, and contains monuments and sepulchral brasses to their memory for several generations; two of the monuments, erected in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, are remarkable for their singularity of design: Hugh Curwen, who exchanged the Archbishopric of Dublin for the Bishopric of Oxford, died at Swinbrook in 1568, and was buried in this church: the chancel has recently been restored. The living is a perpetual curacy, annexed to the rectory of Widford, joint annual value £200, in the gift of Lord Redesdale. The Fettiplace family founded and endowed several charitable institutions, among which is the Free School, built in 1716. Here are charities of £13 yearly for bread, £8 distributed in money, £12 for clothing, £6 for green coats, 15s. per quarter to five widows: this parish is also entitled to send two boys to Christ's Hospital school, London: here is also a fund for supporting an Endowed School.

The population in 1861 was 191; the acreage is 1,140.

THAME

THAME is a market town, railway station, parish, and centre of a union, in the hundred of its own name, and diocese of Oxford, near the borders of Buckinghamshire, situated on the south side of the river Thame, which enters the county at this place. It is 45 miles from London, 13 from Oxford, 16 from Wychmbe, and 10 from Aylesbury. Thame is of Roman origin, and was a place of some importance at the beginning of the tenth century, when Wulfhere, king of Mercia, granted a charter to the vill called Thama; and in the year 970 Osketyl, Archbishop of York, died here. Like Aylesbury, it also suffered severely from the incursions of the Danes at the commencement of the eleventh century. The manors and abbey of Thame were held by the Bishops of Lincoln (by whom the present church was erected) from the earliest existence of that see until the dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII., when they were granted successively to Somerset the Protector, and Sir John (afterwards Lord) Williams, from whom the present noble families of Abingdon and Wenman are descended. Besides the townships or hamlets distinguished as Old Thame, New Thame, and Priestend—which are only continuations of the town itself—Thame has three hamlets, MORETON, NORTH WESTON, and THAME PARK, situated about a mile distant from it. The town itself consists principally of one broad and spacious street of considerable length, with a market place nearly in the centre, over which is the Market Hall. The weekly market is held on Tuesday: there are good supplies of cattle and corn; for the latter is a sample not a pitched market. Annual fairs are held on Easter Tuesday, the Tuesday before Whit-Sunday, the first Tuesday in August for horses, cattle, pigs, &c., and a statute fair on the 11th October, which is continued on the two following days, for hiring servants.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a large and handsome structure chiefly in the Early English style, built in the form of a cross, and consists of nave, two aisles, north and south transepts, and a spacious chancel; from the intersection of the nave and transept rises a massive square embattled tower, in the centre of which is a small vane and cross: on the south side the church is entered through a stone porch of great beauty, with groined ceiling, over the doorway of which is a chaste and elegant niche, in which was formerly an image of the Virgin Mary: the nave is divided from the aisles by columns and pointed arches, and in the transepts and chancel are many monuments and memorials both of beauty and interest, but from the greater part of them the brasses and inscriptions have been torn away and defaced; the most striking monument is that to the memory of Lord Williams above-mentioned and his first wife, which is a massive altar tomb of marble, standing in the very centre of the chancel, and surrounded with an iron railing, the points of which are gilt; upon it rest the effigies of the deceased, attired in the costumes of the reign of Elizabeth; their heads repose on cushions, and the feet of his lordship rest upon a greyhound, whilst her ladyship's are placed upon an unicorn ; the sides of the tomb are richly adorned with the armorial distinctions of Lord Williams' own family, and of those with which he was connected : there are also monuments to Geoffrey Dormer ; Sir John Clerke, who is described as having taken prisoner Louis of Orleans, Duke of Longueville, in the fifteenth year of Henry VIII. ; and to other families once of importance in the county : on the outside of one of the lancet windows in the chancel is a carving in stone of the arms of Adrion Barwis, prebendary of Thame in 1480 ; and in a small medallion of stained glass in the altar window are represented the arms of Lord Weymouth. The register dates from 1600. The living is a vicarage, annual value about £204, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Dr. Slater ; the Rev. James Prosser, M.A., of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, is the incumbent.

Near the church are the remains of the old Prebendal House, now the residence of Thomas James Clifford, Esq. ; a large refectory is still visible, and the chapel is also preserved, but used only as a lumber room : some other ruins, which evidence considerable former grandeur, form a picturesque ornament to the house and grounds.

There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists.

A Free Grammar school was founded by Lord Williams at his death, and was soon after erected ; it has numbered among its alumni many distinguished scholars and eminent men, amongst whom may be mentioned the Lord Chief Justice Holt ; Ingoldsby ; Sir George Croke, Chief Justice of the King's Bench ; Pocock, the orientalist ; George Hetheridge, the celebrated Hebraist and Greek scholar. The town and school claim the distinction of having been the place of the birth and education of the celebrated John Hampden, but it is not authenticated that Thame was the birth-place of that individual, though he certainly died here, at a house till lately the 'Greyhound Inn,' whither he was brought home mortally wounded from the engagement with the King's forces at Chalgrove Field. John Wilks, another celebrated patriot, was also educated at this school. The first trustees of this school transferred their powers by indenture, dated the 1st day of August, in the seventeenth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, to the Wardens and Fellows of Wykeham, now New College, Oxford, and on the mastership of the school becoming vacant that college nominates two persons to the Earl of Abingdon, who, as descendant of the founder, makes the election. A charity school, was also established by the second Earl of Abingdon, the funds of which are merged in the present National school, independent of which there are a British and Infant school, and a thriving church school at Moreton.

Besides an almshouse for five poor men and one woman, being decayed tradespeople of the town, and a fund for apprenticing four poor boys, there are several benefactions of various small sums, amounting to £160 per annum, which are chiefly distributed in bread and clothing to the poorest inhabitants, under the superintendence of the clergymen and churchwardens.

The employment of the population is purely agricultural, and the land partakes in some degree of the richness and fertility of the celebrated Vale of Aylesbury, to which, on its eastern confines, it adjoins.

The only proprietor's seat in the immediate neighbourhood is Thame Park, the residence of the Right Hon. the Baroness Wenman, which was once the site of a Cistercian monastery.

In the year 1829 a gold coin of the Roman emperor Honorius, of the size of half a guinea, in a most perfect state, was found in a field adjoining the town.

The Union Workhouse is a large building of red brick at Priestend, and is constructed for the reception of 450 inmates. The union comprises the following places :—Adwell, Albury, Ascot, Aston Rowant, Attington, Brill (Bucks), Chalgrove, Chilton (Bucks), Chilworth, Crowell, Dorton (Bucks), Draycot, Easington, Emmington, Great Haseley, Great Milton, Ickford (Bucks and Oxon), Kingsey (Bucks and Oxon), Lachford and Lobb, Lewknor, Little Haseley, Little Milton, Long Crendon (Bucks), Oakley (Bucks), Rofford, Rycote, Shabbington (Bucks), Shirburn, South Weston, Stoke Talmage, Sydenham, Tetsworth, Thame, Thomley, Tiddington, Towersey (Bucks), Warpsgrove, Waterperry, Waterstock, Wheatfield, Worminghall.

The County Court is held monthly; the following is a list of parishes within its jurisdiction:—Adwell, Albury, Ascot, Aston Rowant, Attington, Brill, Chalford, Chalgrove, Chearsley, Chilton, Chilworth, Chinnor, Crowell, Dorton, Draycot, Easington (Oxon), Easington (Bucks), Emmington, Haddenham, Haseley (Great), Haseley (Little), Henton, Ickford, Ilmire, Kingsey, Kingston Blount, Latchford, Lewknor, Lobb, Long Crendon, Milton (Great), Milton (Little), Moreton, North Weston, Oakley, Priestend, Postcomb, Pyrton, Rofford, Rycote, Shabbington, Shirburn, South Weston, Stoke Talmage, Sydenham, Tetsworth, Thame, (Old and New), Thame Park, Thomley, Tiddington, Towersey, Tythrop, Warpsgrove, Waterperry, Waterstock, Watlington, Wheatfield, Worminghall. The population of the town and hamlets in 1861 was 3,245; the acreage is 5,310.

WATLINGTON, with Christmas Common.

WATLINGTON is a small town at the foot of the Chiltern Hills, 8 miles from Thame, and 7 north-east from Wallingford, in the hundred of Pyrton, union of Henley, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary is a very ancient building, in mixed styles of architecture. The living is a vicarage, value £220, with residence, in the gift of Thomas Shaen Carter, Esq. There is a chapel for Wesleyans and Independents. There are two endowed schools for boys and girls, conducted upon the National system. Watlington Park is the seat of Thomas Shaen Carter, Esq. There are two statute and pleasure fairs here on the Saturday before and the Saturday after old Michaelmas Day.

The petty sessions are held here every alternate Saturday in a large room over the police station, a brick building, erected in 1860. There is an ancient building in the centre of the town, erected by Thomas Stonor, Esq., in 1644, known as the Town Hall. An old malt-house in the High street was a few years since converted into a roomy lecture-hall, with committee rooms, for the benefit of the town, by the Watlington Temperance Society. A great quantity of pillow thread lace is made here. There are several charities, of the annual value of £102. Thomas Shaen Carter, Esq., and the Rev. William P. Hutton are lords of the manor.

The population in 1861 was 1,938; the acreage is 3,440. The soil is chalk and clay.

CHRISTMAS COMMON is a hamlet in the parish of Watlington, situated on the top of one of the Chiltern Hills. From its elevated position it is considered peculiarly healthy. It is one mile and a half from Watlington.

WHITCHURCH

Is a long village and parish, on the declivity of a hill, on the banks of the Thames, partly in the county of Berks, on the south of the river Thames, but principally in the county of Oxford, on the north of the river Thames,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Reading, 22 from Oxford, 10 from Henley, 10 from Wallingford, and 45 from London, in the union of Bradfield, hundred of Langtree, rural deanery of Nettlebed, and archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford. This beautifully situated village is surrounded by woodland hills, with the Thames gliding majestically underneath, separating the village from Pangbourne, in the county of Berks. A light bridge crosses the Thames ; it was built in 1793 of oak, with a balustrade on each side, and rebuilt in 1853.

The church of St. Mary is Gothic, with parts Norman, was restored and enlarged in 1858, and consists of a nave and north aisle ; the chancel is separated from the nave by a fine lofty arch ; it has a tower and spire, with five bells. There are several tablets to the Lybbe, Powys, and Gardiner families. All the windows except two are of stained glass ; the organ is a large and excellent instrument, by Gray and Davison of London. The earliest date of the parish register is 1598. The living is a rectory, annual value about £500, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford. At the upper part of the village is a Free school for boys and girls ; the number of children is about 90 ; it was founded by Samuel Gardiner, Esq., in the year 1817, and is supported by subscription. There are several charities connected with the parish, for the yearly purchase of fuel, great coats and red cloaks for the poor settled and resident in the parish. Combe Lodge, in the possession of Samuel W. Gardiner, Esq. (who is lord of the manor), is a large mansion of the Ionic order ; it is protected on the north by thickly planted trees, and commands some fine prospects on the south. Hardwick House, as early as the reign of Richard II., belonged to the family of the Hardwicks, from whom it took its name, then to the Lybbe family ; in this family it continued for 200 years, until 1730, when it passed, on the marriage of Isabella, heiress of Richard Lybbe, Esq., to Philip Powys, Esq., youngest son of Sir Thomas Powys, of Lilford, Salop, into the family of the present possessor ; it underwent repair soon after the restoration of Charles II., in consequence of the dilapidations during the time of the civil wars ; in 1839 it also underwent considerable repairs, when it was restored to its original character ; the woods surrounding it are very beautiful.

The population in 1861 was 857 ; the acreage is 2,070.

The church of St. Giles is mostly of the Early English period, and consists of a nave and aisles, with chancel of decorated work, the windows of which are of very beautiful design and execution: it has a tower, with an embattled parapet. The living is a rectory, net annual value £400, with residence, in the gift of the Principal and Fellows of Jesus Collage, Oxford. Here is a dissenting place of worship, and a Parochial school. Extensive Roman remains have been found in this parish: in 1824 the site was only partially uncovered, and a chamber of semi-octagonal form, measuring 20 feet by 14 feet, was discovered, the pavement of which was of small tesserae of four colours—white, yellow, blue, and red: the walls of this chamber were remaining to the height of about two feet above the pavement, and were one foot below the surface of the soil: on the south-south-east side were the remains of an inferior room or court, measuring 20 feet by  $17\frac{1}{2}$  feet, the pavement of which was of a coarser kind; beneath this pavement was a small skeleton; among the relics found were an ivory or bone pin, four inches in length, and some small copper coins.

The population in 1861 was 338; the area of the parish is about 1,780 acres of rich and undulating red soil.

WITNEY.

WITNEY is a market town, railway station, and head of a poor law union, in the hundred of Bampton, and diocese of Oxford, 6 miles west from Bampton, 11 north-west-by-north from Oxford, and 65 from London, on the river Windrush, over which is a stone bridge three arches, erected in 1832. The town—consisting chiefly of two streets, the principal one being upwards of a mile in length—has long been celebrated for the manufacture of blankets, which trade though now divided with many other places gives employment to a large portion of the population. The water of the river Windrush is said to possess peculiar qualities, which contribute to the whiteness and softness of the blankets manufactured here. Other woollen goods are made at Witney; also gloves, and there is a large brewery. There is a Town Hall, the lower part of which is used for the market, held on Thursdays.

The corn exchange, erected in 1863 by a public company, at a cost of £2,500, is a handsome stone structure, standing in the Market-place: the basement contains several spacious rooms, and the Market Hall, where the business is transacted: in the upper part of the building is a fine public hall, with offices, retiring rooms, where assemblies, balls, and exhibitions take place, and meetings of the town and neighbourhood are held.

The Market Cross was built in 1683, by William Blake, Esq., of Cogges.

Fairs are held on Thursday in Easter week, Thursday after July 9th, Thursday after August 24th, Thursday following the first Sunday after September 8th, Thursday before October 10th, and Thursday after December 1st, for cattle and cheese.

There are two admirable institutions in the town. The Natural History and Literary Society, and the Athenæum. The lectures in connection with each of these societies, held at the Corn Exchange, are most numerously attended, and are of first-class order.

The County Court, in Bridge-street, is a neat and elegant structure, with an ample hall for the hearing of cases. The district comprises the following places:—Alvescott, Asthall, Asthally, Aston, Bampton, Black Bourton, Brighthampton, Brize Morton, Broadwell, Broughton Poggs, Burford, Chimney, Cogges, Cote, Crawley, Curbridge, Ducklington, Eynsham, Filkins, Hailey, Handborough Long, Handborough Church, Hardwicke, Holwell, Kencot, Lew, Minster Lovel, Northleigh, Northmoor, Osney Hill, Ramsden, Shilton, Shifford, Signet, Southleigh, Standlake, Stanton Harcourt, Swinbrook, Taynton, Upton, Weald, Westwell, Widford, Wilcot, Witney, Yelford.

The Police Station is near the church: it is a handsome building, and was erected in 1860, at the cost of £2,500.

There is a cemetery at the extremity of Corn-street, with a residence or lodge for the sexton and two neat chapels, one for the Established Church and the other for Dissenters.

Witney Union comprises the following places:—Alvescott, Asthall, Bampton, Black Bourton, Brices Lodge, Brighthampton, Brize Norton, Broadwell, Broughton Poggs (partly in Gloucester), Burford, Chimney, Clanfield, Coats and Aston, Cogges, Crawley, Curbridge, Ducklington, Eynsham, Filkins, Fulbrook, Hailey, Handborough, Hardwicke, Holwell, Lew, Minster Lovell, North Leigh, Northmoor, Ramsden, Shifford, Shilton, South Leigh, Standlake, Stanton, Harcourt, Stonelands, Swinbrook, Taynton, Upton and Signet, Weald, Westwell, Widford, Wilcote, Witney and Yelford.

The town is in the jurisdiction of the magistrates of the county, and its internal affairs are managed under the local Government Act. There are two bailiffs and other officers, chosen at the court leet held yearly; a court baron is also held by the Duke of Marlborough, the lord of the manor, as lessee under the Bishop of Winchester.

The church of St. Mary is a spacious and beautiful structure: it is situated at the southern extremity of the Church-green, and forms a fine object when seen in the general view of the town: in plan it is cruciform, with a tower in the centre, whence rises a lofty spire: it presents a combination of the Early and Decorated styles of English architecture, and contains many curious monuments; a chapel on the north side of the building is the burial-place of the Wenman family; the ceiling of this chapel is of carved wood, painted and thickly studded with gilt stars; in the north transept is a mural tablet in memory of Henry Box, a native of Witney, who founded and endowed the Free Grammar school here in 1663, which is limited to 30 boys born in this parish. The living is a rectory, annual value £1,290, with residence, in the patronage of the Bishop of Winchester.

The church on Wood-green was erected partly by subscription, and a sum of £500, presented by the Rev. Charles Jerram, a former rector. There are chapels for Independents, Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, and the Society of Friends.

A Free Blue-coat school, for educating, clothing and apprenticing sons of journeymen weavers, was founded and endowed by John Holloway in 1723; he also founded almshouses for six blanket weavers' widows: the same number were erected in 1828 by Mr. Townsend, of London for single women, with an allowance to the inmates of 4s. 6d. per week. There is also a National school. There are several charitable institutions.

The population of Witney township in 1861 was 2,986, and Witney parish 5,180; the acreage of Witney parish is 7,083.

CURBRIDGE is a hamlet to Witney, distant one mile and a half. There is a church and a National school. The population in 1861, 622; acres, 2,952.

HAILEY-CUM-CRAWLEY is an ecclesiastical district in the parish of Witney. The church of St. John, erected in 1761, has a nave, apse, turret and one bell: it was enlarged in 1820. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £320, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. George Crabb Rolfe, B.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. There is a National school erected in 1849. There is a small church at Crawley.

The population in 1861 was—Hailey, 1,316; Crawley, 253: the acreage is—Hailey, 2,827; Crawley, 1,116.

WOODSTOCK.

WOODSTOCK is a borough, and market and union town, 62 miles from London, and 8 from Oxford; it is in the hundred of Wootton, union and rural deanery of Woodstock, and Oxford liberty, archdeaconry and diocese. The old English monarchs had a royal palace here, and the town was known to them by the name of Woodslow, "woody place."

Here is BLENNHEIM PALACE, the seat of the Dukes of Marlborough. While residing here, Alfred the Great translated Boethius; and several statutes were enacted by a Parliament summoned here by Etheldred. The palace was rebuilt by Henry I., who, stocking the park with deer and other animals, enclosed it with a stone wall; this, according to Rouse, the historian was the first enclosed park in England: it was also the favorite residence of Henry II., who erected a bower in the woods, concealing it by means of a labyrinth, for his renowned mistress Fair Rosamond, who was the daughter of Walter Lord Clifford, of Clifford Castle, in Herefordshire, and who died in 1177: remains of the bower were to be seen in 1622, and her name is still given to a well from which flows a copious stream of the purest water. Henry VIII. made considerable additions to the palace; and the gatehouse which contained the room known as Queen Elizabeth's chamber (from the circumstance of that princess having been confined there by her sister Queen Mary), had an inscription upon it describing Henry VIII. as being its founder. The manor of Woodstock continued in the hands of the Crown until the reign of Queen Anne, who granted it to the Duke of Marlborough and his heirs for ever; the terms of the grant being that the Duke or his successors shall present to the reigning sovereign a standard of France on the 13th of August being the anniversary of the famous victory that was gained over the French and Bavarians in 1704, at the Battle of Höchstet near the village of Blenheim, on the banks of the Danube. This grant by the Queen was confirmed by the House of Commons, who by an Act of Parliament passed on the 14th March, 1705, voted £500,000 for the erection of the palace, which took place in 1715: it consists of a grand centre edifice, connected to two wings by colonnades, thus forming three sides of a great court, and was erected from the designs of Sir John Vanburgh, and is considered by many to be his masterpiece: the extreme length of the whole building is 850 feet and it covers seven acres of ground; the approach through the triumphal arch at Woodstock is one of great magnificence displaying the mansion in all its architectural splendour, whilst the lake and the bridge over it combine with the outline of the hills in the background to produce a scene of striking and unrivalled beauty; an avenue of two miles long forms the approach to the grand front from the Ditchley Gate; this road passes the column of Victory, 130 feet high, surmounted by a statue of the Duke of Marlborough; on the four sides of the pedestal are inscriptions detailing his services, and the various grants and Acts of Parliament which have been made in his favour: the garden front extends 348 feet in five portions, and displays a fine combination of architectural beauties: in the eastern and western angles of the mansion are observatories, furnished with suitable apparatus, by Ramsden: the great hall, entered from the portico on the principal front, is 67 feet high; the ceiling was painted by Sir James Thornhill, and represents Victory pointing to a plan of the battle of Blenheim, and crowning the Duke of Marlborough who is in Roman costume. Several of the apartments are hung with tapestry, on which are delineated his principal victories; others are adorned with pictures by the old masters. The Titian room and pictures were destroyed by fire in 1861. The library is 183 feet in length, and contains 17,000 volumes; it contains also a bust of the Earl of Sunderland, and a marble statue of Queen Anne, in her coronation robes, by Rysbrach: in this room are also full-length portraits of William III., Queen Anne, John Duke of Marlborough, and Sarah his Duchess, &c. In the chapel is the monument of the Duke of Marlborough by Rysbrach, comprising colossal statues of the first Duke and Duchess and their two sons, attended by Fame and History; on the base is a basso-relievo, representing the capture of Marshal Tallard at the Battle of Blenheim: a vault in this chapel contains the corpse of the Duke, who died in 1722; it was originally interred in Westminster Abbey, but on the death of his Duchess was removed here. The china gallery contains some antique specimens of porcelain. In the gardens which are very extensive, there is a fountain with river gods representing the Danube, the Nile, La Plata, and the Ganges; it was copied from one erected by command of Innocent X. at Rome. The park contains 2,700 acres; it abounds with deer, and is interspersed with much venerable timber. The lake covers a space of 250 acres, and presents an unequalled aquatic scene. The bridge over it consists of one centre and two small side arches, with rusticated abutments. The lake is formed by the river Glyme, which runs into the Evenlode, a branch of the Isis.

The church of St. Mary was chiefly rebuilt in 1785, on the site of a chantry founded by King John: a portion of the original structure still exists on the south side; it consists of nave, chancel, aisles, western tower surmounted by pinnacles and containing six bells and clock with chimes: there are four galleries and an organ. The living is a curacy annexed to the rectory of Bladen, joint annual value £400, in the gift of the Duke of Marlborough, and held by the Rev. George William St. John, M.A., of Balliol College, Oxford, and Jesus College, Cambridge.

The Town Hall was erected by the Duke of Marlborough in 1766, from designs by Sir William Chambers.

There is a free Grammar School, founded and endowed by Richard Cornwall in 1585; the master is the Rev. William Sanders, M.A., of Christ Church Oxford; the school is free to the sons of the inhabitants of Woodstock, who pay a fee of one guinea per quarter for the non-classical part of their education; scholars not on the foundation pay a fee of £5 per annum for both branches of their education.

A school, founded by Sir Robert Cocks is amalgamated with the National Schools, which were built in 1854, by subscription, on ground given by the Duke of Marlborough. Almshouses were erected in 1797 by the Duchess of Marlborough, for six poor widows. Various bequests have been left to the poor, which are distributed in money, bread, &c.

The Wesleyan Methodists, Free Methodists, and Baptists have each a place of worship here.

The leather glove trade has been carried on in Woodstock from a very remote period. Queen Elizabeth, in one of her "progresses," received gloves from the Woodstock glovers; and the University of Oxford presented James I., in 1616, "with very rich gloves" made in Woodstock; the trade has of late very much decayed; it, however, still gives employment to about 100 men and 1,500 women and girls, who are supposed to make about 350 dozen per week.

Woodstock was incorporated by Henry VI., and the charter was confirmed by Charles II., by virtue of which the corporation consists of a high steward, a mayor, recorder, town clerk, four aldermen, and sixteen common councilmen: the high steward, recorder, mayor and aldermen act as magistrates within the borough.

Tuesday is market day; the cattle and cheese fairs were formerly well attended but have ceased to be held; there is a statute on the first Tuesday in October. The voters for the borough of Woodstock consist of 45 freemen and 359 £10 householders.

The union of Woodstock comprises the following places: Barton Westcott, Begbroke, Bladen, Blenheim, Cassington, Clifton, Deddington, Dunstew, Glympton, Gosford, Hampton Gay, Hampton Poyle, Hempton, Kensington, Kiddington, Kidlington, Long Combe, Middle Aston, Nether Worton, North Aston, Over Worton, Rousham, Sandford, Shipton-upon-Cherwell, Steeple Aston, Steeple Barton, Stonesfield, Tackley, Thrup, Water Eaton, Woodstock, Woolvercott, Wootton, Worton, Yarnton.

The workhouse, which has had a new chapel, a substantial stone building, added to it, is capable of accommodating 250 persons, and was erected at an expense of 4,800. A county police station and lock-up with apartments for superintendent, two married and two single men, has been erected: it is a substantial stone building, opposite the National Schools: the force consists of an inspector and seven men.

A cemetery has been laid out adjoining the workhouse grounds, the new chapel of which is used for burials, there being no cemetery chapel.

The County Court is held monthly at the Town Hall. The following places are within its jurisdiction:—Barton Westcott, Begbroke, Blaydon, Blenheim, Cassington, Clifton, Deddington, Dunstew, Glympton, Gosford, Hampton Gay, Hampton Poyle, Hempton, Hensington, Kiddington, Kidlington, Long Combe, Middle Aston, Nether Worton, North Aston, Over Worton, Rousham, Sandford, Shipton-upon-Cherwell, Steeple Aston, Steeple Barton, Stonesfield, Tackley, Thrup, Water Eaton, Woodstock, Wootton, Worton, Yarnton.

The population in 1861 was 1,201; the acreage is 360. The Duke of Marlborough is lord of the manor of Woodstock.

WOOTTON

Is a village and parish, in the hundred of the same name, Woodstock union and diocese of Oxford, 2 miles north from Woodstock, and 10 from Oxford, situated on the Glyme, a branch of the Isis.

The church of St. Mary is a plain Gothic structure, consisting of chancel nave, north aisle, south porch, and western embattled tower containing five bells and a clock; over the south entrance there is a sundial with Latin inscription and the date 1623. The registrar dates from 1564. The living is a rectory, annual value about £800, with residence, in the gift of New College, Oxford. Here is a Free school, endowed in 1788 by Mr. Parrott for twelve boys; also one for six girls, endowed by the Rev. Mr. Lee, a late rector; and an Infant school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. A piece of land, producing £20 10s, per annum, is left for the poor; it is distributed in coal. The Duke of Marlborough, Sir Henry Dashwood, the Rev. J. C. Hawkins, J. Rowland, Esq., and Balliol and Magdalen Colleges Oxford, are landowners. The Duke of Marlborough is lord of the manor.

The population in 1861 was about 1,238, but this includes that portion of the parish which forms a part of the town of Woodstock; the acreage is 3,720. The soil is oolite; the land, principally arable, is barley land.

WROXHAM

is a parish, 3 miles from Banbury, and 25 from Oxford, in the hundred of Bloxham, union of Banbury, and diocese of Oxford.

The church of All Saints stands on elevated ground, and is in the Pointed style of architecture ; has nave, aisles, and chancel : in the latter is a stained glass window : in the chancel is a fine alabaster monument of Sir William Pope, first Earl of Downe, and Lady Anne his wife ; the figures are recumbent, and habited in the costume of the earlier part of the seventeenth century ; over the effigies is a canopy, supported on pillars of black marble ; the funeral achievement remains perfect, with escutcheon and flags, and an earl's coronet painted and gilt, in good preservation.

The church also contains monuments of several members of the north family. The date of register commences in 1548. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Balscott in this parish, joint annual value £137, in the patronage of Lieut.-Col. and Baroness North. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel here, and there is a school on the National system.

A short distance southward of the church is Wroxton Abbey, the seat of Lieut.-Col. and Baroness North ; it was built in 1618 by Sir William Pope, afterwards Earl of Downe, who was nephew of Sir Thomas Pope, founder of Trinity College, Oxford ; the mansion occupies the site of a priory, founded about 1230 by Michael Belet, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, for a prior and six canons of the order of St. Augustine ; some arches and other remains of this building are incorporated in the present structure : the hall 45 feet by 25 in dimensions, has a curious screen and gallery at the lower end, leading to some of the chambers on the upper story : the library and chapel, as well as the dining room, which contains a valuable collection of family portraits, are exceedingly interesting as specimens of the ancient domestic style of building.

The population in 1861 was 540; the acreage is 2,350.

POST OFFICE.—William Goodman, Postmaster. Letters arrive by foot post from Banbury at 9 a.m.; dispatched at 5 p.m. The nearest money-order office is at Banbury.

BALSCOTT is a chapelry of Wroxton, in the rural deanery of Deddington, archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford.

The church of St. Mary Magdalene is a small neat edifice, in the Decorated style of architecture, with a tower containing two bells; the Rev. Alfred Hooker, M.A., of Worcester College, Oxford, is the incumbent. Here is a school on the national system, and a small charity for the benefit of the poor.

The population in 1861 was 211; the acreage is 550.
